INTRODUCTION

Preliminaire

Le Système d'information des Caraïbes pour la planification économique et sociale (CARISPLAN) a été établi en 1979 par le Centre de Documentation des Caraïbes de la CEPALC en réponse à un mandat des gouvernements membres du Comité Caraïbéen de Développement et de Coopération (CDCC). C'est le premier réseau sectoriel à être établi à l'intérieur du Système d'Information des Caraïbes.

La première réunion des officiels de la planification Caraïbéenne qui s'est déroulée à la Havane en janvier 1979 a décidé de renforcer le Centre de Documentation des Caraïbes dans ses efforts pour établir le CARISPLAN et de relier le Système à l'INFOPLAN, (le Système d'information pour la planification en Amérique latine), développé par le Centre latino-américain de la CEPALC pour la Documentation Economique et Sociale (CLADES).

L'objectif du CARISPLAN est de faciliter le développement des Caraïbes et les activités de coopération, de fournir un service d'information approprié et à jour aux dirigeants politiques, planificateurs de projets de développement socio-économiques, administrateurs de tels projets et programmes, chercheurs et professeurs de la planification du développement, financiers qui apportent les ressources et l'assistance technique, communicateurs d'information à propos de ces programmes, personnel d'information et de bibliothèques.

Le CARISPLAN représente l'effort d'une coopération entre les pays des Caraïbes. Les unités d'information des agences de la planification nationale (ou unités désignées par elles) tiennent lieu de point de mire. C'est la responsabilité du point de mire national d'identifier et de rassembler la documentation nationale appropriée au champ d'activités du réseau, de préparer les résumés bibliographiques et analytiques selon des normes établies, de repertorier et classer les documents en vue d'une récupération facile. Le Centre de Documentation des Caraïbes est responsable de la préparation des registres bibliographiques des documents produits par la CEPALC et des documents concernant les études sur les Caraïbes en général. Les agences caraïbéennes d'intégration et les institutions spécialisées dans les problèmes des Caraïbes et les agences internationales qui opèrent dans les pays du CDCC, doivent participer au Système en fournissant des rapports bibliographiques concernant les informations qu'elles produisent pour elles-mêmes.

Les documents bibliographiques de tous les centres participants sont envoyés au Centre de Documentation des Caraïbes pour inclusion dans la base régionale des données. Les articles pour Les Sommaires du CARISPLAN sont sélectionnés. Une copie vidéo est préparée, utilisant les facilités de l'ordinateur du Centre et le logiciel MINISIS.

Le Centre de Documentation des Caraïbes a reçu une aide financière du Centre International du Développement de la Recherche (CRDI) pour lui permettre de fournir des services de formation et de conseils qui garantiront la participation active des Centres nationaux et de produire Les Sommaires du CARISPLAN.

Les Sommaires du CARISPLAN c'est une publication semestrielle de résumé destinée à diffuser de l'information bibliographique sur la documentation de la planification et du développement des Caraïbes telle qu'elle est fournie par les Centres participants. Cette publication aide l'utilisateur à identifier la documentation existante et à estimer la valeur de la documentation disponible et son rapport avec le domaine d'intérêt de l'intéressé. Il aide, en outre, l'utilisateur à comprendre la situation présente et les tendances du développement socio-économique des Caraïbes et leur implication pour le futur. Il permet un inventaire beaucoup plus large des ressources disponibles à n'importe laquelle des composantes d'information dans le Système. Le Centre de Documentation des Caraïbes fournit un service gratuit de mise à disposition de documents (photocopies ou microfiches) aux institutions gouvernementales des Caraïbes et aux organisations régionales.

Limites

Les limites du journal sont élastiques vu que la planification est orientée vers une mission et qu'elle concerne tous les secteurs de l'activité économique et sociale. Les publications sont incluses si elles fournissent des informations utiles aux domaines prioritaires définis par le CDCC pour les activités du développement et de la coopération. Les Centres nationaux participants présentent la documentation nationale qu'ils considèrent utile à l'avancement du développement socio-économique de leurs pays.

Inclus dans le Système sont les périodiques, livres et documents non-conventionnels moins largement diffusés, tels que rapports, documents de conférence, études de faisabilité, etc., qui touchent à l'activité de la planification dans les Caraïbes. Un accent spécial est mis sur ce dernier aspect, vu que ces documents non publiés ne sont pas disponibles dans le commerce et qu'ils ont, bien souvent, de la valeur pour les autres utilisateurs du système.

La période de couverture commence à partir de 1970 avec priorité donnée au matériel le plus courant.

Pour le moment, le Système se limite à des documents écrits en anglais, espagnol, français ou hollandais, les quatre langues officielles des Etats membres du CDCC. Les Centres participants préparent des feuilles de données pour leur documentation nationale avec des résumés des documents écrits dans la langue de leur pays.

Les Sommaires du CARISPLAN est structuré pour capter les documents produits par son audience-cible et les documents des Caraïbes susceptibles d'être utilisés dans le cours des activités de planification et développement. Une telle information de base est d'abord produite par ou pour les bureaux nationaux de la statistique, les banques centrales, les ministères qui fournissent aux planificateurs les données sectorielles nécessaires, les bureaux départementaux de la planification, les universités et les instituts de recherche et quelques organisations privées. Etant donné que le Système fonctionne en vue du contrôle de la documentation au niveau institutionnel, on pense que Les Sommaires du CARISPLAN va représenter une couverture assez complète du type de documentation qu'il a l'ambition de rassembler.

Dispositions des Sommaires du CARISPLAN

Il y a plusieurs façons de retrouver du matériel dans les Sommaires - par les résumés, l'index (en anglais, espagnol ou français), l'index géographique (en anglais, espagnol et français), l'index des auteurs (individuels ou associés), l'index conférence et l'index symbole.

Les principaux articles qui apparaissent dans le sommaire sont préparés selon des règles définies dans le Manuel CARISPLAN des Procédures d'indexation,

Manuel Sommaire du CARISPLAN

Manuel CARISPLAN pour l'utilisation de la fiche bibliographique.

L'article échantillon indique les éléments dans le format de la fiche. Les fiches sont disposées selon les catégories DEVSIS2. Beaucoup d'utilisateurs du CARISPLAN auront besoin de mieux comprendre la situation actuelle et les tendances économiques et sociales pour lesquelles ils prennent des décisions et établissent des plans. Le dossier bibliographique est donc disposé pour faciliter l'identification et l'obtention de l'information de base sur les situations courantes et leurs extrapolations dans le futur.

De plus, beaucoup d'utilisateurs demanderont à avoir accès à l'information sur les programmes et les projets étroitement en rapport avec ceux sur lesquels ils travaillent en vue de pouvoir bénéficier de l'expérience des autres et effectuer une coordination des efforts. Les Sommaires du CARISPLAN est donc agencée pour assurer une identification rapide du matériel sur plans, programmes et projets.

Ceux qui souhaitent une information de base sommaire sur les principales tendances dans la théorie du développement peuvent facilement localiser cette information et les autres sources à partir desquelles elle peut être obtenue.

MODE D'EMPLOI

Ce numéro des Sommaires du CARISPLAN se présente en deux sections:

- la première section comprend: les résumés des documents analysés (voir les formats d'entrée à l'intérieur de la première couverture);
- la deuxième section contient les indices nécessaires pour faire des recherches manuelles sur l'information contenue dans chaque publication.

Les articles sont disposés par catégories DEVSIS, et à l'intérieur de chaque catégorie, par le code du pays principal trait dans le document.

Les classifications DEVSIS font partie d'un système de classification de l'information sur la base des nombreuses phases de la méthode de planification du développement socio-économique. La liste complète des classifications précède la section des résumés.

En plus de ce système de codes mentionné ci-dessus, des dispositions sont aussi prises pour le nom de l'institution qui peut fournir ces documents. Les codes du pays, les noms correspondant en entier et les abréviations utilisées dans le résumé figurent à l'intérieur de la dernière page de la couverture.

Chacun des indices est structuré de telle sorte qu'il puisse aider et guider l'utilisateur dans le récupération manuel de l'information. C'est pourquoi les titres des documents, leur année de publication et les descripteurs qui leur sont attribués (quels que soient les indices matières ou zones géographiques) sont inclus dans l'index matière, l'index géographique et l'index des auteurs.

Index matière

L'index par matière est présenté en anglais, espagnol et français. Disposé en ordre alphabétique des descripteurs: anglais, espagnol ou français, selon l'index; suivi du code géographique ou de la région correspondante au document et à son titre. Il comprend le numéro de l'article avec l'année de publication entre parenthèses.

Index géographique

L'index géographique est présenté en anglais, espagnol et français. Disposé en ordre alphabétique selon les noms anglais, espagnol ou français des pays, selon l'index, suivi du titre du document. Il comprend aussi le numéro de l'article, son année de publication entre parenthèses et la mention des autres pays traités dans la publication.

Index des auteurs

Disposé en ordre alphabétique par auteurs, soit individuels soit associés, suivis des titres du document par ordre alphabétique. Il comprend aussi le numéro de l'article et l'année de la publication entre parenthèses.

Index des conférences

Présenté par ordre alphabétique des conférences, séminaires, cours, etc... suivis du lieu et de la date de chaque événement avec le numéro de l'article correspondant.

Index des symboles

Dispositions alphabétiques des lettres et numéros identifiant le document suivi des numéros des articles correspondants.

INTRODUCCION

Antecedentes

El Sistema de Información del Caribe para la Planificación Económica y Social (CARISPLAN) fue formado en 1979 por el Centro de Documentación del Caribe de la Comisión Económica para América Latina y el Caribe (CEPAL), respondiendo a un mandato proveniente de los gobiernos miembros del Comité de Desarrollo y Cooperación del Caribe (CDCC). CARISPLAN es la primera red sectorial que se establece en el contexto del Sistema de Información del Caribe.

La Primera Reunión de Funcionarios de Planificación del Caribe, organizada en La Habana en enero de 1979, resolvió fortalecer el Centro de Documentación del Caribe en lo que respecta al establecimiento de CARISPLAN y vincular el sistema con INFOPLAN, el Sistema de Información para la Planificación en América Latina, desarrollado por el Centro Latinoamericano de Documentación Económica y Social (CLADES) que pertenece a CEPAL.

El objetivo de CARISPLAN es el de apoyar las actividades de desarrollo y cooperación del Caribe, y de proporcionar un servicio de información relevante y actualizada a los funcionarios de gobierno, planificadores de proyectos y programas de desarrollo económico, administradores de tales proyectos y programas, investigadores y profesores de planificación del desarrollo, financistas que proporcionan recursos y asistencia técnica, difusores de información acerca de estos programas, y personal de bibliotecas y centros de información.

CARISPLAN es un esfuerzo de cooperación de los países del Caribe. Las unidades de información de las agencias nacionales de planificación (o aquellas unidades designadas por estas últimas) constituyen los puntos focales. El punto focal nacional es responsable de la identificación y recolección de la literatura nacional relevante al alcance de la red de información, la preparación de bibliografías y resúmenes analíticos de acuerdo a normas previamente establecida, asignación de descriptores de índices, y la organización de documentos para su búsqueda más expedita. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe es responsable por la preparación de archivos bibliográficos de documentos producidos por CEPAL, y otros documentos relacionados con estudios sobre el Caribe en general. Se espera que participen en el Sistema las agencias de integración del Caribe y algunos otros organismos subregionales, tales como: CARICOM, CDB, ECCM, los institutos de investigación especializados en problemas del Caribe, y las agencias internacionales que operan en los países del CDCC. También se espera que estas instituciones contribuyan con insumos de registros bibliográficos relacionados con la información producida por ellos mismos.

