CONSIDERACIONES GENERALES

El estudio de las relaciones económicas internacionales de América Latina que emana del programa de trabajo de la CEPAL, requiere de un vasto acopio estadístico, veraz y oportuno, máxime si se considera que las estadísticas de comercio exterior, por tener su origen en los sistemas administrativos aduaneros, se compilan mensualmente. Consecuentemente, la oportunidad de las estadísticas es condición de primera importancia a considerar en la preparación de estudios o planes de desarrollo.

Por otra parte, un diagnóstico amplio de la evolución del sector externo latinoamericano, como el que persigue este documento, requiere que las estadísticas sean satisfactorias respecto a su cobertura, su variedad y detalle y su comparabilidad internacional.

En torno a esas condiciones que es dable exigir de las estadísticas, al inicio de este documento se tuvieron muy en cuenta las limitaciones que en ese campo aún subsisten en algunos países de la región. No obstante, durante el avance del trabajo se pudo constatar que si bien en muchos casos hubo progresos, en cambio en otros se encontraron diversos problemas que demuestran que las estadísticas requieren más atención de la que se les asigna en la región.

Al formular este juicio, no se intenta desconocer la influencia que en el desarrollo de las estadísticas de comercio exterior tienen algunos factores como los sistemas administrativos impuestos por las aduanas, los sistemas operativos que rigen el comercio internacional o los movimientos de integración regional, que separadamente o bien en su conjunto podrían explicar tanto los avances ya logrados en la estadística como también su estado insatisfactorio.^{1/}

Empero, aún teniendo en cuenta la influencia de esos factores, es notorio que lo que se necesita primordialmente para mejorar las estadísticas es que los países asignen al desarrollo de esa actividad recursos humanos, financieros y técnicos adecuados, tendientes a lograr una organización administrativa eficiente.

A la luz de la experiencia recogida en la preparación de este trabajo se hizo evidente el estado insatisfactorio de los datos. Así, por ejemplo, respecto a la oportunidad, al iniciarse 1984 no estaban disponibles datos correspondientes al año 1982 de ningún país latinoamericano miembro de la CEPAL (exportaciones según productos y países de destino; importaciones según productos y países de procedencia). Más aún, respecto al año 1981, por no estar disponibles las informaciones de seis países de la región, los datos se derivaron de las estadísticas compiladas por la Organización de Cooperación y de Desarrollo Económico (OCDE).

^{1/} Para una discusión detallada de los factores que condicionan el desarrollo de las estadísticas de comercio exterior, véase Mario Movarec, "Estadísticas del sector externo para la planificación del desarrollo: ¿Tarea de estadísticos y planificadores?". Revista de la CEPAL N° 11, Santiago, Chile, agosto 1980.

Con relación a las otras condiciones que se precisa que cumplan las estadísticas -veracidad, cobertura, variedad y detalle- en algunos casos la situación es también insatisfactoria, ya sea con relación a su cobertura o a la valoración de la información, por lo que fue necesario ajustar los valores estadísticos correspondientes.

1. Objetivos del documento

El objetivo principal de este documento es el de llenar una sentida necesidad de información sobre la dirección y la estructura del comercio exterior latinoamericano, que facilite la preparación de estudios para cuantificar las relaciones externas de América Latina, dando así cumplimiento a la Resolución 437(XIX) de la CEPAL, sobre Acceso a las Fuentes de Información (Sesión 217a., 15 de mayo de 1981).

Se han elaborado matrices de exportación e importación para 25 países latinoamericanos miembros de la CEPAL, compatibles con las matrices del comercio mundial que publica la Oficina de Estadística de las Naciones Unidas, tanto en la agrupación de las zonas coparticipes, como en la clasificación de los productos transados (véase Monthly Bulletin of Statistics, Special Table: C, World Trade by Commodity Classes and Regions).

2. Fuentes de Información

Las estadísticas oficiales de comercio exterior de los países latinoamericanos constituyen la fuente de información de las matrices. Cuando no estuvieron disponibles, los datos se obtuvieron derivándolos de las estadísticas compiladas por los países miembros de la OCDE.

3. Países latinoamericanos

Los países latinoamericanos miembros de la CEPAL considerados en el documento son los del Cuadro 1. Se han determinado, además, matrices correspondientes a las exportaciones, importaciones y saldos comerciales para las siguientes agrupaciones regionales:

6. Ajuste a los valores estadísticos

La Oficina de Estadística de las Naciones Unidas, así como algunos organismos subregionales de integración en América Latina, mantienen en vigencia un conjunto de recomendaciones internacionales para compilar las estadísticas de comercio exterior, cuyos propósitos son facilitar la comparabilidad internacional. Sin embargo, en algunos países esas recomendaciones no siempre pueden aplicarse porque lo impiden algunas disposiciones administrativas de las aduanas o ciertas normas establecidas para comercializar los productos. En la práctica, dichas disposiciones y normas administrativas y de comercialización afectan los registros estadísticos de varios países, incidiendo en la valoración de las exportaciones de productos como el petróleo, los minerales, el banano, etc.

