INTRODUCTION

Background

The Caribbean Information System for Economic and Social Planning (CARISPLAN) was instituted in 1979 by ECLA's Caribbean Documentation Centre in response to a mandate by member governments of the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee (CDCC). It is the first sectoral network to be established within the Caribbean Information System.

The First Meeting of Caribbean Planning Officials held in Havana in January 1979 resolved to strengthen the Caribbean Documentation Centre in its efforts to establish CARISPLAN and to link the System with INFOPLAN, the Information System for Planning in Latin America, developed by ECLA's Latin American Centre for Economic and Social Documentation (CLADES).

The objective of CARISPLAN is to facilitate Caribbean development and co-operation activities and to provide a relevant and up-to-date information service to policy-makers, planners of socio-economic development projects and programmes, managers of such projects and programmes, researchers and teachers of development planning, financiers who provide resources and technical assistance, communicators of information about these programmes, and library and information personnel.

CARISPLAN is a co-operative effort of Caribbean countries. The information units of the national planning agencies (or units designated by them) serve as the focal points. It is the responsibility of the national focal point to identify and collect the national literature relevant to the scope of the network, prepare bibliographic and analytic summaries according to an established standard, assign indexing descriptors and organize the documents for easy retrieval. The Caribbean Documentation Centre is responsible for preparing bibliographic records of documents produced by ECLA and documents relating to studies on the Caribbean in general. INTRODUCCION

Antecedentes

El Sistema de Información del Caribe para la Planificación Económica y Social (CARISPLAN) fue formado en 1979 por el Centro de Documentación del Caribe de la Comisión Económica para América Latina (CEPAL), respondiendo a un mandato proveniente de los gobiernos miembros del Comité de Desarrollo y Cooperación del Caribe (CDCC). CARISPLAN es la primera red sectorial que se establece en el contexto del Sistema de Información del Caribe.

La Primera Reunión de Funcionarios de Planificación del Caribe organizada en La Habana en enero de 1979, resolvió fortalecer el Centro de Documentación del Caribe en lo que respecta al establecimiento de CARISPLAN, y vincular el sistema con INFOPLAN, el Sistema de Información para la Planificación en América Latina, desarrollado por el Centro Latinoamericano de Documentación Económica y Social (CLADES) que pertenece a CEPAL.

El objetivo de CARISPLAN es el de apoyar las actividades de desarrollo y cooperación del Caribe, y de proporcionar un servicio de información relevante y actualizada a los ejecutivos de gobierno, planificadores de proyectos y programas de desarrollo económico, administradores de tales proyectos y programas, investigadores y profesores de planificación del desarrollo, financistas que proporcionan recursos y asistencia técnica, difusores de información acerca de estos programas, y personal de bibliotecas y centros de información.

CARISPLAN es un esfuerzo de cooperación de los países del Caribe. Las unidades de información de las agencias nacionales de planificación (o aquellas unidades designadas por estas últimas) constituyen los puntos focales. El punto focal nacional es responsable por la identificación y recolección de la literatura nacional relevante al alcance de la red de información, la preparación de bibliografías y resúmenes analíticos de acuerdo a estándares previamente establecidos, asignación de descriptors de índices, y la organización de documentos para su búsqueda más expedita. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe es responsable por bodies such as CARICOM, CDB, ECCM, WISA, research institutes specializing in Caribbean problems and international agencies operating in CDCC countries, are expected to participate in the System and to input bibliographic records relating to information which they themselves produce.

The bibliographic records of all participating centres are sent to the Caribbean Documentation Centre. The Computer output is produced by CLADES and from this CARISPLAN Abstracts is printed.

The Caribbean Documentation Centre received financial assistance from the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) to enable it to provide training and advisory services which would ensure the active participation of national centres and to produce CARISPLAN Abstracts.

CARISPLAN Abstracts is a quarterly abstracting journal designed to disseminate bibliographic information on Caribbean planning and development literature as provided by participating centres. The journal helps the user to identify existing documentation and to appraise the value of available literature and its relevance to his/her area of interest. It further helps the user to understand the present status and trends in Caribbean socio-economic development and the implication of these trends for the future. It makes a much wider range of resources available to anyone of the information components in the System. The Caribbean Documentation Centre provides a free document delivery service to Caribbean government institutions and regional organizations.

Scope

The scope of the journal is flexible, since planning is mission-oriented and draws on all sectors of economic and social activity. Publications are included if they provide information relevant to the priority areas outlined by the CDCC for development and co-operation activities. National participating centres enter the national literature which they consider relevant to the furtherance of their country's economic and social development.

la preparación de archivos bibliográficos de documentos producidos por CEPAL, y otros documentos relacionados con estudios sobre el Caribe en general. Se espera que participen en el Sistema las agencias de integración del Caribe y algunos otros organismos subregionales, tales como: CARICOM, CDB, ECCM, WISA, OECS, los institutos de investigación especializados en problemas del Caribe y las agencias internacionales que operan en los países del CDCC. También se espera que estas instituciones contribuyan con insumos de registros bibliográficos relacionados con la información producida por ellos mismos.

Los registros bibliográficos de todos los centros participantes son enviados al Centro de Documentación del Caribe. CLADES produce un resultado computarizado que se usa para publicar los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN.

El Centro de Documentación del Caribe recibió ayuda financiera del Centro Internacional de Investigación del Desarrollo (IDRC) que le permitió proporcionar entrenamiento y servicios de asesoría que permitirían asegurar la participación activa de los centros nacionales, así como también, la publicación de los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN.

Los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN es una publicación de resúmenes bibliográficos cuatrimestral diseñada para diseminar información bibliográfica acerca de la planificación en el Caribe y literatura sobre el desarrollo que son proporcionadas por los centros participantes. La publicación ayuda al usuario a identificar los documentos existentes y a evaluar la literatura disponible y su relevancia con respecto a su área de interés. Aún más, ayuda al usuario a entender el estado actual y las tendencias del desarrollo socioeconómico del Caribe y las implicaciones de dichas tendencias para el futuro. Hace disponible a cualquiera un rango mucho más amplio de recursos de los componentes de información del Sistema. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe proporciona un servicio de entrega de documentos sin cargo alguno a instituciones de gobierno del Caribe y a organizaciones regionales.

Alcance

El alcance de Resúmenes de CARISPLAN es flexible, puesto que la planificación está orientada a tareas específicas y cubre todos los sectores de actividad eco-

Included in the System are serial publications, books and non-conventional, less widely distributed, documents such as reports, conference papers, feasibility studies, etc., which relate to the planning activity in the Caribbean. Special emphasis is placed on the latter since these unpublished documents are not commercially available and are often of value to other users of the System.

The period of coverage is 1970 onwards with priority being given to the most current material. Earlier literature of special importance may be included.

At present, the System restricts itself to documents written in English, Spanish, French and Dutch - the four official languages of the CDCC member states. Participating centres prepare input sheets for their national literature with abstracts of the documents written in the language of their country. Participating centres in Suriname do not prepare abstracts for entries until the OECD Macrothesaurus is translated into Dutch. Original language titles are retained.

CARISPLAN Abstracts is structured to capture the documents generated by its target audience and the Caribbean documents which they are likely to use in the course of their planning and development activities. Such supporting information is primarily produced by or for the national statistical offices, central banks, ministries which feed the planners with the necessary sectoral data, departmental planning offices, universities and research institutes and some private organizations. Since the system works towards control of the literature at the institutional level, it is expected that CARISPLAN Abstracts will represent a fairly complete coverage of the type of literature which it aspires to capture.

Arrangement of CARISPLAN Abstracts

There are approaches to finding material in CARISPLAN Abstracts - the Bibliographic Index, Subject Index (in English, Spanish and French), Geographic Index (in English, Spanish and French), Author Index (personal and corporate) and a Conference Index.

nómica y social. Se incluyen las publicaciones que proporcionan información relevante a las áreas prioritarias que han sido identificadas por el CDCC para las actividades de cooperación y desarrollo. Los centros nacionales que participan, incorporan la literatura que ellos consideran relevante al proceso de desarrollo económico y social de sus respectivos países.

Se incluyen en el Sistema otras publicaciones que están relacionadas con la actividad de planificación en el Caribe, tales como: publicaciones periódicas, libros y material no-conventional, material de distribución menos amplia, informes, documentos de conferencias, estudios de factibilidad, etc. Se ha puesto un énfasis especial en estos últimos, puesto que son documentos que no se publican y que no se encuentran disponibles en el mercado pero que a menudo son de utilidad para otros usuarios del Sistema.

El período de cobertura es desde 1970 hacia adelante, dándosele prioridad al material más reciente. También puede ser incluida literatura anterior de importancia especial.

Por el momento, el Sistema está restringido a documentos escritos en inglés, español, francés y holandés, que son los cuatro idiomas oficiales de los estados miembros del CDCC. Los centros que participan preparan las hojas de insumos para su literatura nacional con resúmenes de los documentos escritos en el idioma de su respectivo país. Los centros que participan de Suriname no preparan resúmenes para los documentos presentados, sino que presentan descriptores temáticos en inglés para tales documentos hasta que se traduzca en holandés el Macrotesauro de la OECD. Los títulos de los documentos se dejan en su idioma original.

Los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN se estructuran de manera tal que puedan capturarse los documentos que se originan en la comunidad a la cual se dirigen, así como también, los documentos del Caribe que con mayor probabilidad serán usados en el curso de las actividades de planificación y desarrollo. Dicha información de apoyo es producida, fundamentalmente, por o para oficinas nacionales de estadísticas, bancos centrales, y ministerios que proporcionan la información sectorial necesaria a los pla-

The main entries which appear in the Bibliographic Index are prepared in accordance with rules outlined in the:

CARISPLAN Manual of Indexing Procedures,

CARISPLAN Abstracting Manual and CARISPLAN Manual for the Use of the Bibliographic Record Card.¹

The sample entry on page (xii) indicates the elements in the record format. The records are organized according to the DEVSIS categories² which represent the purpose for which the document was written. Many of CARISPLAN's users will need to better understand the present status and trends in the economies and societies for which they take decisions and draw up plans. The bibliographic file is therefore arranged to facilitate the identification and extraction of basic information on current situations and their extrapolations into the future.

Again, many users will be seeking access to information on programmes and projects closely related to those on which they are working, in order to be able to benefit from the experience of others and to effect co-ordination of efforts. CARISPLAN Abstracts is therefore arranged to ensure rapid identification of material on plans, programmes and projects.

Those who wish digested background information on major trends in development theory and experience can easily locate this information and the alternative sources from which it can be obtained.

Subject Index: The subject index is presented in English, Spanish and French. Each subject descriptor shows the principal country, the abstract number, the title in the original language. In the Spanish and French nificadores, oficinas departamentales de planificación, universidades, institutos de investigación y algunas organizaciones privadas. Puesto que el Sistema está orientado hacia el control de la literatura al nivel institucional, se espera que los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN representarán una cobertura más o menos completa del tipo de literatura que aspira capturar.

Organización de los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN

Existen varios enfoques para la búsqueda de material en los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN, estos son: el Índice Bibliográfico, el Índice Temático (en inglés, español y francés), el Índice Geográfico (en inglés, español y francés), el Índice de Autores (Individual e Instituciones), y un Índice de Conferencias.