Los registros bibliográficos de todos los centros participantes son enviados al Centro de Documentación del Caribe para su inclusión en la base regional de datos. Se selecciona el material para el CARISPLAN Abstracts; un ejemplar del mismo se prepara para la imprenta mediante las computadoras y el software de MINISIS de los que dispone el Centro.

El Centro de Documentación del Caribe recibió ayuda financiera del Centro Internacional de Investigación del Desarrollo (IDRC) que le permitió proporcionar entrenamiento y servicios de asesoría que permitirán asegurar la participación activa de los centros nacionales, así como también, la publicación del CARISPLAN Abstracts.

El CARISPLAN Abstracts es una publicación de resúmenes bibliográficos semestral diseñada para diseminar información bibliográfica acerca de la planificación en el Caribe y literatura sobre el desarrollo, que son proporcionadas por los centros participantes. La publicación ayuda al usuario a identificar los documentos existentes ya evaluar la literatura disponible y su relevancia con respecto a su área de interés. Aún más, ayuda al usuario a entender el estado actual y las tendencias del desarrollo socioeconómico del Caribe y las implicaciones de dichas tendencias para el futuro. Pone a disposición de todos cualquiera un rango mucho más amplio de recursos de los componentes de información del Sistema. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe proporciona un servicio gratis de entrega de documentos (fotocopias o microfichas) a instituciones de gobierno del Caribe y a organizaciones regionales.

Alcance

El alcance del CARISPLAN Abstracts es flexible, puesto que la planificación ésta orientada a tareas específicas y cubre todos los sectores de actividad económica y social. Se incluyen las publicaciones que proporcionan información relacionada con las tareas prioritarias que han sido identificadas por el CDCC para las actividades de cooperación y desarrollo. Los centros nacionales que participan incorporan la literatura que ellos consideran relevante para el proceso de desarrollo económico y social de sus respectivos países.

Se incluyen en el Sistema otras publicaciones que están relacionadas con la actividad de planificación en el Caribe, tales como: publicaciones periódicas, libros y material no-convencional, material de distribución menos amplia, informes, documentos de conferencias, estudios de factibilidad, etc. Se ha puesto un énfasis especial en estos últimos, puesto que son documentos que no se publican ni se encuentran disponibles en el mercado pero que a menudo son de utilidad para otros usuarios del Sistema.

Cubre el período a partir de 1970 hasta el presente, dándosele prioridad al material más reciente. También puede ser incluida literatura anterior de importancia especial.

Por el momento, el Sistema está restringido a documentos escritos en inglés, español, francés y holandés, que son los cuatro idiomas oficiales de los estados miembros del CDCC. Los centros que participan preparan las hojas de insumos para su literatura nacional con resúmenes de los documentos escritos en el idioma de su respectivo país.

El CARISPLAN Abstracts se estructura de manera tal que abarca los documentos que se originan en la comunidad a la cual se dirigen, así como también, los documentos del Caribe que con mayor probabilidad serán usados en el curso de las actividades de planificación y desarrollo. Dicha información de apoyo es producida, fundamentalmente, por o para oficinas nacionales de estadísticas, bancos centrales, y ministerios que proporcionan la información sectorial necesaria a los planificadores, oficinas departamentales de planificación, universidades, institutos de investigación y algunas organizaciones privadas. Puesto que el Sistema está orientado hacia el control de la literatura al nivel institucional, se espera que el CARISPLAN Abstracts tenga una cobertura mas o menos completa del tipo de literatura que aspira englobar.

Organización del CARISPLAN Abstracts

Existen varios enfoques para la búsqueda de material en el CARISPLAN Abstracts. Estos son: los Resúmenes, el Índice Temático (en inglés, español y francés), el Índice Geográfico (en inglés, español y francés), el Índice de Autores (Personales e Institucionales), el Índice de Conferencias y el Índice de Símbolos.

Los ingresos principales que aparecen en los Resúmenes son preparados de acuerdo con las reglas que se presentan en los siguientes documentos:

Manual de Procedimiento de Indización de CARISPLAN,

Manual de Resúmenes de CARISPLAN, y

Manual para el Uso de la Tarjeta de Registro Bibliográfico de CARISPLAN³.

La muestra de ingreso indica los diferentes elementos en el formato del archivo. Los registros están organizados de acuerdo a las categorías DEVSIS⁴. La mayoría de los usuarios de CARISPLAN necesitarán de una mejor comprensión del estado actual y las tendencias de las economías y sociedades para las cuales ellos toman decisiones y formulan programas y planes. El archivo bibliográfico se organiza de manera de facilitar la identificación y extracción de información básica sobre las situaciones actuales y sus extrapolaciones en el futuro.

Del mismo modo, muchos otros usuarios buscarán información acerca de programas y proyectos que se relacionan estrechamente con aquellos en los cuales están trabajando, con el objeto de obtener beneficios provenientes de la experiencia de otros, como asimismo hacer efectiva una mayor cooperación de esfuerzos. Los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN están organizados de manera tal que se puede obtener de forma rápida la identificación de material acerca de planes, programas y proyectos de desarrollo.

Aquellas personas que deseen información general, previamente analizada, acerca de los aspectos principales de la teoría y práctica del desarrollo pueden localizarla fácilmente y las fuentes alternativas donde puede encontrarse.

INSTRUCCIONES PARA SU USO

CARISPLAN Abstracts consta de dos partes:

- la primera presenta los resúmenes de los documentos analizados (véase formato de los registros en la contratapa anterior);
- la segunda contiene los índices correspondientes para hacer búsquedas manuales de la información presentada en cada número.

Los registros están ordenados según las Categorías DEVSIS, y dentro de éstas, por el código del país principal tratado en el documento.

Las Categorías DEVSIS corresponden a un esquema de clasificación según las diversas etapas del proceso de planificación del desarrollo económico y social (véase esquema en la tapa posterior de la revista).

En los formatos, aparte del código antes mencionado, también se incluye el nombre de la institución donde pueden solicitarse los documentos.

El desarrollo del nombre de los códigos de países y las abreviaturas usadas en la revista, se encuentran en la contratapa posterior.

Cada uno de los índices se estructuró a modo de facilitar y guiar al usuario en la recuperación manual de la información. Para ello, se incluyeron, tanto en el Índice Temático, en el Índice Geográfico como en el Índice de Autores, los títulos de los documentos, el año de publicación y los descriptores asignados - sean estos de materias o geográficos.

Los índices que se incluyen en CARISPLAN Abstracts son los siguientes:

Índice temático

El índice temático se presenta en inglés, español y francés.

Se organiza en orden alfabético de descriptores en inglés, español o francés, según sea el índice; seguido por el código geográfico correspondiente al país o región principal tratado en el documento y, por último, por el título del documento. Incluye el número del registro, el año de publicación entre parentesis y el resto de los descriptores asignados a la publicación.

Índice geográfico

El índice geográfico se presenta en inglés, español y francés.

Se organiza en orden alfabético de países en inglés, español o francés, según el índice, seguido de los títulos de los documentos. Incluye también el número del registro, año de publicación entre paréntesis y los otros países tratados en la publicación.

Índice de autores

Ordena alfabéticamente los autores, tanto personales como institucionales, y bajo cada uno de ellos los títulos en orden alfabético. Incluye también el número del registro y el año de publicación entre paréntesis.

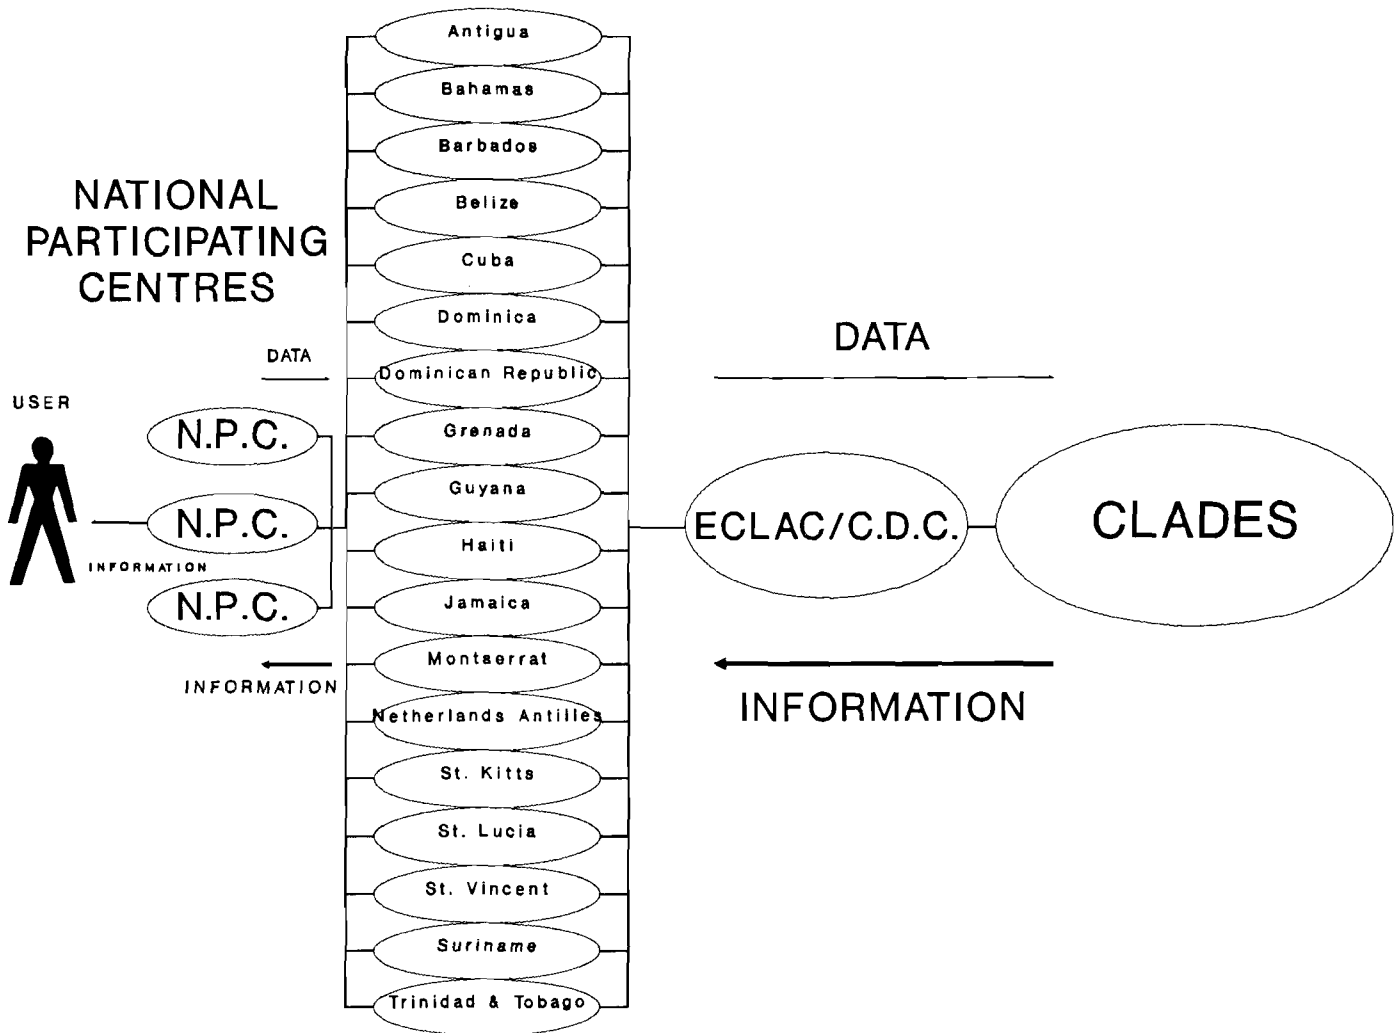

Índice de conferencias

Ordena alfabéticamente el nombre de las conferencias, seminarios, cursos, etc., seguido del lugar y fecha donde se realizó con el número del registro correspondiente.