Por esas causas, en algunos países se producen diferencias entre los valores de las estadísticas de aduana y los que registra el Balance de Pagos, lo que, a su vez, contribuye a que sean discrepantes los datos del comercio recíproco entre pares de países.

Con el fin de presentar en este documento información depurada y coherente, se procedió a ajustar, cuando fue necesario, los valores estadísticos basados en los sistemas administrativos aduaneros afectados por las causas señaladas anteriormente, tomando como base los registros correspondientes del Balance de Pagos. Dicho ajuste abarcó al valor total del comercio, así como también a los valores por productos y zonas coparticipes, utilizando para ese efecto las estadísticas de los países contrapartes compiladas por la OCDE.

Respecto a la valoración de las estadísticas oficiales, en todos los países latinoamericanos, las exportaciones son FOB y las importaciones CIF, con excepción de la República Dominicana, cuyos datos están sobre base FOB.

7. Datos derivados

En el Cuadro 1 se observa que para varios países de la región, en ciertos años, no se dispone de información oficial del comercio exterior según productos y países coparticipes, lo que obligó a utilizar las estadísticas compiladas por la OCDE para derivar de esas fuentes los datos del intercambio entre los países desarrollados y los países latinoamericanos correspondientes.

Las estadísticas de la OCDE se utilizaron, en esos casos, para estimar la estructura en grandes categorías de productos del intercambio del país latinoamericano con el conjunto de los países desarrollados. Esas estadísticas sirvieron, asimismo, para estimar, además, la estructura del comercio con la C.E.E., Estados Unidos, Canadá y Japón. Las estructuras porcentuales que se obtuvieron con ese método se aplicaron a los valores efectivos de exportación o importación total según destinos y procedencias compiladas por los países latinoamericanos, asegurando así la comparabilidad histórica de las series de cada país.

A modo de ejemplo, en el Cuadro 2 se presentan los datos de las estructuras del intercambio del Brasil con la Comunidad Europea, Estados Unidos, Canadá y Japón en 1980. Las estructuras porcentuales, según categoría de productos, fueron calculadas con base a estadísticas oficiales del Brasil (columnas A) y con base a estadísticas del país o región copartícipe (columnas B).

No obstante las diferencias que implícitamente pueden contener los registros del país exportador respecto a los registros de los países contrapartes importadores (diferencias en el momento del registro de una exportación y su correspondiente registro en el país importador, en la valuación de la exportación FOB y la importación CIF, etc.) las estructuras que resultan de utilizar fuentes del Brasil y de los países copartícipes de su comercio -ambas fuentes corresponden a registros efectivos del comercio- dan un buen nivel de aproximación, lo que permite recurrir a las estadísticas de los países desarrollados cuando no hay información disponible de los países latinoamericanos.

Hay que tener presente que si ocurriera un cambio importante en la estructura del comercio de un país latinoamericano para el que no se dispone de información, al recurrir a las estadísticas de los países copartícipes, esas estadísticas registrarían efectivamente dicho cambio de estructura, de modo que el método permite llenar los vacíos de información con niveles de aproximación aceptables.

Las corrientes comerciales de América Latina con los países desarrollados representaron en 1982 el 65% de su comercio total. Consecuentemente, el 35% restante corresponde al comercio con la propia región latinoamericana, con otros países en desarrollo y con los países de economía centralmente planificada. La estructura del comercio con estas regiones fue estimada para los países latinoamericanos sin información.

8. Contenido de la información

Las informaciones que contiene este documento comprenden las siguientes matrices:

a) Matrices básicas

Se incluyen, en primer término, las matrices básicas, según tipo de comercio: matrices de las exportaciones, las importaciones y los saldos comerciales de las agrupaciones regionales especificadas en el punto 3, y también de cada país latinoamericano, según regiones copartícipes y grandes categorías de productos para 1970, 1975, 1979, 1980, 1981 y 1982.

Cada matriz básica se registra en dólares corrientes.

A = Según estadísticas del Brasil

B = Según estadísticas del país o región copartícipe.

Las matrices correspondientes a los saldos comerciales se han obtenido como diferencia entre las matrices de exportación, con base FOB, y las de importación con base CIF. En consecuencia, los saldos comerciales de cada país latinoamericano con el mundo, tienden a ser mayores cuando son deficitarios y menores cuando son superavitarios, que aquellos que registra el Balance de Pagos, cuya valuación de las importaciones es FOB.