Los ingresos principales que aparecen en el Índice Bibliográfico son preparados de acuerdo con las reglas que se presentan en los siguientes documentos:

Manual de Procedimientos de Indización de CARISPLAN,

Manual de Resúmenes de CARISPLAN, y

Manual para el Uso de la Tarjeta de Registro Bibliográfico de CARISPLAN³

La muestra de ingreso que aparece en página (xiii) indica los diferentes elementos en el formato del archivo. Los registros están organizados de acuerdo a las categorías DEVSIS² que representan el propósito para el cual el documento fue escrito. La mayoría de los usuarios de CARISPLAN necesitarán de una mejor comprensión del estado actual y las tendencias de las economías y sociedades para las cuales ellos toman decisiones y formulan programas y planes. El archivo bibliográfico se organiza de manera de facilitar la identificación y extracción de información básica sobre las situaciones actuales y sus extrapolaciones en el futuro.

Del mismo modo, muchos otros usuarios buscarán información acerca de programas y proyectos que se relacionan indexes, the English title is followed by a Spanish translation.

The third edition of OECD Macrothesaurus is the controlled vocabulary used for indexing and retrieval of information in CARISPLAN. The Macrothesaurus provides a language which can process information relating to all aspects of social and economic development. This helps to ensure compatibility in a decentralized system such as CARISPLAN. The indexer attempts to ensure that the descriptors selected express, as specifically as possible, the concepts identified in the document.

Geographic Index: Each entry gives the DEVSIS category, the abstract number and the title of the document which deals with the country or region.

Author Index: This index includes personal as well as institutional authors, editors or collaborators. Each entry provides the abstract number of the document quoted in the main bibliographic file and title in the original language followed by a translation in Spanish or English.

Conference Index: Conferences are arranged alphabetically by their names and the abstract number indicated.

estrechamente con aquellos en los cuales están trabajando, con el objeto de obtener beneficios provenientes de la experiencia de otros, como asimismo hacer efectiva una mayor cooperación de esfuerzos. Los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN están organizados de manera tal que se puede obtener de forma rápida la identificación de material acerca de planes, programas y proyectos de desarrollo.

Aquellas personas que deseen información general, previamente analizada, acerca de los aspectos principales de la teoría y práctica del desarrollo pueden localizar fácilmente esta información y las fuentes alternativas donde puede encontrarse.

Índice Temático: El índice temático se presenta en inglés, español y francés. Cada descriptor de tema muestra el país principal, el número de resumen, y el título de la publicación en su idioma original. En los índices en español y francés, el título en inglés de la publicación va acompañado de una traducción del mismo en español.

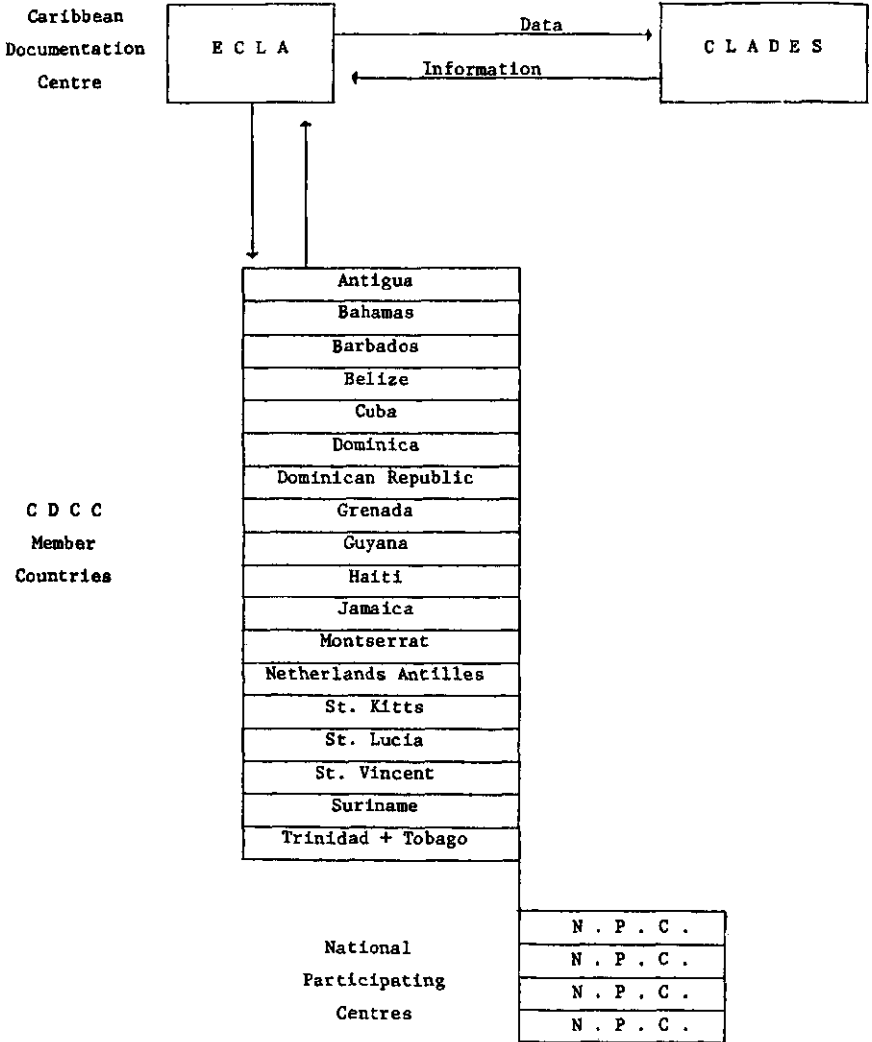

La tercera edición del Macrotesauro de la OECD es el vocabulario controlado que se usa para la indización y búsqueda de la información en el sistema CARISPLAN. El Macrotesauro proporciona un lenguaje que permite procesar información que se relaciona con todos los aspectos del desarrollo económico y social. Esto ayuda a confirmar la comparabilidad en un sistema descentralizado como CARISPLAN. La persona que confecciona el índice intenta asegurarse que los descriptors seleccionados expresen, de la manera más específica posible, los conceptos que se identifican en cada documento.

Índice Geográfico: Cada ingreso proporciona la categoría DEVSIS, el número del resumen y el título del documento que se refiere a un país o región.

Índice de Autores: Este índice incluye autores individuales, así como también instituciones, editores o colaboradores. Cada ingreso proporciona el número del resumen del documento que se cita en el archivo bibliográfico principal, y el título en el idioma original seguida por una traducción en español o inglés.

Índice de Conferencias: Las conferencias están organizadas en un orden alfabético, indicándose su nombre y el número del resumen.

Census of agriculture for St. Vincent 1972-73. (Censo

General (01959)

The aim of the census is to provide an up-to-date list of all farm operators, give reliable estimates and serve as a sampling frame for future statistical studies in agriculture.
It is also to provide bench-mark data against which future agricultural development is to be measured and thereby form the basic data for planning, formulating and appraising agricultural development projects. The scope and content of the farm questionnaire was determined mainly to meet the requirements of the programme for 1970 World Census of Agriculture, issued by the FAO. The data provided relates to the following: holding, type of holding and tenure; land utilization; crops, number of trees, areas sown and production harvested; livestock and poultry; employment in agriculture; farm population; agricultural power and machinery and general transport facilities; irrigation; fertilizers and soil dressings; wood and wood products; association of agricultural holdings with other industries.

The paper quantifies the extent of the population problem. It shows that between 1970-75, the absolute increase in the potential labour force is projected to be 5071 or an annual arithmetic average of 1014 persons. For 1975-80, the absolute increase in potential work force is approximately 5531 persons or an annual arithmetic average of 1106 persons. It further shows the consequent rise in unemployment likely to occur, and concludes that it is imperative that the Government adopt a positive population policy.

Post constructed text of panel presentation on planter democracy in Barbados. (Documento relativo a la exposicion hecha por un grupo de expertos sobre la democracia de los plantadores en Barbados). Cave Hill, UWI, 1979. 5 p.
General (01871)

It traces the system of government in Barbados from the 17th century, noting that after emancipation, the planter/mercantile class fought to "preserve" its democracy in the face of incursion or replacement by the black masses. In 1875, the 24 member House of Assembly comprised 12 planters and 12 professional men, all trained in England and who were "servants" to the planter/mercantile class. Up to 1937, the planter/mercantile class occupied the formal political positions of authority. It concludes that planter democracy ended with universal enfranchisement in 1951 and the consolidation of representative government with Independence.

Estudio sobre los distintos factores que inciden en el costo del azucar. La presencia de economías de escala en los centrales azucareros provoca que los costos unitarios del azucar crudo sean menores, a medida que aumenta la capacidad de molida. La duración de la zafra también influye en los costos. Se desarrollan los siguientes puntos: características de los gastos variables azucareros; sensibilidad del costo entre los días de zafra; correlación entre los días de zafra y las curvas de pol; la capacidad anual óptima de molida; posibles aplicaciones de estas propiedades del costo azucarero; y algunas consideraciones finales.

La inversión en sus mejores etapas apenas llegó a la mitad del nivel que supone Alienes, mientras que la pérdida neta para Cuba era tres veces mayor a lo largo de ese primer cuarto de siglo y más grande aun en los años posteriores.

Este articulo fue redactado en 1956 con vistas al Forum Nacional del Colegio Medico de Cuba. El autor analiza el problema de la crisis medica, la cual es generada, en ultimo extremo, por la deficiente estructura economica que imperaba en Cuba en esa etapa. Esa crisis se manifestaba en la escasez de oportunidades de un alto porcentaje de medicos para ejercer su profesion, y en los sueldos o ingresos insuficientes para cubrir las necesidades. En el estudio se hace un analisis de los antecedentes economicos y sociales que imperaban en el campo de la salud. La segunda parte corresponde al analisis de la situacion economica en el 56, considerando los ingresos y gastos familiares, trabajo y desempleo, la distribucion de los medicos en Cuba y el papel del Estado en el cuidado de la salud..

La primera parte del trabajo, esta dirigida a ubicar la categoria precio, dentro del conjunto de la Economia Política del Socialismo, al igual que su funcion de estimulo como parte de las restantes palancas de estimulacion de que dispone el Sistema de Direccion y Planificacion de la Economia Nacional. Esta parte sirve de introduccion al analisis de la problematica de la formacion de precios a las tarifas electricas y los precios de los envases de cristal recuperables. Los ejemplos concretos que se exponen parten de la experiencia resultante en la 1 era Reforma de Precios Mayoristas, ejecutada en Cuba. Finalmente se esbozan brevemente algunas consideraciones generales sobre la estimulacion en nuestro actual Sistema de Precios..

Se destaca la importancia de las Brigadas para el desarrollo económico, ante la necesidad de incrementar la capacidad de los recursos humanos. Se hace un análisis de las características que definen la revolución científico técnica. En la actualidad, se aplican con gran celeridad los descubrimientos científicos a la práctica de la economía mediante la técnica; se exponen ejemplos que demuestran como cada vez es menor el período de tiempo entre el hallazgo científico y su utilización práctica-tecnológica. Esto genera nuevas profesiones. Por ejemplo, en la URSS surgen 500 nuevas profesiones u oficios por año, con distintos perfiles especializados. Además, se tratan los siguientes aspectos: la preparación de profesionales en Cuba y en otros países socialistas; la necesidad de seleccionar tecnologías avanzadas y desarrollar una agricultura y ganadería intensivas..

Se analiza la situacion del comercio exterior antes de 1959 en que practicamente tenia un solo mercado: el de los Estados Unidos. Estados Unidos monopolizaba el 75% del mercado de importacion y ademas absorbia el 66% de las exportaciones cubanas. Se exponen multiples ejemplos de los

An analysis of production and market conditions for cocoa, nutmegs and bananas shows that in the absence of the oil crisis, the prospects for cocoa and nutmegs seems favourable (more so for cocoa than nutmegs). The banana situation is the most uncertain although recent happenings on the UK market indicate good short term prospects. While nutmeg and mace production is showing an upward trend cocoa has fluctuated and banana production has declined steadily since 1968. Grenada's major problem has traditionally been one of production and export quantities rather than marketing. The recent oil crisis may well lead to a turnabout in this position if the rate of general economic growth and incomes in the major importing countries are slowed down because of production cut-backs to conserve fuel in these countries. Grenada's major export market, the UK is seriously threatened by the oil crisis and the latter's implications for imports could well be disastrous for the Grenadian economy. On the other hand this potential crisis for the Grenadian economy affords an opportunity for the rationalization of agriculture in general..