Índice de símbolos

Ordenación alfabética de las letras y los números que identifican al documento seguido de los números de los registros correspondientes.

Potential contribution of marine resources to sustainable development in small-island developing countries.

In: Beller, W., ed.; d'Ayala, P., ed.; Hein, P., ed.. Sustainable development and environmental management of small islands. Paris: Unesco/Parthenon Publishing Group, 1990. pp. 87-102 (Man and the Biosphere Series).

Interoceanic Workshop on Sustainable Development and Environmental Management of Small Islands, Humacao, November 3-7 1986. General

-----> CDC 10387

* Examines ways in which marine resources in small island developing countries can be used more effectively to enlarge the basis for sustainable development. Provides guidelines for more positive policies in seven areas promoting artisanal fisheries, promotion of mariculture, renewable energy resources, marine phosphatic resources, conserving areas of high biological productivity (coral reefs, mangroves, seagrass beds) and on the basis of the above, identifies appropriate ways in which marine-based potential can be exploited in integrated systems. Concludes with a call for more self-reliant development

Junkanoo in the Bahamas.

In: Caribbean Quarterly, vol. 36, no. 3/4. 1990. pp. 1-28 General

-----> CDC Serial

* Traces the historical development of the Junkanoo in Bahamas, which takes place twice every year, on Boxing Day (the day after Christmas) and New Year's Day from 4 am to 9 am. It comprises fantastically costumed Junkanoos dancing to traditional music of cowbells, horns, whistles and goombay drums. The discussion is divided into four historical periods: 1800-1899; 1900-1919; 1920-1947; 1948 - present. Details are given of the development of the Junkanoo, as well as its relationship and implications for the social, political, economic and cultural conditions which prevailed at various historical periods. Examples of the lyrics and music of songs performed during the festival are provided. The different rhythmic aspects of the music such as the Hill Beat, the Fast Beat and the Slow Beat are accompanied by musical scores. Explains both, the types of instruments used and the changes that have taken place in costumes over the years.

* Se explica como en los CAI surgieron las areas dedicadas a cultivos varios que sirven para contribuir a la alimentacion de los trabajadores de las areas caneras e industriales de los complejos. Se expone la situacion de desarrollo de las producciones de autoconsumo en los ultimos anos en el MINAZ, logros obtenidos en la tecnica, uso de la tierra y recursos y en el perfeccionamiento de las producciones y su distribucion. Se ofrecen las caracteristicas de autoconsumo por provincias y la composicion de los productos segun su nivel de produccion agricola, asi como la distribucion para el consumo de trabajadores y de la poblacion en general. Se dan a conocer datos de la produccion e instalaciones pecuarias y se recomienda mantener areas para cosechar alimentos para la crianza de estos animales, asi como la atencion de una brigada permanente de produccion no canera en cada area para atender esta actividad. Se propone que la organizacion y control de la produccion para autoconsumo en los CAI sea respaldada por una correcta planificacion y direccion del MINAZ.

Se plantea la importancia de la base normativa como instrumento de control, planificacion y regulacion de la actividad productiva dentro de la empresa; como soporte indispensable en la funcion de direccion, pues a partir de esta base normativa se elaboran los planes, se organiza el trabajo y se controla el comportamiento real del proceso productivo con respecto a las normas. Se explica la relacion base normativa - direccion de la empresa en las tareas de planificacion, control y regulacion, asi como se exponen los vinculos entre la base normativa y el sistema de costos normados. Se detallan los principios de elaboracion de las normas y como se crean y desarrollan en la empresa para elevar el nivel de eficiencia de la misma.

Carnival in Cuba: another chapter in the nationalization of culture.

In: Caribbean Quarterly, vol. 36, no. 3/4. 1990. pp. 29-41 General

-----> CDC Serial

* Traces the influence of the African Cuban on Cuba's Carnival and how they survived the revolution. Outlines the Carnival in post-revolutionary Cuba from the Cabildo's (a brotherhood based on nation of origin in Africa) participation in the Dia de Reyes celebration. The cabildos were first given permission to perform publicly in the Day of Kings celebration in 1823. Each cabildo "re-enacted" an important national celebration behind the official saint and banner of the cabildo. The cabildos were powerful organizations in Cuba's pre-revolutionary society and they continued to grow in stature after the emancipation of slaves. By 1884 however they were banned from public processions and from taking part in the Dia de Reyes as a measure to control their growing power. They still exerted some influence on Cuban society and celebrated in private. Today costumed dancers representing members of the Abakmia society perform for Cubans and tourists alike. Questions whether these performances are authentic expressions of ethnicity or 'folkloric propaganda.' They are indicators of the new status of the African Cuban in post-revolutionary society. Examines how by the 1920s the Summer Carnival which was held after the sugar and coffee harvest by the slaves became the official Carnival of Santiago de Cuba, which is celebrated on July 25. In Habana from July 18-27 Carnival is celebrated in honour of the revolution. Describes some of the performances done during the carnival celebrations and the form that carnival took on before and after the revolution.

Coefficiente de participacion laboral y la estimulacion en las formas colectivas de organi del trabajo.

In: Economia y Desarrollo, vol. 111, no. 4. La Habana: 1989. General

----->CU-ECOUH

* Se analiza en este articulo el sistema de estimulacion en el trabajo de las brigadas por sus condiciones especificas en el proceso productivo, pues se valoran los resultados de cada trabajador y su salario en dependencia del trabajo colectivo, o sea el resultado final de la brigada de produccion. Se enuncia que el metodo mas progresivo para la distribucion del salario entre sus miembros es a traves del coeficiente de participacion laboral (KPL) en el cual su base de calculo depende del tipo de produccion y su tecnologia, asi como del fondo de salarios con que cuenta la empresa. Se dan a conocer los indicadores y aspectos a tener en cuenta para el calculo del KPL y para la distribucion posterior del salario a la brigada. Se ilustra este metodo con un ejemplo en el cual se ejecutan los calculos de forma individual para cada miembro de la brigada. Se concluye expresando que el uso del KPL como forma de pago dentro de las brigadas de nuevo tipo es un sistema progresivo que estimula al ahorro de los recursos laborales y financieros y por ende favorece la eficiencia economica.

Se enuncia el pensamiento basico del Che sobre esta problematica que plantea que la capacitacion de los dirigentes administrativos debe ser consecuente con la participacion de las masas en las tareas de direccion y por ende es de vital importancia su incidencia en la educacion de los trabajadores. Se da un lugar preponderante al papel del Partido y del Estado en la capacitacion de los cuadros de direccion por el lugar que ocupa en la sociedad, por lo que debe buscarse su especializacion para la realizacion de sus funciones concretas, preparandose para ellas antes de asumirlas y perfeccionando y actualizando sus conocimientos metodicamente. * Se realiza un analisis de la planificacion empresarial en los marcos del proceso de rectificacion por ser en la empresa donde se crea la produccion destinada a satisfacer las necesidades de la poblacion dando uso adecuado a los recursos en un plan que asegure la coordinacion en tiempo de todos los elementos del proceso productivo. Se plantean las principales dificultades que limitan el proceso de planificacion en la empresa, como son los cambios constantes en todos los tipos de planes, problemas del calendario de planificacion y el exceso de indicadores directivos; así como los factores que originan estas dificultades, entre otros: problemas organizativos y mal uso del concepto de dirección centralizada. Se proponen soluciones para esta problemática enmarcadas en el Sistema de Planes, tales como : una fundamentación científica de los mismos, aplicación correcta de conceptos económicos tales como centralización y autonomía, y la simplificación de la documentación necesaria para desarrollar el proceso de planificación. Se resume planteando la necesidad de convertir el plan en elemento rector de la actividad económica para dar cumplimiento a la ley del desarrollo planificado como rectora de la economía socialista, siguiendo un proceso de continuidad metodológico que permita sortear las dificultades objetivas y lograr un cumplimiento exitoso de lo planificado.

----->CU-ECOUH

* Se valora la importancia del análisis económico dentro de la dirección planificada de la economía y que dentro del análisis económico de los medios de rotación, se hacen cálculos de modo que al final estos permitan llegar a conclusiones que mejoren la eficiencia de la actividad económica. Se expone una metodología para analizar el uso de los medios de rotación normados en las empresas agrícolas; con datos no reales y por ser un procedimiento extenso se abarca en tres aspectos y el resto se realiza en un próximo artículo. Se da a conocer que estos procedimientos son: organización del uso de los medios de rotación normados; comprobación de las existencias reales de las normas y cálculo de las desviaciones y determinación de sus causas (facto y cálculo de la estructura (peso específico) de los medios de rotación normados con relación al total del grupo. Se plantea la realización de un cálculo que permite medir el grado de aseguramiento de los medios de rotación propios y se demuestra que los datos para realizar este tipo de análisis son de fácil localización, lo que hace más factible su aplicación. Se aprecia claramente la estrecha relación que existe entre el correcto uso de las reservas productivas y la situación financiera de las empresas.

* The Amerindians of Guyana have been comparatively little studied by the anthropological community in the post-Independence era, because of the impossibility of obtaining official permission to conduct field research among Guyanese Amerindians. This means that what studies have been conducted so far often represent the state of the art. Unfortunately the most recently published work is sometimes flawed by invalid conclusions, drawn from misunderstood or missed data, but which cannot be crosschecked against parallel studies. With nothing to compare them against, they come to be accepted as the ruling wisdom on the subject. One illustration of this phenomenon is provided by the doctoral thesis of Kathleen Adams titled, The Barama River Caribs of Guyana Restudied: Forty years of Cultural Adaptation and Population Change" (1972).

* Concerns the dynamics of the interaction between ethnic groups under different political conditions in Guyana. Evaluates the nature of the relationship between ethnicity and class. Two major assumptions of M.G. Smith's contribution to the theory of cultural pluralism come under scrutiny. The methodological approach is historical with some statistical evidence based on aggregate and events data. Finds that the pre-independence period is relatively open and pluralistic whilst the post-independence period is dominated by the Burnhamite politics. A close inter-connection between ethnic conflict and class relations is discerned unlike the assumption of the cultural pluralists.

* This study formulates and estimates a simple macro-economic model for the Guyanese economy during the period 1966-85. The basic purpose of the model is to help explain the behaviour of key macro-economic variables and the effects of various policies on these variables. The simulation exercise undertaken indicated that model performed reasonably well in explaining the coefficient of the behavioural equation as well as the historical behaviour of key macro-economic variables'. The policy simulation has shown that the model could be a good tool for examining policy alternatives.

* Discusses the concept of 'surplus' in development economics. The concepts of classical heritage is emphasised and modern, empirically-oriented approaches are discussed. Further, an empirically meaningful definition of surplus is developed. It is demonstrated that this definition has several advantages to competing definitions; the definition is consistent with classical conceptions of the surplus, it can be interpreted in terms of the dual economy model, and it is operationable on national accounts data. Finally, the surplus in Jamaica during the period 1962-84 is estimated. The analysis suggests that the distribution and disposal of surplus are important factors in Jamaica's stagnation.

