This document was prepared by the Economic Development Division in collaboration with the ECLAC subregional headquarters in Mexico and the ECLAC subregional headquarters for the Caribbean, the ECLAC offices in Bogota, Brasilia, Buenos Aires, Montevideo and Washington, D.C. and other divisions of the Commission.

There can be little doubt that the world is facing its worst crisis since the 1930s. The long build-up in uncertainty is preventing the credit markets from returning to normality, despite the efforts of monetary authorities to inject liquidity. Against this background, the recession is slowly worsening as a result of huge losses of both financial and non-financial wealth, particularly in developed countries but in emerging economies as well. This extremely negative picture is dampening expectations, and this, in turn, is giving rise to a slump in labour markets and to lower investment and consumption levels.

In response to the crisis, the countries of the American continent have unveiled various sorts of measures, which are outlined in this document. Broadly speaking, those measures aim either to restore confidence and unlock financial markets or to bolster weakened aggregate demand.

A very broad range of measures have been implemented. This is partly because the effects of the crisis vary from country to country, and the instruments required in order to deal with those effects therefore differ as well, and partly because of the differences that exist in terms of the resources at the disposal of individual countries and, hence, in their capacity for implementing initiatives of various kinds.

Initially, as may be expected in such a situation, the central banks made strenuous efforts to provide the financial systems with liquidity in an attempt to enable local credit markets to function normally, as well as to supply financing themselves to borrowers not covered by those markets. Apart from the large differences between economies in terms of their degree of monetization or the depth of their financial markets, however, the nature of the current crisis and, in particular, the plunge in confidence, call for measures of another type. Liquidity must be ensured and interest rates should be as low as possible, but greater liquidity does not guarantee an increase in the supply of credit, and a larger supply of credit does not guarantee a stronger demand for goods. Although monetary and exchange-rate policies should form part of a coherent and well-structured package of measures, fiscal policy is the most powerful instrument in these cases.

The type of fiscal policy to be applied is also important. Measures designed to raise spending levels have more potential than those based on tax cuts. The former provide a direct means of boosting demand, whereas the latter increase the private sector's disposable income and, given the prevailing level of uncertainty, a large proportion of that increase is likely to be saved rather than spent.

Even if the analysis is limited to increases in spending, there may be major differences. If spending is raised by increasing direct transfers, the impact will be greater if the transfers can be targeted on sectors which have a higher propensity to consume. Transfers of this type are, however, harder to implement in the short term and are more demanding in institutional terms than untargeted transfers.

By the same token, when measures designed to expand investment in infrastructure are used to increase spending, it must be borne in mind that not all projects have the same impact in terms of employment and demand for locally-produced inputs. In addition, timing is an extremely important factor in these cases, and a list of ready-made projects that can be executed in the short term is not always available.

It may therefore be the case that, even though tax cuts (or untargeted subsidies) may have less of a potential impact than spending increases, Governments will often prefer the former, at least in the short run. Be this as it may, insofar as possible, the preferred approach would be to prepare spending plans and to implement well-designed investment projects in order to ensure the most efficient use of public funds.

Generally speaking, the policies announced by some South American countries differ significantly in scope from those applied by some of the Central American and Caribbean nations. This is attributable, at least in part, to differences in their capacities for implementing countercyclical policies, as noted on previous occasions, and in their institutional structures for the design and application of those policies.

The following table provides an overview of the measures that have been implemented or announced in the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean. These measures are then described in greater detail in the annex. They are listed schematically in the following six categories:

- Monetary and financial policy
- Fiscal policy
- Exchange-rate and foreign-trade policies
- Sectoral policies
- Labour and social policies
- Multilateral financing

Although almost all these measures have fiscal impacts, many of them clearly target a particular sector or market or are designed to deal with social issues. In these cases, the measures are mentioned twice, as they are included under fiscal policy in order to give a clear picture of the public finance effort that is being made, and are also listed in the section corresponding to their objective.