Two political parties have dominated Grenadian independence since the early 1950's: the Grenada United Labour Party (GULP) led by Eric Gairy, and the Grenadian National Party (GNP). The 1972 elections proved little different from the majority of previous elections in terms of outcome: resounding defeat of the GNP. The author deals with one of the issues raised in the election - independence for Grenada - and describes the events leading up to the London negotiations and factors influencing these: the politicization of middle class youth in the sixties and early seventies; the emergence of the New Jewel Movement (NJM) as the militant arm of the opposition to Gairy on the independence issue; the independence talks in London and the wave of protests which these precipitated in Grenada. A comparison is made of the concepts of political independence held by the three parties and their ideological positions, and the author considers the future of Grenada under the NJM..

Examines certain aspects of social structure in Grenada with a view to determining the contemporary relevance of M.G. Smith's theory of Grenada as a plural society. A review of the relevant literature reveals the paucity of sociological research on Grenada. A history of the island from its settlement by the Europeans to the present colonial period, is followed by an analysis of Smith's theory of plural society as applied to Grenada. The author contends that the last twenty years have seen the pattern of social stratification change from one based on ascription to one based on achievement, and concludes that far from being a society stratified socially and culturally, Grenada is more homogenous, as Grenadians share the same culture traditions..

Focuses on the problem of the prevention of social maladjustment in Guadeloupe within the socio-political context of its departmental states, and examines the way in which behaviour is determined by dependency. Notes that despite the existence of criminogenic factors, the level of delinquency and aggressive reaction to the island's increasing social and economic disequilibrium is insignificant in comparison to the pervasiveness of maladjustment among economically-deprived youth. Argues that this pattern is directly related to Guadeloupe's political status, and that maladjusted youth choose an alternative which is not incompatible with this broader context of dependency: dependence on social assistance. Posits that social workers are impotent to implement any productive social change and concludes that political independence would have important implications for the expression of delinquency as well as its prevention by social workers.

The performance of the Jamaican economy in 1974 was characterized by negligible real growth in output, a high rate of inflation, and a slight reduction in unemployment. Preliminary current price indicators of output showed an increase of the order of 30% in the major national accounting aggregates. In some sectors like agriculture, mining and public utilities available data on physical output suggest real growth, while no significant decline appears to have occurred in others. The consumer price index increased by 27% and 32% in the urban and rural areas respectively compared to 1973. In October 1974 the rate of unemployment stood at 20.5% compared with 22.4% in 1973. During the year major new projects were undertaken in the fields of agrarian settlement and youth participation in national development, and in the care of pre-school children.

The Jamaican economy had its first post-independence experience of the effects of international recession and revealed persistent weaknesses in its structure. Performance of the economy was characterized on the negative side by a fall in real output and a significant rate of increase in the cost of living and no important increase in unemployment. Preliminary estimates showed an increase of 18% in major national accounting aggregates GNP and GDP at current prices compared with 31% in 1974. In the section on human development and welfare covering the areas population and migration, education, training, labour and employment, health, social development and welfare and social defence, the survey identifies social programmes which were undertaken by the government in an attempt to promote, develop and enhance the social well-being of the members of the society. These programmes are examined in order to assess to what extent, and at what cost, the social services provided satisfied the needs of the different target populations.

It focuses on 3 periods, the late colonial period from 1947 to 1954, the semi-colonial period from 1954-1975 and from independence in 1975 to the present. Illustrates how steps leading to change in the political status of the country were connected in these periods with different conceptual approaches towards a planned development. Shows how a new institutional framework was designed to control the country and development aid was seen as a post-colonial instrument to maintain and/or intensify the dependency relationship. Notes that presently there is a Ministry of Development Planning which is to focus on micro productive projects to stimulate local people. States that a national council for planning will make suggestions for socio-economic development and investigate bottlenecks in planning..

in Trinidad and Tobago. (Raza, clase social y los origenes de UWI, 1976. 28 p.

General (01945)

Paper deals with the empirical examination of the interactions between race and social class in social processes in Caribbean societies. It examines both the social class theory and the theory of cultural pluralism and argues that the latter theory is dominant in interpreting Caribbean societies, that social class is of secondary importance in the differentiation and integration of Caribbean societies. The paper then examines the situation of the Africans and East Indians in Trinidad and Tobago as interactions between race and class. It focuses on race and class as factors in the origins of five elite occupational groups in Trinidad and Tobago. It concludes that both race and social class played a decisive role in the origins of the occupational elite; that each factor exerted its influence on the process independently of the other; that social class was a more important factor than race; that both sex and time played an important role in varying the race and class distribution. Moreover, the findings do not support the view that the socio-economic opportunities of Africans are generally better than those of East Indians since no generalized trend evolved.

The present analysis based primarily on the 1970 census is concerned with a description of the existing situation in terms of shifts, since 1943, with estimates of major movements in terms of accession and with the educational status of the economically active. An attempt is made to review the position of the region, comparing information about 14 units of the Commonwealth Caribbean. Notes the decline in the working force over the decade 1960-70 and the steep rise by the mid-70's which forecasts the doubling of the working force by the end of the century, and falls in fertility. Draws attention to the need for research which can secure realistic employment levels.

The object of this paper is to clarify the role which agriculture, and particularly export agriculture has played in the economic growth of the former Federation of the British West Indies. The material presented is based on an interpretation and analysis of time series data acquired from various sources. The growth in GDP over the decade is studied as this was found to vary between some 3% per annum in Grenada and St. Vincent to about 8% per annum in Trinidad and Tobago. The contribution of the various sectors to this growth is examined, with special emphasis on the agricultural sector. Indicates that any dynamic movements within the agricultural sector were apparently due almost entirely to the behaviour of the export sector.

General

(01960)

The current state of planning is examined in the Caribbean countries of Antigua, Barbados, Dominica, Grenada, Guyana, St. Kitts, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago. This is based on a detailed questionnaire sent to the respective countries. Contends that what is really being done in the region is not planning. One essential aspect of planning, frequently absent is the consciousness of the longer term goals of the country as a whole and their translation into current action and targets for the country and for particular ministries. States that the present state of planning is one in which all countries have some administrative framework for planning but no country is in fact using the planning mechanism effectively. Reasons for this are reviewed, institutional, manpower and budgetary constraints being identified as the major hindrances. Looks at assistance in planning from mainly UN agencies and identifies the need for training in the preparation of investment projects and general upgrading of basic statistical knowledge of the support staff. Possible topics for consideration by CEPAL to be dealt with in its planning bulletin are outlined.

Paper prepared at the request of the I.L.O. in Mexico City: Appendix of registered unions: p. 44-45. Bibliography: p. 47-48.

General

(01964)

The paper examines trade union activity in the Eastern Caribbean. It traces the historical development of trade unions in the West Indies in the context of the rise of capitalism. It examines the recent developments (1975-1978) of the West Indian trade union industrial relations practice. The paper also examines industrial relations and the law. It concludes that the crisis in capitalism is resulting in the increased militancy of Caribbean workers and their unions, and that there is a tendency for Caribbean governments to seek to shackle the trade union movement through administrative, legislative or other political means.

Summarises the problems facing the Caribbean region with respect to the transfer of appropriate technology within the context of CDB's financial policies. Six problems are discussed. These are: establishing a definition of appropriate technology which can fit the various stages of social and technological advancement of the peoples of the region; structuring projects to achieve improved social conditions stable employment patterns and a reasonable rate of return on capital invested; choosing consultants with the knowledge and interest to apply the technologies appropriate to the area and assist in training local personnel and develop the Region's resources; resisting the urge to demand products and projects inappropriate to the Region's stage of economic development and demanding a continuous matching of product design with market scale; making maximum use of local material; and examining the effect of technological change upon the Region's cultural patterns. In the light of these, CDB is considering the establishment of an "Appropriate Technology Unit" which will sensitize the formulation of all the bank-financed projects, and bring to bear on the projects the results of existing research into different technologies or initiate research in the appropriate technology for a specific project.

Survey of the Commonwealth Caribbean livestock feed industry. (Estudio de la industria de pienso en los países caribenos miembros del Commonwealth). September 1975. 121 p 145 refs.
General (02496)

Indicates that livestock development has been successful in most of the Commonwealth Caribbean countries, with excellent results in the pig and poultry subsectors. However progress in the cattle subsector did not benefit greatly from new systems and techniques being adopted. Assesses feed production and imports and feed requirements for the larger Commonwealth Caribbean countries, and points out that in each case total estimated consumption is in excess of local consumption and the deficit is made up by imports. Traces the growth in production and availability of livestock feeds in the area, and concludes that the sluggish growth of domestic feed production is likely to continue as long as the industry remains essentially a by-product industry. There is a discussion of feed imports as a major outgrowth of the livestock industry and the particular inter-relationships between demand, production and imports as they affect the regional livestock feed industry. A brief analysis of feed prices from 1960-1974 and a short history of feed manufacturing are presented. Concludes that import substitution efforts in the livestock industries in the region have been constrained by the limited availability and high prices of feed inputs. This situation is likely to continue unless these industries are restructured to promote the production and processing of local feeds as integral parts of national and regional livestock programmes..

Analyses certain aspects of the expansion of education in the last few decades in the countries of the region in relation to changes in the employment structure. The empirical basis of the study consists of population censuses and more specifically census samples in the CELADE programme on the operation of census samples. The expansion of education is analysed first in the light of the situation and general trends as regards literacy and their most important social implications. In the second part of the study the question is dealt with on the basis of data on changes in the structure and composition of the various educational levels. Also deals with questions arising from the unequal distribution of education and attempts to show that the expansion of education has failed to reduce the existing disparities, since the secondary and higher levels of education are expanding at a very rapid rate, while the extension of primary education has still not been satisfactorily completed. The study examines educational expansion through the analysis of data on school attendance and absenteeism, and on over-age students. The last chapter analyses the relation between such growth and the employment structure.

Se hace un estudio teórico del proceso de reproducción de la economía capitalista. En el capitalismo se producen mercancías bajo una relación social de producción capitalista. Se explican los tres momentos teóricos del análisis del valor en el capitalismo. En el desarrollo del tema se utiliza el concepto de dinero como expresión monetaria del valor de una mercancía, lo cual constituye el precio. Otros conceptos que se utilizan y se explican son los siguientes: plusvalía, ganancia y fuerzas productivas..

La base de las crisis económicas de superproducción reside en la contradicción fundamental del capitalismo. La apropiación privada capitalista entra en contradicción con el carácter social de la producción. En las condiciones actuales de la revolución científico-técnica la ciencia se transforma en una fuerza directa de la producción, la automatización es un elemento básico y aumenta la productividad del trabajo. Se presenta un análisis de las relaciones económicas internacionales y de la reproducción capitalista y una tabla con porcentajes de exportaciones mundiales. Se explica la crisis del sistema monetario capitalista en la cual desempeñan un papel importante las particularidades del desarrollo de la esfera financiera del capitalismo monopolista de Estado. In reviewing the decision of the Public Utilities Board, it is pointed out that the Board was unaware of two essentials: 1) the principles of rate-making and 2) the facts of the particular case. It stresses that unless Government corrects the situation created by the decision of the Board, the social consequences will be harmful. It specifically recommends that Government rescind the order made subsequent to the review; that the increase granted July 1 be confirmed; that Government refinance the Company's loan debts and take an active role in management decisions.