Training and dissemination of managerial know-how in LDCs:Jamaica.

In: Social and Economic Studies, vol. 39, no. 2. Mona: 1990. pp. 193-215 : tbls. General

-----> CDC Serial

* Investigates the contribution made by transnational corporations to the dissemination of managerial know-how in less economically developed countries. Focuses mainly on Jamaica. Individuals are trained by multinational corporations and then move on to disseminate their managerial skills by establishing and/or joining other firms. This 'spread' effect is what is thought to be the most significant contribution of multinational firms to the development of managers. Seventy-six Jamaican managers were surveyed, forty-one were employed in subsidiaries of multinational firms, twenty in locally owned firms and the remaining fifteen in publicly owned manufacturing/processing firms. The career data was collected in 1986. Describes details of the methodology employed; the data collected and the spread of managerial know-how among Jamaican managers. Focuses on women among the Jamaican managerial elite. They accounted for 20 percent of the seventy-six managers interviewed. It was found that like other managers, they received little in the way of technical and managerial training, with multinationals offering slightly more training than was obtained in other firms. Concludes that multinational firms contribute to the enhancement of decision making skills in Third World countries two ways:- they were good at training and developing managers and these managers move into other positions in the broader society. However, a comparison of the training and dissemination of know-how promoted by multinational and other firms raised questions regarding the accuracy of the knowledge received. It was found that multinationals did not supply training that was in any way more exceptional than other firms according to, quantity of training or the utilization of training facilities. Companion piece to one completed on training and spread of managerial know-how in Kenya (Gershenberg, 1983).

* Shows that the neglect of non-economic factors, technical problems and the lack of knowledge of the behaviour of individuals would result in disequilibrium in the labour market. Furthermore, discusses and evaluates the deficiencies in planning techniques in developing countries and concludes that a 'mismatch' does indeed exist between planned manpower requirements and occupational choice of the prospective workforce. Finally, concludes that with micro-planning and the adaptation of education to societal needs and the implementation of incentive programmes as recommended, Nigeria can meet her manpower needs.

* Takes the form of a poem in which a number of characters representative of Trinidad and Tobago's society hold a conversation. These characters however, can be found in other societies but what makes them unique to Trinidad and Tobago is the comments that they make about the economic and social issues of the day. The general theme of Carnival re-ins throughout the poem. It is used to intertwine all the comments and issues uttered by the characters. The rhythmic use of common, children's nurse rhymes such as "Old Mother Hubbard" and "Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat Where Have You Been," are used probably as reminders of the old colonial past. Groups such as young men, young women, agnostic, realist, optimist, tourist, Moslems and Hindus all are given a chance to add their thoughts on the Carnival of life, forming a parallel between the festival of Carnival and life itself.

* Presents a broad overview of the world market for selected tropical fresh produce and details the product specifications for avocado, pineapple, mango and papaya. Looks at general market considerations and export opportunities and identifies the factors which have and will continue to contribute to the growth of the market immigration (demand for ethnic products) travel and tourism, nutrition and improved living standards. Reviews Trinidad and Tobago's exports on the world market and suggests that a strategy which takes cognizance of the characteristics of the local export industry, its structure and degree of sophistication is required. Suggests greater exploitation of the Caricom and metropolitan/ethnic markets, the development of a culture of export agriculture that producers, middlemen/exporters and officials understand and appreciate and the development of market presence especially in the metropolises. Identifies the problems which need to be tackled both at home and abroad - the control of distribution outlets, warehousing and reputable importer/distributor brand identity. States that Trinidad and Tobago needs to be more aggressive in the market, that the production systems are too haphazard to sustain an aggressive export thrust and must be organized to ensure continuous production of high quality produce and proper handling facilities that suggest that this can only be achieved through cooperative effort and that the future of the export industry lies with cooperatives.

The first is straightforward and hence is lacking in detail of interest to the economic planner. It is also very well documented. The second provides more detail - in particular, it can be used to determine important sub-total such as the balance of trade and balance on current account - but requires a more serious modelling and computational effort. In the second section, the monetary approach is examined; in the third the components approach the problems associated with the data and estimation are elaborated in these sections. * Focuses on public policy as one of several determinants of the growth and decline of friendly societies in Trinidad and Tobago from the 1880s to the 1980s. The first of two distinct stages in the evolution of public policy coincided with the period of Crown Colony Government whose policy was guided by a keen interest to nurture the institution as an instrument of social policy. In the early fifties society membership reached 23 percent of the population. In 1956 the second stage was ushered in under the banner of the People's National Movement which displaced colonial officials as arbiters of the destiny of friendly societies. Official policy became indifferent to the plight of the societies which stagnated and then declined.

Robber in the Trinidad Carnival.

In: Caribbean Quarterly, vol. 36, no. 3/4. 1990. pp. 42-53 General

----->CDC Serial

* The 'Midnight Robber', one of the characters found in Trinidad Carnival, has emerged during the last eighty years. The robber is derived from Trinidad's oral tradition with which he merges modern western cultural elements. The masque's most poignant characteristic is his speech. He rattles off 'robber talk' in order to get ransom from the spectators. The 'robber talk' grew out of the story-telling traditions of the islands, the riddle telling of the 'Pierrot Grenade' and the 'Wild Indian' talk. It also relies on the Trinidadian concept of boasting. The Midnight Robber first appeared in the Carnival in the early years of the 19th Century in bands of 30 to 40 members. In the 1950s robber bands decreased in size, consisting of six or seven members only. Today only individuals roam the streets. Illustrations of the speeches made by these masques and the sound effects that are created through their choice of words, are given. A comparison is done of the 1956 examples of robber talk with those from 1980, they illustrate the continuity of the tradition. Concludes that the robber is the response of a small and relatively isolated society to modern western cultural influences. The probable extinction has to do with the relatively rigid concept of the act. He is one of the masques who has lost their purpose with independence. Today the robber still uses the same concepts of mockery, as during the pre-independence period for which a secretive and ambivalence was adequate. Then robber talk concentrated on Trinidadians' desire of self-determination and free creative expression under colonial rule.

Short history of The Shipping Association of Trinidad and Tobago.

In: Caribbean Shipping, May 1991. 1991. pp. 8-9 : ill. General

----->CDC Serial

* Traces the history of the Shipping Association of Trinidad and Tobago from its inception as the 'Steamer Warehouse Association,' which was formed in the years before 1919, to its formal registration as a trade union on the 29th April, 1939. The 1939-1945 war broke out shortly after this and the Shipping Association, the Seamen and Waterfront Trade Union (SWWTU) and the Port Authority were kept very busy since the Port of Spain harbour was a marshalling point for North Atlantic and American convoys. It is from this point in its development that the role of the Shipping Association began to change. It began to assume the primary function of employing labour on behalf of its members rather than representing labour. Later in 1968, the Government nationalised the stevedoring operations on the Port and created the Port Contractors. This replaced the services offered by the Associations and forced it to rethink its focus. The Shipping Association then began to act as mediator to the Port Authority, the Port Contractors and other related authorities. They have now been granted observer status to the Maritime Division of the Ministry of Works, Infrastructure and Decentralization in an effort to develop greater awareness of the importance of Shipping in Government circles. A list of their members from their inception and those who joined in recent years have been given.

Young women and the HIV epidemic.
 In: Development: Journal of the Society for International Development, no. 1. Rome: 1990. pp. 16-19 General
 ----->CDC Serial

* Looks at how women and youths are increasingly affected by the HIV epidemic. It is estimated that one-third of all those thought to be infected - about 2 million - are women. Already in Sub-Saharan Africa there are more women than men infected. In Central African Republic, Equatorial Guinea and Gabon show nearly three times as many women as men infected. In Honduras, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, the Bahamas and Trinidad and Tobago, the male ratios of reported AIDS cases, have dropped rapidly in the last three years from over 6:1 to under 2.5:1. In terms of youth at least half of all those infected are under the age of 25. Gives a brief summary of the ways in which the virus is transmitted. Examines the factors which affect the lives of women and make them more vulnerable to HIV infection. These factors are; poverty, homelessness, social and geographical mobility, sexual assault, civil unrest, commerce, tourism and social disruption. * A historical study of the feminist movement in the Caribbean from slavery and indentureship to the modern period. Defines feminism as the critical consciousness and awareness of women's subordinated and/or exploited position in society and the commitment to do something to change it. In light of this definition two aspects of the feminist struggle are identified; the struggle to maintain a degree of autonomy and control over their lives; and the movement of women at a local, national, regional or international level for certain common goals. The period of slavery and indentureship illustrated the first aspect of feminism in the Caribbean, while the second aspect becomes apparent during the late 19th and early 20th century with the spread of feminism to the Third World. The work of women such as Amy Ashwood-Ravey, Audrey Jeffers, Beatrice Greig and Alma Labadie are featured.

* The small tropical Caribbean islands, primarily those along the Lesser Antillean chain, have historically experienced prolonged resource exploitation, including widespread deforestation, large scale export monoculture, chronic emigration and environmental neglect. The post-war period has witnessed rapid urbanization, heavy tourism and marine degradation from the construction of transport (air and sea), petroleum facilities and hotels. Today these microstates suffer from the loss of renewable resources, diminished biological diversity and the abandonment of traditional practices. Suggests that reversing such trends will require strategies that simultaneously promote: (1) habitat restoration; (2) sustainable resource uses; (3) long-term economic profitability/adaptability; (4) improved effectiveness of insular institutions.

* Summarizes a methodological approach for studying commodity systems which was initiated in 1985 by the Post-Harvest Institute for Perishables (PIP); the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN); Food Handling Bureau (AFHB) and the Inter-American Institute for Cooperation on Agriculture (IICA). Identifies 26 components which are common to most commodities and for each CSAM includes a description of its importance and the type of information to be collected. A guideline questionnaire is also used to collect baseline information and the methodology includes a variety of formats for organizing and presenting the results, (pre-production, production, post-harvest, marketing), identifying of priority problems and formulating realistic solutions to the problems identified. Defines the most salient characteristics of development projects and the minimum information which should be included in a project profile. The methodology has been tested in the Caribbean and ASEAN countries. The Caribbean Studies include a 1986 IICA/CDB Study of the production and marketing constraints of fruit systems in the Windward Islands, the results of which served as the basis for the OECS diversification programme, and in 1988 the OECS Diversification Programme for the export of non-traditional crops by CDB/IICA/CARDI. Based on the experiences in the Caribbean and the ASEAN countries the draft manual was compiled in 1988 and field tested in Malaysia on carambola and on ginger in Nepal in 1989. Concludes that CSAM has proven to be flexible and readily adaptable to circumstances in a variety of countries; is an effective method to stimulate inter-institutional and inter-disciplinary coordination and integration; can produce results in a relatively short period of time and facilitates the organization of decision making information in a readily usable form.

It is important however to ensure that the software chosen can accommodate inevitable changes in the port system. * Considers the need for Caribbean nations to facilitate technical innovations in production in order to promote the process of economic development. The region's long pattern of technological dependency on foreign equipment and methods of production gained from abroad must be reversed. Notes that in order for the Caribbean truly to develop it must increase its technical mastery and promoted an industrial sector capable of modifying existing and introducing new methods of production. West Indian economic history provides proof of how the islands were technologically stagnant during the colonial era. This situation remained the same during the era of "industrialization by invitation" since the little foreign investment which was encouraged was confined mostly to the islands of Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago. Government policy and greater Caribbean integration are necessary for the reversal of this developmental process.