Tripling of the central bank's credit line for local banks. Swap of secured loans to refinance Government liabilities issued in 2001. A new mortgage loan scheme was announced following an agreement with private shareholders in Banco Hipotecario to enable public-sector involvement in its management. Other measures The Federal Administration of Public Revenues (AFIP), the central bank and the National Securities Commission introduced measures to discourage the movement of private and corporate capital to tax havens and offshore banks. Financial agents may now conduct transactions only with countries that supply information on counterparts.	Tax cuts or benefits and subsidy increases Tax and pension fund moratorium covering all tax and social security liabilities payable at 31 December 2007. Reduction in employer contributions such that all firms creating or regularizing jobs pay 50% of contributions for the first year and 75% for the second. Elimination of the scheme of income tax deductions applicable to wage-earners since 2000. This measure benefits some 800,000 middle- or high-income workers. Additional payment for retirees of a fixed sum equivalent to US$ 56, to be covered by the social security administrator. One-year extension of regime of incentives for the purchase of capital goods, which lowers tariffs on imported goods and provides a 14% rebate for local manufacturers, in the form of bonds that can be used to pay taxes. Increase or early disbursement of public spending allocations Public works plan worth US$ 30.69 billion, of which US$ 19.81 billion already has structured funding, and the remainder is under negotiation. US$ 15.90 billion of that amount will be executed in 2009, more than double the figure for 2008. The public works programme will focus mostly on housing projects, hospitals, sewerage systems and roads. Other measures Unification of system under State regime: elimination of funded segment managed by retirement and pension fund management companies (AFJPs). Transfer to public sector of flow of contributions formerly collected by AFJPs, representing almost 1.5% of GDP. Transfer to public sector of assets formerly administered by pension system (some 10% of GDP, just under half of which consists of private-sector liabilities and assets held abroad). Measures to promote the declaration of assets at home and abroad and incentives to bring funds held abroad by residents into the country. 30% of Government revenues from soybean export duties to be distributed to the provinces. This measure (announced on 19 March 2009) is intended to inject funds into the provinces.	Liquidity injections in foreign currency On 30 March 2009 the central bank announced a preliminary agreement to establish a US$ 10 billion currency swap mechanism with the Central Bank of China. This will be treated as a contingency mechanism for strengthening the Argentine central bank's reserve position. The central bank announced a swap with its counterpart in Brazil for the equivalent of US$ 1.5 billion in pesos and reais. Increase in import duties and import restrictions Customs imposed tighter controls on products that are sensitive for national industry, such as textiles, footwear, metallurgical goods, white goods and motorcycles. Advance permit for imports required for a larger range of products. Reference values created and import duties raised, and procedures related to unfair trade expedited. Export financing and support Reduction in withholding tax on exports of wheat and maize: rates of export duty on wheat fall from 28% to 23%, and on maize from 25% to 20%. Additional one-point reduction for every million tons of production above the recent average. Reduction of 50% on withholding tax on exports of all fresh fruit and vegetables. Lifting of ban on exports of maize and wheat, which had been in place since June 2008. The export of 6 million tons of maize and 520,000 tons of wheat was authorized. Exchange-rate policy Greater demand-side controls over foreign currency. Sliding exchange rate with a managed floating exchange-rate regime. Other measures Alteration of rules for the purchase of public securities liquidated overseas and other interventions by the National Securities Commission, Federal Administration of Public Revenues (AFIP) and the central bank.