Raises issues relevant to a discussion of tourism policy. Points out that the growth in tourism is not measured by the number of visitors per year but by benefits received in terms of foreign exchange and employment. Three elements of tourism planning are stressed: 1) a statement of objectives; 2) documentation of the current status of the industry and its historical growth; 3) a strategy which outlines quantitative targets for benefits and for costs and which gives a time schedule for their achievement. The social and environmental impact of tourism is then considered and the need is stressed to take positive actions to guide the development of the industry while choices are still available.

It establishes the criteria for the choice of islands and their grouping into regions as: geographical setting, population size, economic base and localization of economic activities and potential centres of growth; existing inventory of services and infrastructure; and susceptibility to measures encouraging future growth. As a result of this four regions are identified: New Providence Region, Exuma Region, Grand Bahama Region and Inagua Region. En la primera parte se ofrece una panoramica de los estudios acerca de la poblacion desarrollados en Cuba. Cuba rechaza la concepcion de los ideologos del imperialismo de asociar el subdesarrollo con la explosion demografica; considera que la explosion demografica son acompanantes y, en cierto sentido, consecuencia del sub-desarrollo y de la opresion y explotacion impuestas por el imperialismo. El desarrollo debe abordarse como un proceso de cambio estructural que implique no solo aumento en la produccion, sino modificaciones en las instituciones y la participacion creadora de toda la poblacion. Like most of the Caribbean territories Grenada's energy needs are satisfied mainly by imported oil, although it has been estimated that a significant percentage of domestic energy needs are satisfied by indigenous solid fuels such as wood and charcoal. Energy consumption patterns indicate that 25% of the energy imported into or produced in Grenada is used for domestic purposes, 30% for ground transportation, just over one third in electricity generation and just over 6% for industrial purposes. Electrical energy consumption which increased at an annual average rate of 10% prior to the energy crisis, is projected to increase by 5% per annum in the foreseeable future. An examination of available conventional and non-conventional energy sources shows that the most promising indigenous sources of energy which require further examination are hydraulic, solar, wind and forest-growth activities. Recommended in the short term are examination of ways and means to conserve imported petroleum products; expansion and development of improved facilities for the drying of crops using solar energy; implementation of measuring systems to monitor solar wind and hydraulic energy; and measurement of thermal potential of hot springs and volcanic locations. In the long term, solar energy may be the only feasible indigenous source.

The limited data on production and consumption of agricultural products in Grenada emphasise the preoccupation with export crops and the neglect of livestock production and crops for local consumption - the net result of which is a high import bill. An examination of production and consumption interrelationships reveals that: the trend is towards declining production on non-export crops; local food production contributes only 25% to energy requirements of the population; seasonality in fruit production results in alternate gluts and scarcity; vegetable production is generally low and variable often resulting in acute shortages; and, local meat production has declined while 50% of the meat required is imported. The long-term goals of agricultural development are: the production of an agricultural surplus but not as much as to create redundancy and underemployment; and minimum inflation in the prices of agricultural inputs. The realization of these goals lies in the reallocation of land; food processing involving diversification of end products; improvement in breed, nutrition and management of livestock; and general improvement in the marketing systems..

Agriculture has been and will most likely continue to be the mainstay of the Grenadian economy. Agricultural production can be increased by bringing a greater proportion of land, particularly on the larger farms, into intensive production. The potential for increasing the production of the three major export crops (cocoa, nutmeg and mace and bananas) hinges on the availability of stable markets and the policies of the Governments in power. With present consumption patterns, it is clear that Grenada is in no position to produce all the food consumed. The aim should be to restrict or limit the importation of non-essential food items and boost the local production of food crops through greater efficiency, the bringing of more land into production and the organization of a reliable marketing system. At the same time the production of agricultural exports should be increased, by increasing production of currently grown crops and widening the range of products exported. Other suggestions include the processing of export crops, the introduction of soil conservation techniques and the improvement and construction of existing and feeder roads..

Examines the features of financial and monetary dependence which are characteristic of the Grenadian economy and draws attention to certain needed changes in the financial system. Institutional arrangements with respect to money and finance have led to two principal occurrences - the outflow of the savings of surplus economic units to deficit spenders abroad and the conduct of financial business in terms directly influenced by conditions in the United Kingdom. Other pertinent factors are the absence of government securities and a market for financial assets and the complete lack of monetary and financial legislation. The foregoing emphasizes the need for financial regulation and control to develop a system which would foster the efficient allocation of surplus for growth and transformation-oriented activity within the economy. The essential ingredients of financial reforms would comprise: the reform of the currency issuing authority so as to provide discretionary control of the monetary base; the protection of the local financial environment through appropriate exchange control regulations; ensuring that local financial environment through appropriate exchange control regulations; ensuring that local surpluses be available to finance local deficits; and devising a system to enable the government to have easy access to local finance..

Tests hypothesis dealing with the nature and significance of agricultural finance among 484 small farmers with the aim of providing solid data on the problems of financing small-scale agriculture in Guyana. Discussion is devoted to a literature review on the subject, a description of farming activity in the survey region, the importance of agriculture to Guyana's economic development, the social and economic characteristics of the farming population, the levels of expenditure undertaken by farmers, the importance of formal and informal lending agencies as suppliers of credit and types and terms of loans granted by these. One of the most striking features revealed by the study is the insignificant use of money credit from both formal and informal lending agencies, and the importance of commodity loans. The general poverty of the farmers suggests that the type of credit demanded was determined by a decision to maintain their existence and was not an estimate of their marginal efficiency of investment. The volume of institutional credit extended to the agricultural sector is small but while subjective factors may influence whether credit is granted or not, the educational levels, skills and income of farmers also constrain the demand for credit. The informal credit market is more important because less stringent security conditions are imposed. The majority of farmers utilize owned resources for financing agricultural needs. A policy of supervised credit complemented by structural land reform and national control of resources is proposed.

Report recommends a unification of regional monetary agreements under a single CARICOM umbrella. This is based on an overview of developments in the international monetary and financial system which traces the evolution of monetary and financial mechanisms and instruments in the CARICOM region and implications for their future development. A preliminary look at sub-regional monetary and financial arrangements in the ECCM suggests the need for a stronger monetary authority, while the reviews of the exchange rate policies and practices indicate the need for more realistic rates and possible alternatives to the dollar peg. The main area of study is the balance of payments and external debt policies of Jamaica, Barbados and Guyana and the difficulties of implementing the IMF programme in Jamaica and Guyana. Other recommendations are for ECLA assistance in the collection and analysis of ECCM data reserve management policies for Trinidad and Tobago, with a view to Trinidad and Tobago becoming the regional capital market centre.

The post World War II development of Caribbean tourism reflected the external orientation inherited from colonialism and was geared towards a metropolitan market: the study traces this development and examines the impact of tourism on the Jamaican economy. The philosophy of the 1950's was that tourism could transform Caribbean economies. Government policy envisaged extensive foreign involvement supplemented by an intensive public investment programme and tourism developed into a highly specialized export industry but highly susceptible to external manipulation. The growth of Jamaican tourism is reviewed and its critical dependence on the US market is shown. Technology transfer mainly managerial know-how evolved from direct private investment to the franchise agreement which eliminated the risk of operating losses for foreign concerns and left the industry completely dependent on foreign imports and technology. The study attributes the industry's problems of high foreign exchange leakage, poor inter-sectoral linkage, socially costly land-use and poor worker morale, to the historical orientation towards foreign tourism but concludes that given the assumption that foreign tourism will continue to dominate, the alignment of tourism with national policy requires more government intervention and less private sector domination without stressing tourism as a major component of development strategy.

General (01934)

In 1971, both Barbados and Jamaica boasted significant expansion, but by 1978, Barbados had survived a period of stagnation and registered three years of modest growth while in Jamaica production was declining. It is against this background that external influences (exchange rate instability; rising oil prices; stagflation in developed countries; and international financial flows) and domestic factors (fiscal, monetary, commercial and exchange rate policies; institutional factors) are evaluated to determine their effect on economic activity during the period. The conclusion reached is that neither domestic nor external forces alone will serve to explain fully the economic fortunes of Barbados and Jamaica. Domestic policies may have been effective had the external environment been more helpful; on the other hand, harmful external effects might have been tackled by a wiser domestic policy strategy. Much of the difference between the economic performance of Barbados and Jamaica had to do with the difference in their fiscal stances, though the larger impact of fuel prices in Jamaica had also been a major factor. An urgent priority in both countries must be to build the institutional capacity to exploit this potential.

Women in Jamaica: patterns of reproduction and family.
(Las mujeres en Jamaica: modelos de reproducción y familia).
New York, KTO, 1978. 346 p (The Caribbean-Historical and Introduction by Vera Rubin.

General

(02499)

This study provides the basis for an understanding of the position of women in Jamaica with special reference to their reproduction performance and family relationships. Bringing together both published and newly-acquired data, it covers many significant aspects of the lifestyles of West Indian women.
Data collected on the formation of family unions, the extent and character of changes in the family structure, the three types of unions (married, common-law and visiting), the periods of time spent in each, as well as their relative stability have been discussed. Also included are many social and biological aspects of reproduction and child care in the society, such as pregnancy wastage, infant mortality, breastfeeding, support of children, family planning, menstrual patterns and knowledge of reproduction and menstruation. A summary of findings reveals that the visiting union is more common when compared with studies on Trinidad; effective contacts between father and children average 4 hours per week; the married union shows the highest educational performance followed by the visiting and the common-law unions; 10% and 12% of the respondents exhibited an adequate knowledge of reproduction and menstruation respectively; for infants delivered by nurses in hospital, the level of mortality is 37 per 1000 as compared with 67 per 1000 delivered in homes by nans. Concludes that steps to upgrade knowledge of untrained midwives to help contain environmental factors affecting infant mortality be considered; that programmes of fertility control incorporate campaigns aimed at disseminating an appropriate understanding of the fundamental processes of reproduction and menstruation..

Surveys the St. Lucian sugar industry and examines labour organization and labour relations in particular, with a view to explaining the circumstances leading up to the 1952 strike by sugar workers. Documents these events and asserts that industrial unrest was precipitated by the warranted dissatisfaction of workers with respect to company policy, the unsympathetic attitude of employers, the ineffectiveness of the bargaining union and the propaganda of an aspiring trade unionist. Comments on the absence of wage-fixing machinery and on the issue of reconciling profits with wages, making specific recommendations for the following: the establishment of Wages Councils and Works Committees; the appointment of labour and welfare officers and factory checkweigh men; the minimizing of loss from spillage and shrinkage of canes, the distribution of a bonus based on profits, to workers; the provision for a committee to fix the price of canes; extension services; new means of labour organization and the transfer of a portion of the sugar cess to the Labour Welfare Fund.

The report highlights recent economic expansion in St. Lucia, tourism and manufacturing expansion but agricultural decline. It recommends export-oriented, and employment generating industries as aids to more equitable income distribution, as well as modernization of agriculture and location of additional markets. The report also specifies needs for expansion of economic infrastructure especially in the area of transport, and for social infrastructure in hospital development and the location of low-income housing. It concludes by predicting good economic prospects and an increase in per capita income.

The paper's objective is the design of a development strategy which will generate employment especially among new labour market entrants. It examines the labour force, employment by industry, agriculture, forestry, fishing, mining and quarrying, construction, manufacturing, utilities, hotels and restaurants, handicrafts, trade, transport, financial services, social services, and concludes that the size of the labour force is sensitive to employment prospects for women. The paper also examines employment prospects in public and private sector investment, and concludes that the present development strategy has high external influences and that full employment cannot therefore be guaranteed. The paper therefore recommends linkages between the tourist industry and the craft industries, the introduction of labour intensive techniques in construction projects and the implementation of labour intensive projects in agro-industries, and low-cost housing. Appendices provide a cost-effectiveness comparison of construction methods in road building, and industrial incentives policy to increase employment in St. Lucia..