* Based on the definition "sustainable development is about being fair to the future. It is about leaving the next generation a similar or better resource endowment than that which one inherited." Analyses the economic policy implications of sustainable development. Suggests an operational division of the framework needs to be flexible enough to cope with five factors. Examines the present state of theoretical development and points out that many fundamental issues remain unresolved - which create major dilemmas for public policy. Calls for innovations in environmental accounting and cost-benefit analysis and identifies areas of priority for research and development. Stresses the importance of macroeconomic policies and briefly discusses institutional and organizational issues, international dimensions and social issues critical to the successful implementation of an economic policy framework-poverty, public dialogue and awareness, women, NGO's and population policy. Concludes that sustainable development is a concept whose time has arrived and refers to the dangers and pitfalls of its acceptance. Sustainable development focuses on the ultimately limiting nature of the natural environment emphasizing the finite dimensions of natural resources. Suggests that emphasis should also be placed on human resources which are unlimited and which grow in efficiency through use.

The Caribbean Food and Nutrition Institute (CFNI) has outlined procedures and strategies to employ in effecting nutrition awareness for nutrition-related disorders such as obesity, diabetes, and hypertension. It is emphasised throughout these programmes that patient involvement is critical for achieving success. The Eating Plan form, Portion Allowances and Intake Control forms and Food Consumption Evaluation form are all part of the programme, where the patient evaluates his/her own dietary habits and eventual needs in this area. The role of the counsellor is to translate these principles into actual educational materials and aids suited to the particular patient. * Presents a philosophical perspective on ethics, the view that ethics must be considered a system. There is a practical side to the system that determines what is right and what is wrong; but there is also a systematic side: ethics as a value system, valid for all human beings and for every aspect of life. Gives a general overview of the characteristics of an ethical system and explains clearly how important it is to recognise the laws of ethics as reality. Examines the two levels of ethics, the micro and macro-ethics applied to reality by professionals. Suggests that a vast majority of professionals operate at the micro-ethical level with grave consequences. They almost always accept things on the basis that they are not involved, they are operating at a level of ethics. The danger of this situation is that preserving the status quo becomes totally unacceptable, yet professionals continue to accept it and operate at the micro-ethical level.

Regional Economic Conference, Port of Spain, 27 February - 1 March 1991. General

* The decade of the 90's holds no magic formula for the transformation of small open dependent economies like Grenada's. Much to the contrary, major indicators point to difficult times ahead which will warrant a serious rethinking of conventional development strategies that place heavy reliance on external resources, natural resources utilization and sheltered markets as prerequisites for growth and development. The major global economic trends in the international economy require the region and, therefore the Grenadian government, to embark on development strategies so as "not to miss the boat". In the case of Grenada the major elements of this new development strategy which objective reality dictates are greater self reliance and sufficiency, export growth, and human resource development. The greatest opportunities that these developments present is the realization that economic survival for Caribbean and economies is predicated upon the pooling of the collective resources of the region

* Discusses the linkages between tourism and the environment and tourism and agriculture. Explains that there are both positive and negative linkages between all these sectors. Tourism has had a tremendous impact on the environment. It has opened opportunities for tourist to enjoy the earth's treasures and rewarded indigenous communities by heightening appreciation of the environment. However this opening up has put pressure on natural resources from the constant flow of tourist and the building of tourism infrastructure. In the case of agriculture it has affected the environment through the use of agro-chemicals and slash and burn agricultural techniques. However there can be a positive link to tourism through the exposure of the tourist to local cuisine. It is noted that tourism and agriculture are largely dependent on the natural resources of the environment. It is important therefore to find solutions to the problems of exploitation and pollution.

* There are few calypsos which deal with child abuse as the main theme, although there are several in which the issue is raised or mentioned, incidental to the singer's main purpose. States that the International Year of the Child had little impact on the calypsos for that year. Inattention to child abuse is considered part of a larger scenario of indifference towards the family. Examines in detail the calypsos which deal with male-female relationships and family neglect, corporal punishment, sexual offences and those referred to as the new dispensation - calypsos which extol woman or try to erase the negative image that calypso has encouraged - a new attitude to the family. Concludes that although child abuse has not inspired many calypsos, the few songs on the theme are moving and powerful. Such calypsos differ from the genre, in that while calypsos generally avoid preaching and moralizing, they are didactic in tone and purpose, aiming to have delinquent parents amend their behaviour and advocating stern punishments for sexual offenders. * Discusses the use, availability and new developments in the dominant packaging materials - wood, paperboard and plastic. States that local species of natural wood need to be identified as a resource base for a wood package industry and the saving, slicing and peeling facilities will need to be established. Notes that the use of wood has been restricted to pallet construction and field handling containers. Re-cycled paper trays and inserts are commonplace in the packaging of horticultural products and waste shredded paper is gaining in popularity. Cautions selection and use of these materials is recommended since they are not suitable for all products. Plastics have not been as dominant as paper in horticultural exports however, growth has increased and the largest area in the horticultural export business is the development of films of various types for wrapping, sealing, strapping and lining. Refers to the protection of the environment as the greatest challenge facing the plastic industry and the need for the production of more environmentally friendly yet functional low-cost materials. Concludes that an understanding of the entire chain in the product life, the product requirements and delivery quality or end-user requirements are needed before package design or package selection. Workshop on Post Harvest Handling of Horticultural Commodities for Export, St. Augustine, 25-27 June 1990. General

* Deals with the preservation of fruits in the fresh state with minimum loss in quality during the handling and storage period - retardation of physiological and biochemical changes associated with ripening and senescence. Examines the four stages in the life of fruits and explains the processes of respiration and transpiration. Uses studies on Julie mangoes to illustrate the chemical changes which occur in fruits after harvest - physical (weight loss, volume loss or shrinkage, specific gravity, firmness) and the chemical changes in the sugar and acid contents. Discusses the main considerations of product quality management (fruit maturity and harvest, harvesting methods and transport); temperature management (recommended storage temperatures, relative humidity, pre-cooling, freezing and chilling injury). Provides tips for avoiding damage when transporting commodities and on storing fruits and vegetables as appendices.

* Identifies the components of a typical post-harvest system and states that each component must be effectively managed so that the produce is delivered to the consumer in an acceptable condition at minimal cost. Post-harvest management related to the growing of fresh produce for the export market must be based on the management of quality. Examines the effects of environment and time on quality and identifies the types of deterioration as physical, pathological and physiological or a combination of all three. Looks at the nature and causes of deterioration - initial produce quality, temperature and humidity (provides tables on optimum conditions), physical handling, packaging and transportation. Concludes that the basis for management of quality is pre-detection of damage resulting from the susceptibility of the produce to the hazards of distribution and identifies the 3 R's in the export business as: Respect tender crops that are easily damaged; Refrigerate to curtail life process, conserve quality, curtail dehydration and inhibit pathogens; and Rush to ensure freshness and acceptance by a critical importer or consumer.

* Likens post-harvest deterioration problems to a leaky pipeline and provides tables to underscore the magnitude of post-harvest losses in tropical root crops (25 per cent), in selected fruits and vegetables and specific commodities. Defines post-harvest diseases as those that develop during harvesting, grading, packaging, transportation to market, during storage and handling. Examines the effects of post-harvest diseases on produce and identifies the symptoms of the diseases and the causes of deterioration. Defines the objective of post-harvest storage and the methods generally used for controlling deterioration - careful handling and protective packaging, inducing wound barriers, modified atmospheres, hypobaric storage, manipulation of relative humidity (RH), temperature management, application of chemicals after harvest, and biological control. Surplus labour economy affects technological advances.

In: Caribbean Affairs, vol. 4, no. 1. 1991. pp. 58-61 General

----->CDC Serial

* Examines the view that in a surplus labour economy, the engine of growth is not technology but cheap labour. Proposes that the availability of cheap labour means that jobs require only basic training because production utilizes simple technology. Explains that surplus labour eventually leads to the movement of technology as an engine of growth. The reasoning being that surplus labour is absorbed over time, wages will rise inducing firms to substitute capital for labour, and that opportunity for the substitution opens the way for new technology. The relationship between ratio of capital to labour follows the pattern of, once capital flows, more capital equipment is applied to production and employed workers will require greater skills to use the equipment. The issue of investment and export production sets out a different outcome to the labour-capital ratio. The pattern established in this case is that the growth of exports dry up the pool of cheap labour and increases labour cost. This then forces the producer to adopt new technology to achieve the desired rate of return on investment. Proposes an extension service attached to the University of the West Indies, whose sole purpose is to collect information on technology. The reason being that many small Caribbean firms do not have access to information on the latest in appropriate technology. A programme of this nature would allow the Caribbean to capitalize on major new advantages.

Theoretical framework for the study of cultural domination by re-exportation.

In: Caribbean Affairs, vol. 4, no. 1. 1991. pp. 106-116 General

----> CDC Serial

* Discusses the concept of cultural domination by re-exportation. Cultural domination is defined as an indigenous culture emanating from one country but being influenced by a foreign culture. Focuses particularly on the Caribbean Culture. Domination has two processes: by exportation or importation; and by re-exportation. These processes also have different stages of development. The first, exportation/importation, has three stages: the society outside the Caribbean emphasises patterns in its culture; the export of these patterns to the Caribbean; and the Caribbean adopting the patterns. The second process re-exportation has five elements: the Caribbean emphasising patterns in its own culture; the exportation the patterns to other cultures; they are modified to suit this new culture; the re-importation of the modified pattern; and the adoption of the pattern. Examines the re-exportation of calypso and reggae between the United States and the Caribbean. An illustration of this is the importation by the Caribbean of the song "Rum and Coca Cola." Communication is an important factor in cultural domination, and the relationship between them is described as the correlation perspective, the transmission perspective and the preservation perspective. The first deals with acceptance of the relationship between the culture and its people. The second transmits the culture to the external culture and the third communicates or persuades the recognition of the culture by the external culture. The role of the human being in communicating these cultural patterns, and the role of the media is also examined. Concludes with the proposal that support must be established to show that cultural domination exist and that re-exportation of culture is a fact of life in the Caribbean. The role of Mass Communications must be explored and the importance of individuals, groups, regional and transnational institutions must be established in their role in transferring the cultural patterns of the Caribbean.

* Comments that as the world hurries towards the twenty-first century and as geographic, political and economic configurations appear to be constantly in flux, the Caribbean is again faced with options: we can elect to pursue our separate, individual paths within that increasingly complicated world or we can resolve to enhance and strengthen our existing mechanisms of cooperation and further seek to devise new approaches for concerted regional action to improve the quality of life for all our people in the world of tomorrow. As far as Trinidad and Tobago is concerned, the second course is infinitely superior to the first, the real challenges facing the region is that of elaborating two related series of measures designed to deepen functional cooperation among the constituent members of our community and to determine appropriate instruments which would enable us to face our external challenges as a united vibrant entity. * States that the success of a post-harvest management system can best be gauged by reference to the degree of quality maintenance as measured by specific quality components. Looks at the factors which affect quality - genetic, preharvest, produce maturity and harvesting operations. Discusses the post-harvest physiological behaviour of cassava, yam, sweet potato and dasheen and emphasises the utilization of proper handling systems for quality maintenance. Identifies the important areas for handling and transport systems, specific post harvest treatments to improve natural storage life and the storage environment - temperature, control of relative humidity and pest and disease management. Unified regional European market and its implications challenges the Caribbean.