BOLIVIA (PLURINATIONAL STATE OF)	Legal reserve adjustments Steps have been taken to avoid the dollarization of liabilities in the financial system by increasing the Liquid Asset Requirement Fund (RAL) for additional deposits in hard currency, while leaving the provisions for local-currency deposits unchanged, and by creating additional provisions for loans denominated in foreign currency. Liquidity injections in national currency Decrease in rate of liquidity absorption through open market operations (second half of 2008). BRAZIL	Legal reserve adjustments Effective legal reserve reduced. Official banks reduced the spread between deposits and loans, as a way of inducing private banks to do the same. Liquidity injections in national currency Rediscount operations streamlined. Authorization to acquire portfolios of small and medium-sized banks (September 2008). Central bank authorized to grant loans to banks secured by loan portfolios. The Treasury authorized a US$ 43.73 billion loan to the National Bank for Economic and Social Development (BNDES); thus, the bank will have a total of US$ 72.59 billion in 2009 for business loans. This will be financed by the Treasury by using its own resources and issuing real-estate debt instruments. The long-term interest rate on these loans was lowered from 2.5% to 1% in April 2009 to reduce costs for BNDES and companies. BNDES has softened its rules for loans for investments and working capital, and increased specific financing for used work vehicles. Changes to the monetary policy rate On 21 January 2009, the central bank cut its base rate by 100 basis points (from 13.75% to 12.75%). Later, on 11 March, it cut this rate by a further 150 basis points, to 11.25%. Other measures Broader powers for the central bank to intervene in failing financial institutions. This replaces the process used by these firms until recently to raise capital, through share issues.	Tax cuts or benefits and subsidy increases The sectors worst hit by the crisis may be granted fresh tax cuts and more resources. Federal Government and some states have extended the time allowed for monthly tax payments, thus easing pressure on corporate cash flows. A series of tax cuts have been announced, totalling around US$ 3.67 billion, in order to boost consumption: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (i) The tax on financial operations will be cut from 3% to 1.5% for direct consumer credit operations and the overdraft credit line (ii) The processed products tax applicable to vehicles was temporarily cut (originally until March 2009, then for three more months up to June 2009); for the purchase of motor vehicles with cylinder capacities of up to 1,000 cc, the tax will be cut from 7% to 0%, and for those up to 2,000 cc, from 13% to 6.5% (iii) Income tax tables for physical persons were revised, introducing lower rates (7.55% and 22.5%), which favour the middle class, that is, those who earn up to US$ 875 per month. On 30 March 2009 a new fiscal covenant was announced, with additional tax cuts of over US$ 730 million. The main measures in this package refer to the industrial products tax (IPI): as well as the extension of the reduction in IPI on vehicles for three more months (to June 2009), taxes on motorcycles and 30 categories of construction materials will also be cut. In exchange for these benefits for the automobile sector, the assembly firms agreed to maintain their level of employment. In addition, a number of sectors were added to the list of priorities of the Development Agency for the Amazon Region, which benefit from an income tax exemption: pulp and paper (if they have reforestation projects), disposable materials, toys, watches and optical materials. In order to help offset the drop in takings, tax on cigarettes will be raised as of May 2009. Increase or early disbursement of public spending allocations Public investment capacity may be increased by US$ 87.46 billion in 2009. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (i) Injection of over US$ 43.73 billion to keep up consumption levels (ii) Ministries will be required to bring forward spending and ensure a parallel budget of at least US$ 11.37 billion (iii) US$ 9.18 billion earmarked for the Growth Acceleration Programme (PAC) in the 2009 budget (iv) The Government will spend the US$ 6.34 billion reserved for the Sovereign Fund on projects to maintain overall demand (v) Federal State enterprises to release at least US$ 17.49 billion in investment to help Brazilian firms that provide them with inputs and raw materials. An increase of US$ 4.15 billion was agreed in the area of Government investment, adding to the US$ 16.57 billion already planned. It was announced that US$ 2.5 billion was being released for infrastructure investments. This was funded by the Unemployment Insurance Fund (FGTS).	Liquidity injections in foreign currency Resumption of foreign exchange swap auctions in order to provide liquidity to importers. Agreement between the central bank and the United States Federal Reserve to establish a currency swap line for up to US$ 30 billion. The central bank announced its willingness to use up to US$ 3 billion in foreign-currency reserves for loans to ailing firms to refinance debts in the external market. Increase in import duties and import restrictions The Government placed a series of non-tariff restrictions on imports. Importers from 17 sectors will now have to request an import licence in advance. The main sectors affected are: wheat, plastics, copper, aluminium, iron, capital goods, electrical and electronic material, autsparts and transport material in general (this measure was temporarily suspended on 28 January 2009). Tariff reductions 306 products included in the "ex-tariff" list (mechanism that temporarily reduces tariffs on products that do not have a locally-made counterpart), which will make it cheaper to buy imported capital goods and products in the electrical, paper and pulp, graphics, medical and hospital, automobile and electronics sectors, among others. Export financing and support Use of forex reserves to finance exports, by reverse auction of bank securities to backstop foreign trade. The contracts tie in the repurchase of these instruments, thus maintaining the current level of reserves. Central bank allowed to grant foreign-currency loans directly to private banks, exclusively to finance foreign trade transactions. Extension of up to one year for businesses that benefited from the drawback scheme to demonstrate their exports. The same applies to businesses that benefited from advance exchange contracts (soft loans for exporters). In addition, income tax has been eliminated on measures to promote exports and the Government has announced an integrated drawback scheme, which will enable primary goods exporters to discount the tax paid on raw materials, in order to benefit agro-industry.