Attempts to assess the impact state intervention has had on the agricultural development of the island. The paper outlines the problems posed by the agricultural sector at different stages of the development process. States that in underdeveloped countries where agriculture is often the leading sector, the problem is to raise the level of production and ensure returns are equitably distributed among the farming population, notes that in St. Vincent the government has placed great emphasis on the development of the agricultural sector but measures adopted have not had great impact. In the period covered the study shows that there has been little if any improvement in the distribution of income, only the form of mal-distribution has changed. Recommendations include the drafting of a comprehensive plan for the entire sector, more specifically the author reviews crops individually and suggests strategies for increased production and marketing.

 high resulting in food import bans designed to encourage the favourite tourist foods. Temperature, humidity and rainfall associated with topography must all influence the preparation of Economic integration and preferential trade: the Caribbean experience. (Integracion economica y comercio preferencial: la

 General (01825)

Five formulas of economic integration and preferential trade are prevalent in the Caribbean: extra-regional economic integration (Puerto Rico and the US); multinational trade preferences (the Commonwealth Caribbean and the UK); bilateral trade preferences (Cuban-Soviet trade); vertical industrial integration; and export-industrialization to the rich countries based on duty-free import of raw materials and generous fiscal incentives. The importance of these formulas is overwhelming:
 more than 90% of the total value of Caribbean agricultural exports is exported under various external preferential arrangements. A continuation of these is paradoxically essential and undesirable: essential because such Caribbean exports as sugar, citrus fruit and bananas, cannot compete on glutted world markets; undesirable because they condemn Caribbean producers to low incomes and inefficient production, perpetuate monoculture and restrain industrialization and technological development. One alternative strategy is to combine regional and extra-regional integration. This would extend extra-regional preferences to all Caribbean producers while at the same time establishing new intra-regional preferences.

Discusses some conceptual and policy aspects of economic independence in Third World countries with special reference to the small Commonwealth Caribbean countries. It distinguishes between dependence and interdependence and between independence and isolation and makes the point that there is an optimum degree of economic contact with the outside world which is required to promote economic independence and internally-propelled development. The real issue is to determine the optimum degree of openness in every particular case. Five aspects of economic dependence are identified: foreign ownership and control of key sectors in the economy; dependence through aid; dependence through trade; dependence through imported consumption and production patterns; and dependence on foreign know-how. The forms of dependence are part of the total structure of underdevelopment in the Commonwealth Caribbean. Posits that the means of promoting economic independence involve changes in policies and institutions; changes in values and attitudes; a sound income policy; a meaningful scheme of regional integration and above all, the development of greater technological, managerial and organizational know-how.

Technical assistance to smaller territories was also discussed and recommendations were made with respect to the following: a working party on training, the formation of a body to advise on all statistical matters, the 1970 agricultural census, the promotion of a career structure and statisticians' status, labour force surveys, regional occupational and industrial classification and education statistics. Also included are proceedings of the administrative and technical sessions.

Estimates the magnitude and economic importance of the losses incurred in perishable agricultural commodities due to a lack of proper cold storage facilities while at the same time compiling an inventory of existing cold storage capacity for agricultural products. Assesses on a country by country basis the refrigeration facilities and spoilage of perishable agricultural commodities, observes that trade is adjusted to satisfy the customary pattern of domestic trade geared to a daily or bi-weekly trade in perishable farm produce in the absence of or with limited facilities available for storage. Two marketing boards have only small shares of the total domestic trade but the potential for expansion is considerable. Proposals are put forward for refrigeration facilities for each country on an individual basis. Looks into the possibility of improving the utilization of existing facilities identifying as well the need to improve methods of harvesting, handling, packaging and transporting agricultural commodities.

Aspects of housing in the Caribbean. (Aspectos de la vivienda en el Caribe). 1951. 236 p. 128 refs.
General (01947)

Deals with various aspects of the housing problem in the Caribbean. Examines housing in relation to health and provides statistical data on housing and home environmental diseases. Suggestions for construction are advanced and the possibilities of aided self-help. The financial aspects, as well as recent and current developments with respect to housing are discussed. Suggests that the key to the solution of the housing problem lies in the availability of abundant supplies of cheap construction materials. It concludes by stating that the housing problems facing the Caribbean are deep-seated, and incapable of solution through isolated acts of policy or single strokes of legislation. Notes the possibilities of assistance at the regional level through collaboration in research into materials, techniques and design and discusses new materials and methods of construction with a view to reducing building costs; long term planning of housing developments; and the reduction of labour costs, which are seen as major in relieving the housing problem.

General

(01948)

Examines conventional and non-conventional energy resources in the CDCC member countries. This is especially necessary in the light of the region's heavy dependence on petroleum and the fact that most CDCC members are non-producers. Conventional energy resources refer to those traditional sources of energy-petroleum, natural gas, hydro-power and thermal electricity. Included also are charcoal and fuelwood. Non-conventional energy resources are geothermal, solar, nuclear and biomass. Deals extensively with the biological energy resources of agricultural wastes under biogas, gasohol; and the utilization of agricultural wastes. Calculations show that even at 331/3% efficiency, potential electricity that could be produced from bagasse exceeds the total electricity generation of six CDCC countries. Outlines areas for immediate use of solar energy - solar powered water pumps, solar heating and the geothermal potential of the region are appraised. Recommends and outlines an energy programme involving detailed research and an investigation into the potential energy resource. The development of non-conventional energy resources precludes the possibility for the development of small scale labour intensive and rural installation.

Cites technical information and technological flow within the sub-region and with other regions as the most urgent requirements for the development of new and renewable sources of energy. Mentions three areas necessary for a national approach to developing these new sources of energy - policy formation, basic studies and development projects, and stresses the need to integrate NSRE policy with the national energy policy. The important aspect of the preparatory process for CDCC states is the opportunities it presents for a unified and well integrated approach for the support of national policies in the area of NSRE at every level.

CDCC/DD/80/3/Add.1

General

(01951)

Examines the resources situation in terms of energy and other natural resources. With respect to the former, three points stand out: the extreme reliance on petroleum as an energy source; the importance of extra-subregional influences on energy resources and the relative lack of attention to non-petroleum energy sources. The stock of natural resources in most countries is not very large and a concerted effort at resource "winning" and protection will be necessary for the 1980's. Four important areas of concern are highlighted for the 80's and these are ownership, conservation, technology and tastes and consumption patterns. Strategy considerations for the decade are outlined under four main headings: 1) the Caribbean peoples should live within the capacities of their natural and financial resources; 2) the creation of a "reverse demonstration effect"; 3) the development of appropriate technology; 4) effective regional co-operation.

 General (01970)

The control of the Caribbean shipping sector is at present largely outside the influence of the national or regional economy. A policy reappraisal therefore requires the development of a methodology that incorporates the short and long term perspectives, the reordering of priorities in terms of shipping and other terms of trade factors, the integration of shipping, trade and development policy and the separation of the endogenous and exogeneous factors in the Caribbean shipping environment. A planning perspective may take these factors into account and in the context of the peculiar features of the Caribbean shipping sector can provide a framework within which private and public policy decisions in shipping may be both evaluated and effected.

Points out that one of the key elements in the process of national development is the creation of backward and forward linkages in the economy. Outlines the nature of production linkages with respect to national and regional import substitution and the need for exporting to extra-regional markets. Major constraints are: the weakness in the food-producing sector; the pattern of consumer tastes which are influenced by metropolitan factors; the CARICOM Common External Tariff includes a large number of inputs in the conditional Duty Reduction and Exemption lists which are entirely within national rather than Community jurisdiction; the production of intermediate goods tends to be subject to economies of scale to a greater extent than final consumer goods. Concludes by identifying opportunities for national and regional linkages, assuming that the constraints can be overcome by appropriate action.

Caribbean fishery development project: report on project results, conclusions and recommendations. (Proyecto del desarrollo de la pesca en el Caribe: informe sobre los resultados, conclusiones y recomendaciones). Rome, 1972. 74 p. tbls. Terminal report.

FI: SF/REG189

General

(01976)

The Caribbean Fishery Development Project was initiated in 1965 with 3 major aspects exploratory fishing, marketing and demonstration and training. A follow-up project was approved in 1969 to continue and intensify work carried out in Phase I, with additional work involving evaluation and definition of investment opportunities. While exploratory results indicate that fishery resources available to project country participants are not vast, trawl fish snappers and related species offer considerable potential. The joint work programme in marketing and processing, led to the establishment of a useful network of properly-equipped fish marketing facilities in many countries, and demonstrated that a basis exists for a viable intra-regional trade and confirmed the development potential of shark and unutilized industrial fish. Despite the keen interest of trainees and their potential for development, there is a considerable degree of frustration at the lack of promotional outlets and career opportunities. General development problems relate to the uneven distribution of the resource base and potential for fisheries development. The broad strategy recommended concentrates on the development of modern offshore fisheries in the two geographically most favoured nations and aims to reduce the total distributive margin, promote the widespread distribution of fish, improving the latter's quality and acceptability. Specific proposals for the different countries are also outlined.

General (02000)

Data on world energy consumption and per capita income (even taking into account the reservations of using the latter as a barometer of development) indicate the intense relationship between energy use and level of development. States that if the development-energy syndrome is accepted as given, one must conclude that as far as the geography of consumption is concerned, Caribbean countries have a long way to go in terms of agricultural mechanization, machine industrialization, electrification. Note that when one looks at the energy available from indigenous sources there is little hope for optimism, Trinidad and Tobago has oil to export, the bulk of which the government does not control per se as far as availability and prices are concerned. The sudden rise in oil prices in 1973, compounded the already perilous economic conditions of Caribbean countries as a look at the impact of oil prices on selected countries, makes abundantly clear. Help has come from the World Bank, OPEC, Venezuela-Mexico (San Jose Agreement) and from Trinidad and Tobago but - energy prices will not get any cheaper. It is proposed that countries cast their vision in a three-fold way: conserve in the short-term (in areas where this is possible without hurting productivity); diversify the energy mixture in the medium term (where this is feasible and there is no loss of aggregate productivity); and turn to alternative renewable energy sources in the long-term.

Considerations on the development of a leather industry in the Eastern Caribbean. (Observaciones sobre el desarrollo de una industria de cuero en el Caribe Oriental). Port of Spain, FAO. Freedom From Hunger/Action for Development, 1977. 14 p.

General

(02015)

Outlines the socio-economic advantages of, and recent developments in, the leather industry and makes, specific proposals for action. Confirms that the market demand for leather exceeds the region's capacity to produce, underlining that the value-added on processing local hides and skin into leather represents a greater creation of wealth than that of "the assembly plant" industries proliferating in the region. By displacing leather imports the industry has the capacity to generate significant foreign exchange savings. The first attempt to organize tanners and craftsmen on a regional basis failed because, dysfunctionalities aside, the source of initiative did not come from producers, and the form of organization did not provide for future development. To date, basic training in tanning techniques has been made available and has been complemented by technical assistance from the Freedom from Hunger/Action for Development and from the Christian Action for Development in the Caribbean. The potential of the industry is reinforced by the proposed regional livestock industry being planned by CARICOM. It is proposed that the future strategy for the industry should seek to strengthen existing tanneries, improve the skills of craftsmen, provide a useful mechanism for regional consultation and coordination, and integrate the industry vertically and horizontally with related industries.