In: Caribbean Affairs, vol.3, no.3. Port of Spain: 1990. pp.57-65 General
----> CDC Serial

* The creation of a unified European market represents part of a global thrust towards increasing market space to accommodate greater investment output, employment and consumption possibilities. The effect will provide a positive stimulus to global economic growth. This article attempts to place this development in the context of world economic trends as they have affected the developing countries generally and the countries within the Caribbean in particular. The first trend relates to trade and production. Already only 20 percent of the world's production of goods and services come from developing countries. While 60 percent is produced by developed nations and 70 percent of world exports and imports are concentrated in North America, Eastern Europe and East Asia. The second trend relates to economic growth. The 1990s is likely to see a continuation of slow growth in developing countries. Four major factors contribute to this; debt burden; declines in investment; reduced access to the world's investible funds especially since the opening up of Eastern Europe; and the technology gap. Explains that the real challenge to the Caribbean is not to hold on to the traditional European niche but to try to expand its opportunities within the market space. A unified Caribbean market with Caribbean entrepreneurs joining forces to draw on marketing and management expertise within the region is important to struggle against the developments in the global economy.

Who owns Caribbean mass media? Foreign domination - a passing phase.

----> CDC Serial

* Examines the ownership of major portions of the print media by large conglomerates, governments, transnationals, individuals or consortia. In the Caribbean owners of mass media have been political parties, local multinationals, governments and religious groups. Discusses the operations of foreign media within the Caribbean region, particularly by the French and the United States. Details are given of the foreign networks and the stations they own - within the Caribbean region. Local and privately owned media networks within the Caribbean have been growing over the past year. Insights into the development and growth of corporations such as the Express (Trinidad) and the Gleaner (Jamaica) are shared. The growth of government owned print and electronic media vary in the islands and examples of those in existence are presented. The implications of whether the media is locally or foreign owned, and the underlying element that newspaper or electronic media is big business, interconnected to all the vested interests, impinge upon it to perform its functions as watchdog in the society. The government ownership of mass media has other implications for the dissemination of information, that is, it operates a degree of control over the information and projects. Suggests that an alternative type of ownership for the Caribbean was evident under Michael Manley's administration in Jamaica in the 1970's.

* Traces the history of the Caribbean women's involvement in various types of organisations and therefore in the community. The study begins with the traditional practice of women being involved in religious-based organisations. It moves on to discuss their involvement in trade unions and political parties. However the re-emergence of the feminist movement in the late 1960s and early 1970s would see the formation of various women's groups throughout the Caribbean geared toward the needs of women. Some of these groups are, The Jamaica Association for the repeal of Abortion Laws (JARA), the Housewives Association of Trinidad and Tobago, Sistren Women's Theatre Collective and Women's Forum Barbados. The work of these groups and the formation of support groups such as the Caribbean Association for Feminist Research and Action (CAFRA) and the Women for Caribbean Liberation (WCL) give the impression of a well developed and effective women's movement. concludes however that the achievement of these groups have only scratched the surface of the lives of Caribbean women.

Environment, crisis and development.

In: ECLAC/ILPES/UNEP. Environment dimension in development planning. Santiago: UN, 1990. pp. 17-30 LC/G.1579-P General

----> CDC UN

* Explores the interrelationship between development and the environment. Examines the destructive effects of development and its negative effects on development itself. Proposes that an adequate consideration of natural resources and the environment in development strategies, plans and policies present opportunities for improved social and economic development, while mitigating the effects of the crisis. Discusses how the present development strategies are leading to the exhaustion of certain high-quality non-renewable resources and the deterioration of renewable sources limiting the chances of future development. These prevailing standards, together with the financial crisis of decade of the 1980s, the crisis in the international economy, population growth all impact negatively on Latin American society. An analysis of the mutual relationship between development and environment has finally led to a position from which are derived the fundamental elements of an environmental sustainable development strategy. This strategy requires the creative adoption of alternatives of technology, location, scale, forms of organization and production and consumption patterns, and progressive policies in matters of income, employment and access to productive resources which will limit the pressure on natural resources. It does not oppose industrialization, urbanization and modernization, but rather changes their relationship with the environment. Details both the problems of modern development policies and strategies and the fundamentals of environmental sustainable development.

* Reviews the fundamental concept of horizontal cooperation and the challenge facing the Latin American and Caribbean region to implement cooperation given its economic, social and political crisis. Particular attention is paid to the implementation of horizontal cooperation in environmental matters. Seeks to identify the deficiencies and structural problems that must be tackled in order to reinforce regional cooperation. Examines the role of organizations such as United Nations Environmental Programme (UNEP), Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLA) and the International Centre for Training and Education in Environmental Science (CIFCA) in carry out projects on horizontal cooperation and the environment. The term horizontal cooperation had been applied to both technical and economic cooperation between developing countries and region since the proposals were laid out in the Buenos Aires Plan of Action at the United Nations Conference on Technical Cooperation and Developing countries, Buenos Aires, 30 August - 12 September 1978 (ECLAC 1978). The idea of horizontal cooperation represent a new conception of the shared use of limited resources and experience; resources and institutions already put in place by regional governmental bodies. This could help considerably in putting horizontal cooperation into practice in environmental affairs, thereby contributing substantially to the incorporation of the environmental dimension in development planning. A number of recommendations are given on how this cooperation can be accomplished.

* Provides an introduction to the UN programme in global monitoring of disablement which defines the concepts of impairment, disability and handicap; the general conceptual framework which lists the five areas proposed as the basis for study of disablement through the use of population censuses, surveys and registration systems; and the International Disability Database (DISTAT). Briefly describes three major types of data collection systems and assesses how disability concepts and definitions are used in countries to identify disabled persons and how these affect statistical findings. Results emphasize the necessity for international guidelines and survey standards for data collection so that rates may be more comparable and more meaningful both within and across countries. Twelve statistical tables are presented and illustrative examples are provided to show the ways these tables may be highlighted and discussed. Concludes that there has been a steady increase in the statistical study of disability by governments and other organizations and a substantial increase in the application of national disability statistics for policy formulation and programme planning. Areas identified for national, regional and international support include training workshops and international conferences; regular updating of DISTAT; monitoring national use of ICIDH in various data collection activities; promoting the inclusion of disability topics in national surveys and programmes and expanding inter-regional technical advisory services and training programmes.

* Describes the need for an integrated knowledge of how islands undergoing modernization behave as total systems. Summarises broadly the present understanding of how economic, demographic and political subsystems condition ecosystem stability during the process of modernization. Traces the resulting legacy of environmental degradation principally in the Caribbean but also in some of the more advanced Pacific islands. Identifies a provisional design for capturing the interaction between the three controlling subsystems and the insular environment. This design involves the construction of eco-development typologies for classifying island experience along an ecosystem stress continuum and for identifying transitions, critical points and development strategies that threaten to violate carrying capacity.

Multivariate statistical analysis of country classification: the identification of small developing countries.

* Cluster analysis is used to classify countries according to their 'size' and level of 'development'. Out of three hierarchical clustering procedures, the ward procedure provides the 'best' classification of countries. An optimization clustering procedure suggested by Calinski and Harabasz (1974) to identify a set of 'small developing' countries is further applied. This paper which is an extension of Dounes (1988) is an outgrowth of the author's research on industrial development in small developing countries. The structure of the paper is as follows: firstly, the principles of cluster analysis are outlined. Secondly, a presentation and analysis of the results of grouping 145 countries on principal component measures of 'size' and level of 'development' for the year 1973 is made. Finally an evaluation of the exercise is undertaken.

In: Woman Speak, no. 26/27. 1990. pp. 40-45 General
----> CDC Serial

* The International wages for Housework Campaign was founded in 1972. Its basic agenda is to have people and governments recognize the economic value of housework and to count it into the Gross National Product. In the United States women in the home produce 25-40 percent of the GNP and in the third world countries women's production of wealth would be an even higher proportion of the GNP. In Africa women's unwaged work produces an estimated 80 percent of the food on which the continent survives. The progression of women as they moved from unwaged work into the world of waged work and the progression of the debates that permeate the society on the recognition of housework is discussed.

* Discusses the inclusion of Tourism within the Articles of the Fourth Lome Convention and the Benefits that could be derived for the Group of African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries. The scope of the chapter on tourism is broad, covering all levels from identification of the tourism product to the marketing and promotion stage. The Convention encourages intervention at the level of policy definition, adaptation and development so that programmes and projects can be soundly based on appropriate policies. Four components are emphasised, human resource development, market development, product development and research and formation. Lome IV provides an important opportunity to ACP states and regional organisations to better integrate policies and strategies in services and tourism and generally into overall economic objectives. The present Lome IV Convention provides a total of ECU, 12 billion over five years (1990-1995) for development cooperation of all kinds.

* Sets out guidelines and requirements for tourism development. The experience of nations which have successfully developed their tourism industry and its products show there are eight key steps in this strategic planning process. They are: describing the nation's social and political, physical and economic environment; forecast on project trends for the nation's future development; set goals and objectives; study alternative plans of action to reach the nation's goals and objectives; select preferred alternatives to serve as a guide for recommending action strategies; develop an implementation strategy; implement the plan; and evaluate the plan. The net result of this eight step process will be to gain cooperation from the nation's business, political and civic leadership. It will develop a database of resources, such as sites, travel habits, accommodations and infrastructure. It will also encourage the implementation of a comprehensive national marketing plan. In theory these are some of the most important considerations in tourism development. A supportive political environment, and well trained personnel ensure greater success and larger economic benefit even when the financial resources and/or the definition of the strategic and marketing plans are not completely adequate.

Antigua and Barbuda: nine years of economic expansion, but challenges ahead.

-----> CDC Serial

* Gives a brief description of the precolonial history of Antigua and Barbuda, with particular reference to its naval history and the importance of English Harbour. The decline of Antigua's naval importance also led to the decline of its sugar industry, which dominated its precolonial economy. Discusses the economic issues of modern day Antigua and Barbuda which are dominated by the Tourism sector. Examines the inroads being made in agriculture, animal husbandry and industry through funding from the European Community, (EEC). Tourism accounts for 60 percent of Antigua and Barbuda's Gross National Product (GNP), 50 percent of its employment and nearly 50 percent of its foreign exchange earnings. Antigua also has the largest tourist sector in the Windward and Leeward islands, and about 35 percent of the total trade of the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States (OECs). Its real economic problems however lay not in its need to improve the tourist facilities but in its need to diversify its economy. Efforts so far have yielded few results. Agriculture accounts for only 12 percent of GNP and the food import bill is about US $80 million annually. The government's aim is to increase the production of fruits and vegetables and to do so it has introduced a number of measures: restrictions were placed on imports to encourage local farmers to produce; exports of Pineapples were banned because output hardly met domestic consumption; and a melon growing project was introduced exclusively for export. Incentives were provided for vegetable farmers which included the provision of free planting materials, these had to be returned at harvest. More EEC funding to build dams and provide cheaper irrigation could help Antigua become self sufficient within five years in certain crops. Animal husbandry is another area in which the government hopes to receive funding from the EEC to organise the industry and construct an abattoir. The industrial sector in Antigua is small, it represents 14 percent of GNP. It comprises of construction, electricity, water and manufacturing. In the absence of an entrepreneurial class the government of the twin-island state has been its economic motor. In construction there has been a boom accompanying the expansion in Tourism. It has however been constrained by high labour cost and serious labour shortages. Manufacturing grew at an average 6 percent per annum between 1981-1986. It fell to 4 percent in 1987 and by 1989 was down only 2 percent.