CHILE	Legal reserve adjustments Temporary relaxation of legal reserve requirement. Liquidity injections in national currency One stop 28-day and 60-90 day repo operations. Calls to bid for fiscal resources in United States dollars for local banking. Tax adjustments designed to increase liquidity and the demand for publicly offered bonds, to make them more attractive as an alternative source of financing for businesses. The costs of structuring, intermediation and issue were subsidized to encourage new medium-sized firms to use this option. Expansion of the financing facility of the Production Development Corporation (CORFO) for banking and non-banking factoring; implementation of a new CORFO facility to guarantee loan rescheduling. Changes to the monetary policy rate On 8 January 2009, the central bank cut its monetary policy rate by 100 basis points (from 8.25% to 7.25%). On 12 February 2009 it cut this rate by a further 250 basis points, bringing it to 4.75%. On 12 March another cut followed, this time of 250 basis points, taking the rate to 2.25%. The central bank continued to lower this rate, which reached a historic low of 1.25% at the start of May. The bank has indicated its intention to continue cutting the rate, if circumstances so warrant.	Tax cuts or benefits and subsidy increases Temporary increase in housing subsidy and new subsidy for middle-income housing. A fiscal stimulus plan was announced in January, totalling US$ 4 billion, equivalent to 2.8% of GDP; its purpose is to stimulate growth and employment through the application of short-term measures and structural reforms. The plan includes increased public spending, tax cuts and injections of capital. It also provides for direct, targeted incentives intended to have direct impacts on the economy. The Economic and Social Stabilization Fund will be used for the first time to finance this plan; other revenue will come from the debt issue authorized in the 2009 budget (with a maximum of US$ 3 billion) and from a reduction in the fiscal regulation target. The planned measures are as follows: (i) Stimulating investment and consumption: Stamp duty will be eliminated for all credit transactions in 2009 and the rate of that duty will be halved for the first semester of 2010 (ii) Business financing: Temporary reductions in businesses' monthly interim corporate income tax payments on the basis of their past profits. In 2009, payments by SMEs will be reduced by 15%, and those of larger businesses by 7% (iii) Individual support: Income tax rebates will be brought forward for natural persons in respect of the 2010 fiscal year. In March 2009 a payment of US$ 70 per family dependent was made available for the most vulnerable households as part of the fiscal stimulus plan. Increase or early disbursement of public spending allocations Countercyclical fiscal policy in the 2009 budget law. It is planned to broaden the Unemployment Solidarity Fund to give access to all unemployed workers, not only those with permanent contracts.

The Government proposed legislation to encourage firms to retain and train employees, by means of tax incentives and subsidies. The proposal increases employers' tax credit for spending incurred on staff training, providing they maintain the staff endowment they had in April. Alternatively, worker and employer may agree upon a special leave of absence for up to 5 months, during which the worker will not attend work, but undertake training and receive a benefit equivalent to 50% of his or her average income for the last six months, up to a ceiling of US$ 320. This benefit is paid by the firm and subsidized through unemployment insurance.

Sectoral policies

On 17 February, NAFIN announced the launch of a credit line of US$ 670 million for the automobile industry, with three pillars: first, US$ 310 million for brand lenders, which NAFIN will allocate to credit lines destined for vehicle purchases; the second, also US$ 280 million, earmarked for guarantees to back commercial bank auto loans; and third, US$ 280 million to lend to automobile distributors at preferential rates (interbank equilibrium rate plus 5%).

NAFIN indicated that it is preparing another credit line for the autoparts sector and an additional loan for distributors.

Other measures

Programme of federal support for mass transit, with an investment of US$ 1.24 billion in 2009, supported by the Growth and Employment Stimulus Programme (PICE).

The following measures will be implemented in the framework of ANFEFE:

- (i) Direct or financial support worth US$ 53 million to enable low-income families to replace their electrical appliances with new, more energy-efficient models
- (ii) NAFIN and Bancomext will increase direct and indirect financing for businesses to a total credit balance of US$ 12.46 billion
- (iii) Direct lending and credit generated by the development banking sector will rise by over US$ 8.85 billion in 2009 (an increase of over 26%)
- (iv) A new brand with the slogan "Made in Mexico" will be registered and disseminated to promote purchases of Mexican goods and services.

US$ 212 million will go to airline companies as part of the measures to offset the damage caused by the outbreak of influenza A(H1N1).

Labour and social policies

The Government will offer monthly support of up to US$ 110 for urban unemployed for four to six months providing they participate in social programmes; this will be implemented through the temporary urban employment programme. It is estimated that 60,000 urban workers will benefit from these measures.

More flexible rules were announced on 25 March 2009 for participation in the Employment Preservation Programme (or the technical stoppages programme) to make it easier for companies in the worst-hit sectors to obtain support. The following changes were introduced:

- (i) The support period was extended retroactively to November and December 2008
- (ii) The scope of the Programme was expanded to include construction, electronic products and autoparts given that these sectors have been hit particularly hard
- (iii) Companies no longer need to register with or obtain the prior approval of conciliation and arbitration boards for it to be established that they face a technical stoppage
- (iv) The Programme will no longer be limited to workers earning between 1 and 10 times the minimum wage. Companies may now choose to include up to 75% of the payroll regardless of wage levels.

In May 2009, the rules for accessing this programme were made more flexible. The main changes were: a reduction in the requirements and information requested from firms; additional support of US$ 4 per worker for as long as the epidemiological emergency lasts; the use of drop in daily sales, instead of payroll reduction, as a criterion for calculating support for each firm; and, lastly, worker retention calculated on the reference period January-February 2009.

A productivity support programme was launched to benefit 105,000 workers with short-term vocational training and provide expert technical advice to SMEs.

Social programmes

The World Bank approved a US$ 1.5 billion loan to expand the Government's "Opportunities" social programme.