Commentary by C. Paris.
General (02440)

The concept of territorial size was a major preoccupation in the attempt by West Indian leaders to gain political independence for their respective territories. But as the author argues, the political leadership of the newly-independent states of Jamaica, Trinidad and Tobago and Barbados, actively pursued policies of dependence as a means of counterbalancing and overcoming the objective condition of small size, in their quest for economic development. Thus the post independence period in these territories saw the steady build-up of the structures of dependence which not only served to obstruct the realization of full political independence but gradually eroded whatever political independence these territories already had. The experience of Guyana is seen as exceptional. States that political independence did not bring with it any radical transformation of the political structures of these societies - the masses in the Caribbean are still waiting to achieve their independence. The Caribbean response to major international developments has been basically reformist and survival-oriented. Unless a radical restructuring of the internal economic and political structures is undertaken, linked with Third-World-wide action to do the same in relations with imperialist countries, political independence will remain a dream to be realized..

The aims of this seminar were to provide participants with the latest information on: customer requirements and trade practices affecting export packages for fresh fruit and vegetables destined for the main target markets; requirements for pre-shipment quality control; the possibilities of standardization with respect to the packaging of fruit and vegetables; and future trends in export packaging and distribution of fresh fruit and vegetables. Reports on the paper on the importance of good packaging for export which identifies problems of insufficient knowledge of package design, lack of materials and technical know-how for the domestic production of packages and which gives a checklist for the planning of packages for export. Presents the economical and technical considerations in the manufacturing and design of corrugated boxes and looks at the key points for successful entry into US and Canadian markets, legislation and tariffs being closely examined. Sea and air transportation are discussed, ideal storage conditions being the major consideration. Identifies the need for planning to be more market oriented than production oriented, and for the introduction of size grading and strict quality control standards. Recommends that package design should be adapted to requirements and tastes of buyers; the exporters should follow closely the work of related trade associations; that marketing board should play a major role in productive and promotional export; that standardization of package sizes should be introduced and that technical training in packaging technology should be carried out..

Examines the social structure of the Caribbean, characterized by the usual features of underdevelopment and the measures proposed to alleviate these problems, against which the author examines the role of women in a changing society as partners with men and as workers. Includes a summary of discussion which covers recommendations made. These are that educational training and texts be amended to remove inherent assumptions that women's roles are inferior to those of men; that family life education be incorporated at all levels; that a study be undertaken on the implications of family disruption and instability for the development of Caribbean societies and that a Regional Centre be established for collection and distribution of literature and assistance in the development of relevant programmes..

Contents that in Caribbean societies, women predominate in the service sectors such as domestic household help, sales, hotel service workers and higglering and also in the civil service, teaching and nursing. Analyses some of the reasons for the great imbalance in the labour force. Active discrimination and exploitation are evident in certain areas, but points out the attitudes of women play an important contributory role. They are socialized into believing that they must be relegated to the back seat and that leadership in all spheres belongs to the domain of men. Argues that a total change in women's positions especially in employment will only materialize with a new economic order - one that does not merely involve the transfer of resources from rich to poor but one which involves the total mobilization and transformation of our societies. In the meantime however, West Indian women have to be agents of that change and proposes some short-term proposals which can be pursued within the present economic and social structure to improve the position of women in employment. Shows the need for technological planning as a means of optimising the contribution of science and technology to development in small Caribbean type economies. While small size can be regarded as a constraint in some respects, there is much small economies can do to transform themselves through greater control and rationalization over the articulation of technology in socio-economic activity. Rejects the implication of established economic wisdom that is to the best advantage of Caribbean economies to specialize in non-technology intensive pursuits and pinpoints this role as one of the main problems affecting national development of small Caribbean economies. Transformation will involve transformation of that role and technology planning is an important pre-requisite for this. States however that technology planning must be people-oriented if it is to be effective..

Examines the role of women as responsible citizens with particular reference to participation in politics. Contends that Caribbean women find themselves today catapulted into the arena of international politics even though they have had little opportunity to engage in local and national politics. They however must be prepared to engage in politics at all levels. Looks at the role of the Caribbean Women's Association (CARIWA) and women's involvement in community and national development. Suggestions arising out of discussions as to the provision of community education, rural programmes, information dissemination, use of the mass media in the development of women are outlined. General (02378)

El seminario ofrecio una detallada explicacion a los delegados sobre las principales tareas que tendran que desempenar en el Poder Popular. A partir de 1970 empezo en Cuba el proceso de institucionalizacion de la Revolucion. Cada delegado debe reunirse una vez cada tres meses con las masas en su circunscripcion para rendir cuentas de su actividad. Ademas se debe prever alguna sesion semanal para entrevistas individuales. Se recomendo que se tratara esmeradamente al publico. Es necesario lograr mayor eficiencia y productividad, un control riguroso en el manejo de los recursos. Hay que cumplir y cuidar que todos cumplan estrictamente las leyes. Estudiar mas y promover iniciativas que ayuden a resolver problemas de servicios a la poblacion..

General (01938)

The Natural Resources Conservation Authority (NRCA) was formed in November 1974. Its main goal is to manage and preserve the natural resources of Jamaica for the benefit of citizens and future generations. The NRCA's policies are implemented through the Natural Resources Conservation Department (NRCD) the work of which is divided among five divisions: Watershed Engineering, Aquatic Resources, Recreation and Conservation, Resource Management and Management. The relationship between the environment and development is touched upon as reference is made to some environmental effects on agriculture, industry, urbanization and tourism. The main challenges faced by the NRCD in its attempt to fulfill its commitment to protect the country's natural resources are public awareness, budgetary constraints and staffing: solutions to these lay in education, planning and sanctions. Co-operation for development is considered and the Caribbean Action Plan is briefly discussed highlighting projects for immediate implementation.

Based on its preliminary investigations the Commission: proposes to undertake a pilot survey of rural areas to determine more precisely the needs and aspirations of rural women and to undertake research into existing employment opportunities for women; recognizes that women have a special place in the arts and that the need exists to harness their talents so as to make skills marketable; considers family health care, day-care centres and the procedures relating to maintenance payments as primary concerns for health and welfare. Recommendations are made concerning agriculture, health and welfare, handicraft and the arts. General (01944)

Outlines the principal trends of social and economic development in the Caribbean that are important to a broad strategy for development in the decade of the eighties, which emerged from the meeting. Defines the present crisis in Caribbean development, characterized by a pattern of frequent increases in the real price of oil which at each step leaves less for procurement of materials, for sustaining production in agriculture and industry and the continuing prospect of more deterioration of its terms of trade. This combination makes the dependence on external financing even greater. The policies, measures and actions that emerged fall into three broad groups relating to external relationships of the governments, economic planning and management and social planning and articulation.

 General (02008)

Traces the historical background to the resolution adopted by the West Indies Associated States (WISA) Council of Ministers, proposing the establishment of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS). The underlying principle for its establishment is that of uniting efforts and resources and establishing and strengthening common institutions which could serve to increase the bargaining power of Member State as regards third countries or groupings of countries. The principal institutions of the Organization are: the Authority of Heads of Government of the Member States; the Foreign Affairs Committee; the Defence and Security Committee; the Economic Affairs Committee; and the Central Secretariat. Full membership will, in the first instance, be open to WISA Member States; other States or territories in the Caribbean region may apply to become Full or Associate Members. The purposes and functions of the OECS are outlined and one of the former-foreign policy and joint overseas representation is elaborated. Existing common services under WISA will be retained while a Pool of Experts Scheme is to be developed to provide permanent, specialized technical and administrative services. Reference is made to the other provisions of the Treaty.

Low income levels and non-participation in decision-making are major problems faced by rural inhabitants and policies to improve these are outlined. Rural development policies in various ACP countries; Jamaica. (Políticas de desarrollo rural en algunos países de ACP; Jamaica). The Courier (Brussels), (57): 69-71, 1979. photos

Describes agrarian reform programmes introduced by the Jamaican government since 1973, namely Project Land Lease which has enabled the government to purchase over 100,000 acres of land for leasing to small farmers and sugar estates for the purpose of setting up sugar cooperatives, and two World Bank-funded projects aimed at resettling farm families on prepared sites: future hopes are pinned on the youth-oriented "pioneer" farms initiated in 1977. Success, measure in opportunities created for youth and profits accrued has been offset by low productivity and heavy infrastructural costs. Problems identified by the current five-year plan (1978-82) relate to land tenure and capability respectively, shortage of skilled motivated labour and insufficient incentives to farming. The agricultural strategy for the same period aims to resolve

The original completion date of the Malabar project was July 1981. The revised date is now November 1982 and this may not be met. Design and construction phases are behind schedule and there are serious defects in the contractor's execution of the works. $45.7m, representing 13.9% value of works performed, have been paid out of an estimated total of $129.8m. The contract should be terminated and the project completed by the most expeditious means, preferably by subcontracting under a strong management. Estimates for the Racing Complex rose from $72m in 1978 to $240m in 1980. Cabinet placed a ceiling of $120m on costs in 1979, but work continued although the requested progress reports were never given to the Ministry of Finance or to Cabinet. There are alternatives for the project's future, including its abandonment, recommends, however, a centralised, multi-purpose, sporting recreation and cultural facility which is deemed more suitable to present needs. A detailed outline of construction contracts including cost is given.

Compares socio-economic evaluations of Melville Hall, Castle Bruce and Geneva Estates illustrating that whereas the goals of Melville Hall and Castle Bruce projects differ, the latter experience is more relevant to the goals of the Geneva Estate project which include effective land use, employment, better standard of living and villagers' control of the land. Proposes four alternative strategies for Geneva Estate - a government operated unit, an individual leasehold settlement, a co-operative unit and a co-operative - cum-settlement unit, and constructs models for them. The major constraints are seen as the rental of land and the selection of farmers to facilitate immediate implementation of the chosen strategy..

Three large-scale projects under implementation at the end of the first country programme have retained priority, forming the nucleus of UNDP assistance during 1977-1979: the Topographic Survey, Urban and Regional Planning Project and the Forest Industries Project. It is envisaged that the Programme Reserve will be centred on the implementation of the Phase II of the Forest Industries Project, the Agricultural and the Industrial Development Projects. Other project priorities will focus on the development of veterinary services, advanced technical and vocational training and telecommunications. The country programme also includes innovative approaches for realizing technical co-operation and importance is given to investment-oriented assistance.

Focuses on the new objectives of development which adopt as their starting point the need to alleviate, and where possible eliminate poverty and lift living standards of the least privileged groups. States that the first phase of effort should therefore be to rebuild the main productive sectors of the economy and so create a structure that would ultimately satisfy the essential needs of the population. It also gives details of sectoral projects for agriculture, tourism, industry and infrastructure with projections of the anticipated impact of planned projects on employment within the state. Proposals for financing the projects as well as a listing of guidelines and measures to be adopted for effective execution of projects are included.

General

The plan projects that population will grow by 1.6 % per annum and the real GDP by 4.5% between 1968 and 1973. This is based on the assumption that crude oil production will remain at approximately 67 million barrels (1968) over the plan period. The rest of the economy will therefore have to grow by 5.8 % per annum. Manufacturing sector is projected to grow by 6% per annum, export agriculture by 4%, domestic agriculture by 6 %, construction 7%, while receipts from tourism are expected to more than double. The emphasis on fiscal, monetary and financial policies will be to create the framework for the greater mobilization of local financial resources for greater investment in both the public and private sectors. This will be achieved principally by encouraging investment and penalizing increases in consumption. Attention will also be paid to creating more locally-owned financial institutions and promoting more widespread local ownership of shares in productive activities. Over the plan period public sector development expenditures will amount to $380 million, of which $230 million will come from local sources. Of the total expenditure 69% will be for economic purposes with the remaining 31% for social and other purposes. Details proposed activities with regard to the sectors - agriculture, mining, tourism, education, public utilities and social programmes as to housing, community development, social welfare, culture and information services..