Se expone en tablas estadisticas la dinamica de la incorporacion de los campesinos a las cooperativas caneras de 1977 a 1987, asi como un resumen de los principales indicadores del balance economico en las cooperativas de produccion agropecuaria entre 1981 y 1987, citandose las afectaciones climatologicas, el pago de intereses bancarios y una inadecuada utilizacion de los gastos de amortizacion en detrimento de la rentabilidad de las cooperativas, asi como un bajo rendimiento agricola que han afectado su situacion economica, limita el deseo de incorporacion de los agricultores privados. Se senalan otros aspectos que inciden en la no incorporacion a las CPA y la necesidad de erradicar estas limitantes con un trabajo politico ideologico en el que deben participar todas las organizaciones relacionadas con esta tarea para lograr una mayor incorporacion con vistas a que en 1990 el sector campesino pueda responder por cerca de 20 per cent de cana a moler para las zafras venideras.

Comercio mayorista en el sistema de comercio interior en Cuba.

In: Economia y Desarrollo, vol. 110, no. 3. La Habana: 1989. pp. 46-53 General

* Se propone abordar el estado actual y perspectivas del desarrollo del comercio mayorista en el sistema de comercio interior de Cuba en dos aspectos fundamentales: su base tecnico material y la estructura de direccion de esta actividad en la produccion de bienes de consumo no alimenticios. Se citan las tres funciones principales en el proceso de movimiento de mercancías: compraventa, almacenaje y transportacion y la base tecnico material necesaria para cumplimentar estas funciones la cual debe desarrollarse aun mas con un uso racional y una elevada efectividad en las inversiones. Se plasma en datos estadísticos la disminucion de almacenes en momentos en que aumenta la circulacion mercantil aunque crece la capacidad de los ya existentes, por ejemplo con el uso de transelevadores. Se propone un cambio en la estructura de direccion de la actividad para centralizar la misma y evitar las dificultades provocadas por la dualidad del Ministerio del Comercio Interior y el Poder Popular. Se plantea que este cambio estructural se realice en dos etapas: en la primera, pasar las empresas mayoristas territoriales a la direccion del Ministerio de Comercio Interior lo que permitiria una maniobra rapida de inventarios y se concentraria el comercio mayorista bajo una direccion unica. En la segunda etapa se reestructuraria el comercio mayorista en siete regiones de accion territoriales adecuandose a las condiciones de cada region el volumen de productos a circular. Se enuncia que estos cambios permitiran mejorar los indices economicos del Ministerio de Comercio Interior y elevar la calidad del servicio a la poblacion.

* Se da a conocer que la aviacion agricola en Cuba es parte integrante de las transformaciones tecnicas que en la agricultura se han realizado a partir del triunfo de la revolucion, con al utilizacion de medios quimicos para elevar las cosechas de diferentes cultivos en su costo de produccion y productividad del trabajo. Se analizan dos quinquenios y un area del pais atendida por un destacamento de aviacion agricola que brinda servicios de fertilizacion, aspersión y siembra a empresas agricolas y pecuarias. Se informa sobre la composicion del destacamento mencionado y su area de operaciones, asi como las causas que influyen en la subutilizacion de la aviacion en la economia, citandose por ejemplo: el sistema de tarifas aplicadas, la adquisicion de equipos terrestres por el MINAGRI y el MINAZ y las afectaciones a los cultivos colindantes sensibles a la contaminacion con herbicidas hormonales al medio ambiente. Se explica que las listas oficiales de precios vigentes a partir de 1981 afectan el uso de aviacion en todos los sectores de la economia nacional y que el uso de los equipos aereos no sobrepasa el 50 per cent, lo que provoca que el resto sea depreciado no por horas de vuelo sino por vencimiento de recurso calendario. Se realiza un esbozo de la economia cubana antes de 1959 y se anade un estudio comparativo con la situacion economica de America Latina, concluyendose con la demostracion de porque en Cuba se desarrollo la produccion nacional de bienes de capital en esta epoca. Se relata como el bloqueo economico impuesto a Cuba en esta epoca trataba de danarla con la paralizacion del parque de maquinaria industrial y equipos de transporte por la falta de piezas de repuesto, y como se logro solucionar paulatinamente este deficit con las innovaciones de los trabajadores y la adquisicion en los paises socialistas de peizas y componentes similares a los deficitarios. * Se plantea la situacion economica de los paises de America Latina y el Caribe con respecto a sus desequilibrios financieros, por los cuales sus gobiernos recurrieron al endeudamiento externo para ampliar o mantener sus plantas productivas; lo que unido a unas relaciones comerciales basadas en el intercambio desigual, entre las naciones desarrolladas y los paises atrasados, conforma el panorama de la deuda externa que gravita sobre esta area del mundo. Se citan los planteamientos centrales de la declaracion final del III Congreso de la AEALC con el interes de enfrentar la deuda externa regional y la posibilidad de crear un fondo monetario latinoamericano dentro de un Nuevo Orden Economico Internacio, y un proceso de integracion, cooperacion y apoyo mutuo en la region. Se expone una panoramica de la situacion financiera internacional, detallandose la posicion del FMI y los paises acreedores hacia los deudores y se proponen soluciones a seguir por America Latina y el Caribe para lograr que no subsistan las bases que mantienen el desequilibrio actual, enfatizandose que la deuda externa es impagable, conclusion que tendran que aceptar tarde o temprano los deudores de la misma.

* Se analiza en este trabajo las tendencias en el comportamiento estadístico de 28 indicadores técnico-económicos plasmados en términos relativos sobre la rentabilidad de los complejos agroindustriales azucareros, teniendo en cuenta que el 20 per cent del Producto Social Global y el 75 per cent de las exportaciones son generados por este sector. Se dedica atención especial al estudio sobre los componentes del costo de producción por peso de producción bruta, a la correlación salario medio-productividad y a las pérdidas de la provincia, cuantificándose en términos aproximados la incidencia de algunos de los factores que más repercuten sobre esta pérdida y las vías para su solución. Se toman como centro del análisis los datos de la provincia de la Habana, se posibilita el arribo a conclusiones generales basándose en la relación provincia-nación. Se recomienda continuar este estudio con mayor profundidad, desglosando los factores y aplicándolo a todos los complejos agroindustriales de la provincia para contribuir al mejoramiento de la producción azucarera y por ende de la rentabilidad de dichos complejos agroindustriales.

* Se trata de demostrar que, la ampliación de las facultades de los niveles de base de la economía cubana y su fortalecimiento es una necesidad dentro de la construcción del socialismo y específicamente en el perfeccionamiento del Sistema de Dirección y Planificación de la Economía en dicha base, mediante el ejercicio de la dirección centralizada y el uso de los instrumentos de control y los mecanismos del cálculo económico adecuados. Se señalan las deficiencias cometidas en la aplicación del Sistema de Dirección y Planificación, como por ejemplo: no se logró totalmente la autonomía relativa de las empresas, errores en la política salarial, en los planes de surtido, etc. Se cita que a partir de Marzo de 1988 se toman decisiones por el estado cubano para variar algunos aspectos del Sistema de Dirección y Planificación de la Economía en el terreno de la planificación, el ATM, las inversiones, y en la simplificación de modelos e indicadores; en el control de la actividad económica, la organización empresarial. Se hace referencia a las normas sobre la Unión y las Empresas Estatales que establece las características de la formación de uniones y empresas, funciones de sus cuadros actividades técnicas y económicas, y el perfeccionamiento de la dirección, que en conjunto permiten una adecuada aplicación del centralismo democrático. * Mounting economic problems and seriously overloaded services are threatening the Dominican Republic's position as the Caribbean's leading location for free trade zone production. Such zones, where materials and components are imported duty-free and assembled for export are multiplying all over the Caribbean and Central America. As a result, in competitiveness the Dominican Republic has fallen from third to sixth place among seven Caribbean countries. To counter this negative trend, the Dominican congress has recommended that (9) nine new free trade zones be added to the existing ones. Optimists also point to the political and labour harmony in the Dominican Republic, the substantial pool of cheap workers and the transport, banking and communications services as strong incentives to investors. However the dilemma for the Dominican government is how to tackle macro-economic and supply problems without aggravating social problems.

1990 general elections in Haiti.

Washington, DC: National Democratic Institute for International Affairs, 1991. 123 p. : ill. General

----->CDC 10676

* Assesses the 1990 general elections in Haiti from the point of view of the 33 member international observer delegation co-sponsored by the Council of Freely-elected Heads of Government and the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs (NDI). The Council/NDI monitoring effort was part of a larger role played by the international community in supporting Haiti's quest for democracy. The strong commitment of the United Nations; the Organization of American States, the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, the United States, Canada, Venezuela and other nations helped to ensure that this chance for democracy was forthcoming. The 1990 election was Haiti's freest and it provided President Jean-Bertrand Aristide a broad popular mandate for change. Covers the entire period from the pre-election activities of the visiting delegation to the final election day. Chapter one describes the Council and NDI activities in support of Haiti's election process. Chapters two and three present a brief historical and constitutional overview of Haiti. Chapter four discusses the electoral environment. The fifth chapter provides the delegation's election day observations, while the sixth describes the counting process, the January 20, 1991 run-off election and the inauguration. The seventh chapter offers some reflections on Haiti's election process. Also contains statements made by visiting delegates and the inaugural address of President Aristide on February 7, 1991.

Jamaica and the international drug economy.

In: Transafrica Forum, vol. 7, no. 3. 1990. pp. 49-57 General

-----> CDC Serial

* Examines the involvement of the developing countries in the international drug economy, with particular attention focused on Jamaica. The serious economic recession of the 1980s brought about a stagnation in economic growth in most developing countries and during the same period, the international production and distribution of illicit drugs underwent an alarming expansion. Between 1982 and 1985 worldwide production increased in all major drugs; more than 50 percent in opium, 40 percent in coca and almost 20 percent in marijuana. Jamaica, not immune to the general world situation and experiencing stagnationary effects from U.S. policies combined with International Monetary Fund policies saw the deterioration in living conditions of the poor. This left many Jamaicans open to the temptations of the drug economy. The relationship between capitalism and drugs is established and the history of how marijuana become a primary export product from Jamaica is traced. The political aspects of this informal sector is briefly explained, both the internal Jamaican involvement and the U.S. involvement.

-----> CDC 10569

* Reviews the literature on maternal health problems services and related social problems. States that Jamaica is characterized by relatively high levels of both fertility and female labour force participation and that it is important when considering health service utilization to remember the multiple responsibilities of women and their limited resources (time and money) for health care. Sites the low prevalence of legal marriages as another characteristic of Jamaican society and unstable unions have been blamed for high fertility. Discusses the findings on the main health issues identified as nutrition (anemia stands out as the most significant nutritional disorder impacting on maternal health, in addition to relatively high levels of endemic sickle cell anemia); fertility (the problem of teen pregnancy is dramatic, fertility peaks at age 20-24); infections and chronic diseases (the two leading causes of death for adult women are cerebrovascular accidents and coronary heart disease. High blood pressure is a major component of adult morbidity and mortality); stress and social problems (unemployment, economic inadequacy, separation of partners, male promiscuity, limited availability of schooling for children, unreliability of goods and services and violence). Examines the major health concerns of children and states that early weaning was identified as the single most important factor causing malnutrition and infant mortality in the late 1960's. Describes the availability and current levels of utilization of the health services including family planning, prenatal care, delivery and obstetrics referral services and training of health professionals. Identifies gaps in services and concludes with a discussion on areas for future studies.