Otra consideración de importancia que debe tenerse en cuenta en las matrices de los saldos comerciales de América Latina, la ALADI y el Mercado Común Centroamericano, se refiere a los saldos del comercio con la propia región que dichas matrices registran.

Desde un punto de vista teórico, las corrientes comerciales entre dos países, A y B deberían originar registros iguales en los dos países, puesto que lo que el país A exporta al país B, es lo que este país importa desde el país A. Asimismo, las exportaciones de B hacia A deberían corresponder con las importaciones de A desde B. Sin embargo, se reconoce que se producen diferencias, a veces considerables, en los registros del comercio recíproco entre pares de países, motivadas por las características propias del comercio internacional, (varía el momento del registro en el país exportador e importador, difiere la valuación de la exportación FOB con la importación CIF, etc.) así como también por deficiencias en los registros estadísticos originadas en varias causas (registros con cobertura incompleta, valuación con precios de referencia en vez de precios efectivos, valoración aduanera estimada del transporte y los seguros, etc.). Del mismo modo, lo que una región exporta a la propia región debería corresponder con lo que ésta registra como importaciones desde sí misma. Por lo tanto, si las importaciones se registraran también sobre base FOB, teóricamente, el saldo del comercio intrarregional debería ser cero. Como las importaciones se han registrado en las matrices sobre base CIF, también desde un punto de vista teórico, el saldo comercial debería ser equivalente al costo de los seguros y fletes del comercio intrarregional. Sin embargo, no puede asumirse que los saldos de dicho comercio que registran las matrices de América Latina, la ALADI y el Mercado Común Centroamericano correspondan a los costos de transportes y seguros, por las discrepancias originadas en el registro de los datos entre los países de la región.

b) Matrices complementarias de exportación

Con base a las matrices básicas en dólares corrientes, se han obtenido las siguientes matrices complementarias:

i) Distribución porcentual según categoría de productos de las exportaciones a cada región copartícipe.

Los valores porcentuales de estas matrices dan a conocer los cambios que ocurren entre los distintos años del período, en la estructura de los bienes que se exportan a cada región copartícipe.

ii) Distribución porcentual según destinos de las exportaciones de cada categoría de productos.

iii) Ritmo de crecimiento de las exportaciones según destino y tipos de bienes.

Estas matrices presentan las tasas de crecimiento o decrecimiento de las exportaciones a cada región copartícipe, según tipos de bienes. Las tasas corresponden al promedio anual acumulativo entre los años 1970-1975; 1975-1979; 1975-1980; 1970-1980. También se han calculado las variaciones anuales entre 1979-1980; 1980-1981 y 1981-1982.

c) Matrices complementarias de importación

Para las importaciones también se han calculado matrices complementarias con base a las matrices básicas en dólares corrientes:

i) Distribución porcentual según categoría de productos de las importaciones desde cada región copartícipe.

Los valores porcentuales de estas matrices dan a conocer los cambios que ocurren entre los distintos años del período, en la estructura de los bienes que se importan desde cada región copartícipe.

ii) Distribución porcentual según procedencia de las importaciones de cada categoría de productos.

iii) Ritmo de crecimiento de las importaciones según procedencia y tipo de bienes.

Estas matrices presentan las tasas de variación de las importaciones desde cada región copartícipe según tipos de bienes. Las tasas corresponden al promedio anual acumulativo entre los años 1970-1975; 1975-1979; 1975-1980 y 1970-1980. También se han calculado las variaciones anuales entre 1979-1980, 1980-1981 y 1981-1982.

d) Participación porcentual de cada país en las exportaciones de la región

Se ha preparado, además, un conjunto de matrices tendientes a determinar la participación de cada país latinoamericano en las exportaciones totales de América Latina. Estas muestran el porcentaje con el que contribuye cada uno de los 25 países en las exportaciones totales de América Latina, según destinos y categorías de productos.

Asimismo, se han determinado matrices que muestran la participación porcentual de cada país en las exportaciones del conjunto de las regiones de las cuales forma parte. Así, por ejemplo, de Colombia se ha determinado matrices de su participación porcentual respecto a las exportaciones totales de América Latina y, además, respecto a su participación en las exportaciones totales de los países latinoamericanos no exportadores de petróleo, de la ALADI y del Grupo Andino.

Las regiones consideradas para dicho fin son las especificadas en el punto 3.

e) Participación porcentual de cada país en las importaciones de la región

Para las importaciones también se ha determinado un conjunto similar de matrices de la participación porcentual de cada país en los totales regionales que les corresponde.
