The ECLAC Ad Hoc Committee on Population and Development and the Statistical Conference of the Americas of ECLAC have agreed to hold a joint session on population, territory and development at their respective meetings in Quito on 4 July. The Latin American and Caribbean Demographic Centre (CELADE) - Population Division of ECLAC has prepared the document Population, territory and sustainable development (LC/L.3474(CEP.2/3)) evaluating the links between location and population mobility and sustainable development according to different operational definitions of territory, focusing on the specific characteristics of Latin America and the Caribbean. It also identifies arguments and evidence on the advantages and opportunities of intense, rapid urbanization, as well as the problems, difficulties and challenges. The document ends with conclusions and recommendations and points out that the difficulties caused by population concentration in the region are not just inevitable problems. Rather, they constitute challenges that can be overcome, albeit temporarily, if the concentration is gradual, the economy is solid and the country has technical capacities, strong governance and public policy planning.

A representative of CELADE-Population Division of ECLAC will present the document and the Chair of the Executive Committee of the Statistical Conference will comment on it, especially its implications for the development of official statistics in the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean.

7. Agreements

The Conference will adopt decisions as appropriate.

8. Report of the Rapporteur and closure of meeting

The Chair of the Executive Committee will close the meeting.