General (01856)

In the Caribbean, the brightly-feathered Imperial Amazon, the St. Lucia Parrot, the turtle and the lobster are now recognized as endangered or threatened by man's activities. The destruction of their natural habitats and the trade in their products are two of the most significant threats to the survival of species like these: several international organizations are collaborating with Caribbean Governments in exploring several approaches to the conservation of the region's wildlife. These include the development of natural parks devoted to the preservation of local fauna in natural, unspoiled habitats and the establishment of wildlife farms to meet the demand for the commercial exploitation of natural resources without depleting the wild populations of the endangered species. The strategy for managing the region's natural resources arises from the World Conservation Strategy launched by the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (IUCN), UNEP and the World Wildlife Fund (WWF). It stresses the rational use of fisheries, the development of environmental education and public awareness, the initiation of a system of marine and coastal protected areas and the enforcement of legislation for protecting endangered species. The problem of water conservation in the Caribbean is briefly discussed.

Marine pollution in the wider Caribbean area has yet to mature into a regional problem, but the intensified growth of land-based activities superimposed on economies unprepared for rapid expansion provides the rationale for the joint UNEP/ECLA Caribbean action plan: to incorporate the environmental dimension in the planning and development process. Initiated in 1977 the draft action plan encompasses alternative energy sources, marine pollution, protection of coastal zone ecosystems, management programmes for human settlements, training and natural disaster preparedness, inter-alia. Initial financing will be provided by UNEP but a regional trust fund is to be established. Other aspects of the plan include the setting up of the requisite legal framework, regional environmental and resource assessment, and the determination of environmental quality criteria suitable to tropical waters.

General (02439)

Discusses the role of the Courts under the new Constitutional system of Grenada and observes that West Indian Courts are entrusted with much more power than their counterparts in the United Kingdom. Outlines the constitutional guarantees of fundamental freedoms in accordance with the Grenadian Constitution and notes that from the outset fundamental human rights by nature are not absolute. Thus the individual's freedom of expression is curtailed by the private law of defamation. Similarly the freedom of the press is circumscribed not only by the civil law of libel but the crimes of sedition, blasphemy, obscenity and contempt. Certain powers conferred on the Governments clearly mandate them to interfere with the basic fundamental freedoms in times of public emergencies. Nevertheless persons who suffer deprivation of their right to freedom of movement if detained during a State of Emergency are entitled to some constitutional remedies as cases in the Caribbean illustrate. Finally, judicial interpretation of fundamental rights provisions is considered. Points out that there have been instances when the Courts abdicate the responsibilities conferred on them by the Constitution, but in the final analysis, it cannot be denied that the Courts have been instrumental to the protection of human rights..

Examines the debate in the UN concerning the partial decolonization of the Associated States and Grenada in particular. The Grenadian Leader of the Opposition in his petition before the UN Special Committee on Colonialism, had charged the United Kingdom with violating the principle of self-determination, objecting to the way in which the principle had been applied. The issue in contention was the applicability of UN Resolutions 1514 (XV) and 1541 (XV) to Grenada, whether these were complementary or contradictory. An analysis of these debates indicates that the same principles were employed in the arguments of the administering power for Associated Statehood on the one hand and these countries who were pressing for total decolonization and objected to the method used in the case of Grenada: disagreements in most cases centred around differences in interpretation. Through resolution 1514 (XV) the UN has hastened the decolonization process for several territories; it has also provided options to complete independence, and insisted that the final choice is decided freely by the territory in question..

The prospects for evolution are also examined as provisions were made for the inclusion of other countries in the Agreement. Executive summary of a comprehensive program to utilize wind energy for electric power generation: a proposal for a wind energy program for Barbados. (Resumen ejecutivo de un programa amplio de la utilizacion de energia eolica para la generacion de energia electrica: propuesta de programa de energia eolica para Barbados). Arlington, Va, 1980. 25 p. illus.
Submitted to the Ministry of Trade and Industry of the Government of Barbados.
General (01981)

Suggests a comprehensive analysis of the distribution of wind energy over Barbados by means of the most advanced computer processes. The product of this analysis would be a wind energy distribution chart with supporting data showing wind energy available as a function of location and time, and it will eventually form the basis for structuring a wind energy programme which will aim to meet a significant portion of the long term electrical energy demands of Barbados. Diagrams of 200 and 1000 KW wind turbines are included.

 East Caribbean farmers learn new techniques. (Agricultores del Caribe oriental aprenden nuevas tecnicas). The Courier (Brussels), (57): 86 p., 1979.
 General (01863)

Reports on an agricultural project launched by the Commonwealth Fund for Technical Co-operation to increase fruit and vegetable production in Montserrat by introducing new techniques and varieties. The project involves the establishment of demonstration plots in seven districts and these are worked by farmers under the supervision of agricultural officers. Selected crops are tomatoes, okra, peas, cabbages, cucumbers, peppers, carrots, onions, avocados and citrus fruit while additional research is being carried out on nut crops and mangoes. It is hoped that the project will help farmers become self-sufficient and commercially-minded and there are plans for initiating a similar project in St. Kitts.

Submitted to the Ministry of Public Works and Communication of the Government of Montserrat.
 General (01980)

States that the location of Montserrat enables her to extract a high percentage of its electrical energy needs from the wind. Outlines the first step as being a combination of scientific studies with one year of operating experience with a large turbine actually producing power from the electrical grid and using the time available during the operating demonstration period to plan an alternative system of wind energy for Montserrat. Some of the studies include a wind energy distribution analysis, a topographic analysis of terrain, wind speed enhancement and an electrical demand study. Included in the appendix are proposals for these studies.

 Report on preparation of substantive aspects of a Caribbean Workshop in modern techniques of foreign language teaching and system of national workshops organized around a Caribbean language teaching resource group. (Informe sobre la preparacion de los aspectos sustantivos de un taller Caribeno sobre tecnicas modernas de ensenanza de idiomas y un sistema de talleres nacionales mediante un grupo caribeno de profesores de idiomas). St. Augustine, UWI, 1979. 33 p. tbls.

General (01826)

The consultant was mandated to prepare substantive aspects of a programme to include a regional workshop on modern approaches to foreign language teaching, and a system of national level workshops organized around an itinerant team of teachers. The visits that were made to several CDCC countries, together with postal and cable communication, were sufficient to enable the substantive aspects of a workshop - participants, teachers, locale, programme - to be prepared. The Dominican Republic agreed to host the workshop the proposed date of which is April-May 1980. Teachers have been informed and are preparing their contributions which are being reproduced by the secretarial services made available by the Dominican Republic. UNESCO has been requested to fund the workshop. As regards the later phases of the scheme, a large nucleus of teacher-trainers has been identified and will be expanded by the holding of the workshop. Finally, there is sufficient commitment on the part of certain countries for follow-up local workshops to be held in the near future.

Report. (Informe). 1977. 70 p. Presented to: Human Resources Meeting, St. Augustine, TT, 14-15 April 1977.

General

(01838)

The meeting was convened by the Institute of Social and Economic Research (ISER) to consider the Human Resources Research Programme which has been adopted as its main focus of operation for the present and immediate future. It was agreed that further emphasis should be placed on the regional character of the programme, and that the approach should be region-specific and problem-specific. Suggestions for studies which should be undertaken within the framework of the programme are listed. Research staff of the institute have already initiated several projects. These include: the compilation of an inventory of projects and a bibliography of existing publications on human resources in the region; sociological aspects of labour productivity and economic development; a projection of demand and supply of manpower in the region; a statistical analysis of the labour force in the region; and development of a human resources development theory. Other discussions focused on a proposed seminar on human resources, financial and other support for the programme, and the possibility of involving graduate students in the overall programme. Appendices.

Existing agricultural conditions are reviewed and mechanization of small farms, training of farmers in the care and handling of machinery, problems in mechanization, infrastructure for operation of agricultural mechanized programmes are identified as major areas for considerations by FAO and Ministry personnel. Trial mechanization in the preparation of land on small farms and in the cultivation of upland rice is carried out and recommendations as to handling and maintenance of machinery, research on agricultural mechanization systems, improved financing, training and co-operation among farmers are made. The owner-operated family size farm with crops grown on more suitable land is seen as the logical unit. Training in handling and maintenance of machinery is identified for the second phase.

The first section of the report deals with the administration of the council followed by an account of its activities during the period under review. These include: contribution to national planning; 2 surveys of S+T potential in Trinidad and Tobago; preparatory work on a Science Register; a national science exhibition; assistance to the UWI, and development of an information service. The Council established and maintained contact with local and international organizations: lists of conferences attended and visitors received from abroad are provided. Two sources of funding are reported: government provision and OAS assistance. Future plans involve the formulation of a policy for science; a public education programme on the activities of the NSAC; efforts to solicit more private sector involvement, and supervision of research into desirable areas, hitherto neglected or overlooked.

Reports on the project which attempts to analyze available historical data in search of the peculiar styles of social development in the Caribbean, in the expectation that it will offer the pattern of social structural changes characteristic of the subregion and identify the substantive elements which account for Caribbean identity. States that at present, notwithstanding the severe lack of resources, the report on Dominica is underway while the one on St. Lucia is completed as far as bibliographical data are concerned. Notes that the analysis on St. Lucian history highlights a novel concept of development and social relations expressed through the numerous movements staged by the populations. At the centre of this St. Lucian formula one finds a stubborn effort to protect and salvage a legacy of independence and distinctiveness. Concludes that modernization and development will be viable only if it does not oppose such legacy.

Report on the period 1969/74. (Informe para el periodo

General (01847)

Analyses the economic development of the Netherlands Antilles between 1968-74 concluding that the prospects at the end of the period were unfavourable. Identifies the major features of the period as the involvement of labour in socio-economic development, an increased number of offshore companies and tax proceeds thereof and the incidence of development aid to adjust the balance of payments. Comments that the basic economic structure within the period was weak because of growth being based too much on infrastructural improvement projects creating only temporary employment; unstable public finance; world recession; dependence on oil and tourism; movement of exchange rates and import prices and deficits in government budgets. Recommends centralization of the monetary system for balanced development of all the islands of the Netherlands Antilles. Includes annual statements from 1969 to 1974 and statistical tables.

National survey of doctors, nurses and social workers on liberalisation of the Barbados abortion law. (Encuesta nacional de medicos, enfermeras y trabajadores sociales sobre la liberalizacion de la ley de abortos de Barbados). West Indian Medical Journal 26 (2): 1-11, 1977.

General (01917)

The survey results show that were a few conscientious objectors; that eighty-five percent of doctors and social workers thought the law should be liberalised as against thirty percent of nurses. Eighteen percent of doctors and social workers and sixty percent of nurses felt that women would lose interest in family planning. Sixty percent of doctors and ninety percent of nurses held reservations about abortion on demand. It also points to the need for advanced planning and education to minimize problems which may arise out Abortion Law Reform.

This is with regard to data on national accounts, trade, the consumer price index, industrial production, vital statistics, migration and the balance of payments (estimates). With the assistance of a consultant on agricultural statistics, work was done on the establishment of a frame from which samples will be drawn to produce current agricultural statistics. The bureau also participated in the World Fertility Survey and has initiated planning for the 1980 Population Census. During the period technical assistance was received from international and regional agencies and the United States Agency for International Development..

Staff members also served on national committees and attended international and regional meetings. Inadequate space and staff shortage continues to be a handicap to the Department but these were offset by the academic experience enjoyed by students and staff during the year. Se presenta un estudio de la situación económica y social, y de la estructura agraria que le servía de soporte, de Cuba al triunfo de la Revolución. Cuba era un país agrario pero no campesino, debido a que la producción azucarera determinó el surgimiento y desarrollo de un proletariado agrícola con un peso relativo mayoritario en el total de la población rural y vinculado a la actividad económica básica del sector agropecuario. La economía agraria era una economía monetaria.

Coffee industry of Jamaica. (Industria cafetera de Jamaica). Kingston, UWI. Institute of Social and Economic Research, 1975. 82 p. tbls. 99 refs.
General (02012)

Since World War II the coffee industry has come under public management and the study evaluates its performance in this period. The social objectives pursued through the reconstruction of the industry were: increased output of coffee beans; improvements in the quality of the product; efficiency in the use of the resources; redistribution of income in favour of small farmers; and increased national savings. The structure of production and marketing of coffee is described and hypotheses about the decision making units in the industry are developed and tested. The results suggest that Jamaican coffee growers respond rationally to economic incentives. With respect to the development of processing facilities by the Coffee Industry Board, an investigation is made of the responsiveness of the quality of coffee output to the charges in market prices. An analysis of the behaviour of long run average cost of processing with size suggests that the organization of processing facilities is consistent with cost-minimizing behaviour. The effects of the financial policies of the Coffee Industry Board on the social objectives pursued indicates that the former have contributed significantly to growth of national savings. The emphasis on savings, however, constrained the attainment of other social objectives such as increasing output and income of coffee growers and the earning of foreign exchange.

Swallowing the IMF medicine in the seventies. Development Dialogue 2: 55-74, 1980. 6 refs.
General (02422)

Analyses the impact of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) programmes for Third World countries with payments deficits by studying the cases of Jamaica, Peru and Portugal. Compares the nature of the problems of each country and the IMF's involvement, and recognizes that IMF diagnoses and prescriptions always involve similar policies on fiscal management which have negative economic, social and political impacts in both national and international contexts. Concludes that IMF stabilization programmes are unsuitable to Third World development and are not politically or ideologically neutral and recommends that any strategy to adjust balance of payments must take account of the fundamental origins of the deficits, must be formulated on a long-term basis and must be free of the current level of conditionality which weakens the capacity of the government to plan for transformation and manage the economy and which encourages further dependency..

Case study of the Project UNDP/RLA/71/142.
General (02016)

Traces the evolution of a joint UNDP/UNICEF project from its source starting with a problem of catering appropriately for youngsters of secondary age, through its five most active years to the present. The main aims of the project were to build up resource materials for use in teacher training, and to foster development of the curriculum for 1 to 15 year old pupils, particularly in the areas of language, mathematics and science. This was achieved by purchasing books and audio materials for the libraries of the teachers' colleges, the teachers' centres and of the Institute of Education and by conducting workshops in seven fields: language arts, mathematics, integrated science, educational administration, foundation studies in education, librarianship, and educational technology. The outcomes of the workshops are elaborated in separate sections of the study which concludes with an assessment of some of the project's achievements.

(Actuacion del sector agricola de Barbados 1946-75). Cavehill, UWI, 11 p. Presented to: Seminar on Project Analysis, BB, April 1977.
General (01997)

The paper shows that the most significant factor which has influenced the performance of the agricultural sector has undoubtedly been a system of resource allocation where the plantation has been the dominant unit. It concludes that the development of the agricultural sector is critical to the development of the economy because it continues to be a substantial sector, a major earner of foreign exchange, and employer of a sizeable labour force. Modernization of agriculture helps to increase productivity, encourages flexibility of resource use, raises real incomes in farming, and generates a potential stimulus to the growth of the non-agricultural sectors.

Contrabando y trato negrera en el Caribe. (La Habana),

General (02382)

Se describen las características y principales hechos del comercio ilícito de esclavos, en el periodo de 1807 a 1847 en America, especialmente en Brasil e Islas del Caribe. En muchos países se firmaron tratados y convenios internacionales suprimiendo la esclavitud en esa etapa. No obstante, la trata de esclavos se siguió desarrollando. El contrabando en gran escala organizado por los norteamericanos tenía la colaboración de los armadores de Francia y Portugal. Esto coincidía con el desarrollo del monocultivo azucarero en la economía colonial cubana denominada "época de oro". En muchos países, diferentes personalidades luchaban por la abolición de la esclavitud. El presidente Lincoln, de EE.UU logro dominar el feudalismo esclavista en el Sur. La trata de negros recibió un golpe mortal en el Caribe, aunque en Cuba continuó a un ritmo mas lento hasta 1873..

El desarrollo debe concebirse como el proceso de cambio de la estructura socioeconómico que garantiza un crecimiento sostenido de la riqueza material y espiritual de la sociedad; aunque el crecimiento de la riqueza material es necesario para el desarrollo, es un error identificar esos dos conceptos. El subdesarrollo es una estructura económica deformada que frena e impide el desarrollo y que se asocia con un bajo nivel de desenvolvimiento de las fuerzas productivas. Se explica como surgen los países subdesarrollados y su relación con el moderno sistema colonial. Posteriormente, se desarrollan los siguientes epígrafes: características generales de una economía subdesarrollada; algunas teorías que intentan explicar el fenómeno del subdesarrollo; y los obstáculos para el desarrollo económico..

General (01799)

Comprises a select list of documents pertaining to education in 16 English-speaking Caribbean territories, covering the period 1940 to early 1976. The focus of the bibliography is on the efforts of the region to forge educational systems which support and enhance national goals and aspirations. Much of the material is therefore unpublished and ephemeral and has been included to show the new thinking and innovations in administration and curriculum design (materials generally excluded are syllabuses, curricula guides, workbooks, textbooks, speeches and addresses, etc.). The material is arranged in broad subject categories. Publications generally descriptive of the educational system of a country (including legislation and statistical reports) have been put in the country subdivision.
More specific subject categories included are: administration; child study; curriculum development; education and national development; education of West Indian immigrant children; educational technology; examinations; family life education;
guidance; handicapped; levels of education; national youth services; parent-teacher relations; planning; private schools; psychology of adolescence; radio and television in education; research; school libraries; statistics; subject teaching; teacher education; teachers and teaching; teachers' organizations; teaching methods; tests and measurement; textbooks; UWI; and UWI. Los modelos economico-matematicos constituyen una sintesis de lo mas avanzado en la tecnica economica, la matematica y la cibernetica. Permiten llegar a la solucion de una enorme variedad de problemas economicos y de planificacion. La utilizacion de estos modelos y la computacion en la planificacion y direccion de la economia nacional, significa no solo cambios cuantitativos sino tambien cambios cualitativos. Se exponen los principios fundamentales de un sistema de modelos economico-matematicos en la produccion agropecuaria. Se explican las caracteristicas esenciales de los modelos de pronostico para largo plazo, de planificacion perspectiva, de planificacion anual y de planificacion operativa.

 Notas sobre el proceso de planificacion en Cuba. Economia y Desarrollo (La Habana), 29: 9-25, Mayo-Junio 1975. Presented to: Congreso Interamericano de Planificacion, PA, 1974.
 General (02346)

En Cuba la planificacion es el instrumento que regula el movimiento de las proporciones economicas. El plan unico de la economia nacional constituye una integracion de planes por ramas, categorias, territorios, para formar un sistema. En la elaboracion del plan se utilizan tres metodos fundamentales: analiticos, de coeficientes y de balances. La estrategia de desarrollo que se persigue en dada periodo expresa el conjunto de los objetivos sociales economicos y politicos. El plan anual es el instrumento basico para la direccion de la produccion y los servicios. Es confeccionado a partir del diagnostico general de la economia, los objetivos trazados en la estrategia y el plan multianual y las directivas politico-economicas concretas del ano para el cual se confecciona. Se explican, ademas, las bases de la planificacion en Cuba y el marco institucional de la planificacion. La direccion de la economia es una tarea en la que participan todos los trabajadores, pero compete al Estado implantarla..

En la estructuración escalonada de los procesos de planificación en la práctica de la dirección económica se utilizan ciertos mecanismos de cómputo relacionados con la agrupación y agregación de la información base del plan: la elaboración de índices agregados del plan, correspondientes al nivel de decisión dado, y su posterior desagregación en dependencia del nivel de ejecución. Toda agregación implica pérdida de información. Por tanto, los procesos de agregación deben ser considerados como procesos iterativos de ajuste que garanticen la correspondencia entre el modelo global detallado y el modelo agregado del sistema económico. En el artículo se presenta y demuestra la convergencia de un método iterativo de agregación para la solución de modelos lineales de optimización..

General (02505)

This paper discusses types of non-response encountered during household surveys, and methods for handling the problem of non-response. Types of non-response identified are refusal, not-at-home, unsuitable for interview, not found, and lost-schedule. Seven methods for dealing with non-response are highlighted,: call-back, subsampling, improved procedure, estimating the effect of non-response, substitution, replacement procedure, and the Politz-Simmons Method. The organization of its permanent field staff has enabled the Jamaica Department of Statistics to keep non-response, within acceptable limits, but as is pointed out in the paper, it might soon become necessary to deal directly with the problem. One method suggested is intensive publicizing of each survey. The paper concludes that non-response can be minimized if : (a) a proper and scientific sample is drawn; (b) call-back and follow-ups are included as an integral part of the survey in design and estimation of costs; (c) only eligible elements are included as non-response; and (d) a division is made between "temporarily available and unavoidable" units.

SS-80 Conf. 619/4

Limited

(01986)

Discusses in an abstract manner how social science theory may benefit from studies in Suriname and the English-speaking Caribbean. Gives several approaches to the concept of the Caribbean - plantation society, pluralism, acculturation, normative censuses, race relations. Points out that many are capable of diverse application, many overlap, all are inter-disciplinary. Meaningful research has resulted from the multi-disciplinary approach, while there have been problems because of the overlapping of some, and this leads to the question of whether the perspectives can be graded in order of importance and if the order will remain constant whatever the research approach, and are the perspectives clearly discriminated and defined. Asks several questions seeking to find out if Caribbean societies can be explained through these approaches, some of which e.g. pluralism and normative consensus are so diametrically opposed. Questions whether the Caribbean should be regarded as periphery of the capitalist system and studied as part of a global system. Says that a synthesizing social theory for the Caribbean, given its many differences is a moot point. Concludes that any theory developed for Caribbean studies should aim at improving the quality of life in the region.

Estimated price is about US$6,000 and it has been designed to run for 10 to 15 years without major structural deterioration. In terms of performance the total collector area of the drier is 21.2 sq metres, and the unit should dry up to 150 kg of fresh crop per day depending on the crop and the amount of sunlight received. The presence of a rock bed unit ensures that the unit continues to operate during cloudy periods, and on hot sunny days it should continue to operate for about 2 hours after sunset.

Tamano y localizacion del proyecto de inversion para una demanda constante. Economia y Desarrollo (La Habana), 25: 92-107, Septiembre-Octubre 1974. diags
General (02379)

Se analiza como influyen determinados factores en la amplitud y localizacion del proyecto de inversion para una demanda constante. Como base se toma un modelo simplificado de

2 localizaciones. Se explica el modelo a traves de un ejemplo numerico, el cual se generaliza y se le adicionan nuevos elementos. Se dan los supuestos iniciales del modelo que ofrece condiciones en las que el costo de produccion total del sistema es una cantidad fija. Por tanto, el problema se reduce en hallar el volumen de produccion de cada localidad que minimiza el costo total de transporte del sistema. Las explicaciones numericas se ilustran con 8 graficos. Al final se resumen cinco posibles soluciones de acuerdo con determinadas condiciones..