* Defines the terms child abuse, sexual abuse, violent molestation and incest. Discusses the findings of a study on the reported incidence of sexual abuse at the Family Court during the period August 1982-July 1983. Describes the methodology used, the forms of sexual abuse reported and the medical findings. States that the facts support the argument that the true incidence is much higher than reported, and therefore highlights the problem of non-reporting. Rape and incest were the most common reported form of sexual abuse. Notes that there were not enough cases to adequately document family structure, family interaction and social conditions associated with sexual abuse. What was striking during the interviews with parents was their reluctance to report cases and they were even more reluctant to proceed with criminal proceedings even in cases of rape. Father-daughter incest was the most common form of incest in the study. Concludes that the long-term effects of sexual abuse are not known and follow up studies are now being done in an effort to document these effects.

* Notes the economic and social impact of larger hotels on resort towns and the national economy. Examines how much support exists for the tourism industry from those generally affected and the view of new concepts such as all inclusive properties. The overall sample of persons interviewed for the survey was 2,068; 654 were hotel workers, 740 guests, 12 managers, 360 persons in small business groups who earn their living directly from tourism and 302 citizens not connected directly or indirectly to the industry. Two hotels covered in the survey were located in Negril, five in Montego Bay, four in Ocho Rios and one in the parish of Trelawny, the first three places are important tourism areas. The interview centered on six questions that cover the areas of who benefits from tourism: (1) whether the small man gets full benefits from tourism; (2) the cost of tourism; (3) whether hotel workers get full benefits from tourism; (4) views of all inclusive hotels; (5) workers identification with the tourism industry and (6) whether hotel workers enjoy their work. Concludes from the interview that: (1) the small man is locked out from a fair share of benefits from the tourist industry; and (2) all inclusive hotels are seen as big money spinners for the by hoteliers, but as stumbling blocks in the path of the small interest in tourism. The second part the wages and salaries and the economic contributions made by the hotel industry. The general view was that the tourist industry is built on relatively low wages. Recommends that the industry break with the cheap labour tradition and create a climate where workers are better rewarded. Data presented illustrate the considerable contribution made by hotels to the national economy, with the all inclusive hotels lodging 81 percent more US dollars per hotel room in 1989-90. Recommends that the public be educated on the benefits of all inclusive hotels to the island's economy.

Some problems of micro Parliaments in Caribbean micro states: the Montserrat case.

In: Caribbean Affairs, vol. 4, no. 1. 1991. pp. 25-34 General

-----> CDC Serial

* Focuses mainly on the educational quality of the parliamentarians in the state of Montserrat. Proposes that at present parliamentarians are letting critical issues pass through the legislative process too quickly without adequate and in-depth discussion. Another Montserrat dilemma is that the image of the politician remains unattractive, so well-educated persons tend to reject a political career. Recommends certain strategies that may be adopted to remedy the situation. These are: attractive remuneration; controls on electioneering expenditure; modification of the regulation banning civil servants from entering active politics; electoral reform to ensure larger electoral districts, and political education. Suggests that the problems discussed, as well as the political culture presented here pose a problem for many microstates in the Caribbean.

The choice of an optimal rate is affected by a country's particular economic objectives (for example stabilisation of real domestic income, minimise fluctuations in the balance of trade). Economic reaction to a sectorial boom: Trinidad and Tobago

-----> TTP

* Provides an empirical study of the macroeconomic effects of the oil price rises of the 1970's on oil exporting Trinidad and Tobago. Argues that the boom created incentives for prices, factor rewards and resources to move against the (non-oil) tradeables sector relative to the nontradeables sector. This process was significantly influenced by Government policies. Domestic inflation significantly reduced the international price competitiveness of the tradeables sector. Narrowing of the price differential between the cost of imports and their domestic selling price was due to government tax rates and increased subsidies. In addition relaxation of exchange controls served to suppress the growth of premia to holders of import licences that would have occurred with the increase in aggregate demand in the fixed quota case. The end of the second oil boom ushered in a reversal of the economic mechanisms. Unemployment increased, whilst output prices, wages and labour began to move towards the tradeables sector

* Reviews the economic performance of the domestic economy noting that although world economic growth was buoyant during the period, the fuel exporting countries suffered a deterioration in their terms of trade while the deeply indebted countries continued to reel under their debt burden. Rates of inflation in developing countries rose during 1989 aided by recovery in international petroleum prices as the OPEC agreement on quotas was reached. For the seventh consecutive year real GDP declined but at a decelerating rate. Recent efforts to stimulate the petroleum sector include the implementation of a revised tax regime in 1988 and a revision of conditions attached to exploration and production licenses. The first phase of the South East Coast Consortium (SECC) project got underway in 1989. Lowering world wide market prices for petro-chemicals was felt in the Urea, Methanol and ammonia industries. Manufacturing contracted for the third consecutive year as did the constructing and quarrying. Tourism showed a decrease in visitors but the industry continues to be a focal point with the establishment of Tourism Development Authority, extension of Crown Point runway, opening of cruise ship terminal and addition of hotel rooms. Agriculture recorded significant growth in most areas. Wages continued to be generally depressed whilst unemployment officially stood at 22.4 percent. Fiscal policy focused on revision of taxation system, and expenditure reducing measures. Efforts to improve fiscal balance was facilitated by continued buoyancy of the international petroleum market with the price of oil reaching $18 US per barrel. Total public debt increased to $11,623 million. The state enterprises and public utilities sector showed slight improvement as revenue increased while expenses declined

* Proposes a change of attitude toward economic development and explores areas where agreements can be forged to create a guide for action during the decade of the gas in Trinidad and Tobago. Suggests that the ways to economic development are twofold: the "right values and attitudes" must adopted towards consumption, saving and investment, education and training, work, productivity and thrift, and risk taking; and an external economic environment which is not excessively unfavourable. The centre of the discussion is that "all of Trinidad and Tobago - individuals, governments, public utilities, state enterprises and private firms - must save much more than we now do." Brief notes on possible areas of improvement and development within the society are given. These are: training and education, human resource development; producing and exporting; employment; and ideology, consensus and development. Observes that Trinidad and Tobago needs more savings, investment, education, training, exporting and a more closely defined and agreed role for the government, and less consumption. All these are necessary to achieve economic and social improvement.

* Examines the management of the energy resources of Trinidad and Tobago, its oil and natural gas reserves, in the context of the CARICOM energy market, and the wider Caribbean Region including Venezuela and Mexico. At 1st January 1989, Trinidad and Tobago oil reserves were estimated at 528 million barrels, Barbados at half a million barrels, Venezuela possessed 58 billion barrels and Mexico 54 billion barrels. Trinidad and Tobago's natural gas reserves were estimated at 20 trillion cubic feet, an oil equivalent of two billion barrels of oil, at present, virtually untapped. Notes the fall in profitability in the international refining markets. Examines CARICOM trade in oil products and the position of its refining markets pointing out the realistic situation that CARICOM is not a growing vibrant market. Gives a brief insight into the future of oil production in the region. Concludes that the energy reality facing Trinidad and Tobago is that it is a natural gas economy not an oil economy. Presently 90 percent of its oil production depends on gas uplifting by injection into its oil reserves. Failure to accept and understand this situation could result in distortions in policy which influence economic thinking and planning.

Why does the tourist dollar matter: an introduction to the economics of tourism in the British Virgin Islands. Tortola: British Virgin Islands Tourist Board, 1989. xi, 141 p. : ill. General

* Written for high school students, considers the role tourism can play in creating the conditions for raising the standard of living of the islanders and the benefits to be derived from investing in tourism. Explains and illustrates the 'journey' of the tourist dollar throughout the economy - how the dollar changes hands, the income generation impact of tourist spending and the use of the tourist income multiplier as an indicator of economic performance. Characteristics of the tourism economy are described and tourism income is considered in terms of the generation and pattern of distribution of wages and profits within the tourism economy. Acknowledges that tourism benefits the islanders at different levels and as a significant source of government revenue, contributes to the nation's capacity to support its development efforts. Examines ways greater economic benefits can be achieved without eroding the social and physical balance of the islands and concludes that foreign involvement is no longer perceived as the most desirable way to increase the well being of the islanders and that the new approach contemplates a wider participation of nationals.

* An overview of child abuse and neglect with supporting statistical data. Identifies and discusses socio-cultural forces which include family relationships and economic conditions, attitudes and values and individual characteristics as the main contributing factors which provide an ecological systems perspective of the problem. Solutions include emphasis on prevention which must include community education with training before and after becoming parents, allocation of more funds and trained manpower to respond to referrals and improved inter-agency coordination and relations. Concludes that the approach to child rearing needs to be re-examined and this should be ecological in nature.

* Looks at the development of ports in the islands of Dominica, Trinidad and Antigua. The Government of all three islands retained the services of the consulting firm Novaport, a Nova Scotia based firm. In Dominica the company was involved in the Portsmouth Cruise Ship facility and the Fort Shirley and Cruise Ship Harbour complex, which won the American Express award for historic sites in 1990. In Trinidad the company was retained by PLIP-DELCO to undertake a study on the future development opportunities and required facilities to support recommended development. It also did a study for the Port Authority of Trinidad and Tobago (PATT) in which it recommended the creation of a new business district on the waterfront, with hotels, shops, offices and tourism facilities. In Antigua it prepared the St. John's Waterfront Development Plan which is intended to act as a background document for the long-term redevelopment of the Harbour. These examples illustrate the changes in the focus of modern Caribbean port development, particularly in its shift toward tourism.

Responses used to illustrate findings. Discusses the influence of the media. States that the findings provided a clearer picture of the current confusion and conflict on the use of corporal punishment and its status vis a vis contemporary perceptions about abusive parental behaviour. * Makes proposals for the consolidation of solutions to historical problems hindering a greater level of cooperation between the economies of Cuba and the member countries of CARICOM. Cuba's position on the question of unity and cooperation with CARICOM is illustrated as supportive. However, the larger integration movement among the Caribbean and Latin America is an important consideration that influences the Cuba/CARICOM relations. A history of the relationship between Cuba and CARICOM helps to put the issue into perspective. Cuba has trade with CARICOM and its main importers were Grenada, Guyana, Barbados and Jamaica. The collaboration between Cuba and CARICOM however has not been restricted to trade. For many years Cuba offered medical assistance to Guyana, and at times to Jamaica and Grenada. Assistance has also been given to Cuba in education, fisheries, agriculture, construction, science and technology and sports. There is a global trend toward cooperation and the Cuba/CARICOM relationship should be revived but without the political ghost. Recommends that provisions hindering cooperation be removed, mechanisms for trade be broadened, common objectives of development be identified and collective activity to promote the advantageous use of resources be encouraged. Bilateral and multilateral development assistance should be jointly pursued and advantage taken of already existing links. Concludes that the process toward integration is complex and difficult but it will help to achieve the objectives of mankind.

Firstly it questions whether the structural adjustment packages of the IMF and the World Bank are really taking the countries under their programmes any closer to meaningful economic development. A study is made of the macroeconomics of an IMF programme and the microeconomics of the World Bank structural adjustment loans. Notes that the workings of the international economy is dependent on international events and how they serve the developed nations. The end of the cold war therefore, marks the end of an era of development assistance since it served as a geopolitical instrument of staking out areas of influence.

* Addresses linkages that exist or might exist among economies of a region and their impact on them. Examines the public policy context within which these linkages take place. The importance of exports and how their structure changes under external influences is a base for this study. Using an input-output analysis, Puerto Rico is studied to assess the impact of its exports on the Caribbean economy. Identifies industries that benefited the most from this trade and the impact it has had on income and production, also sheds light on the economic impact of intra-regional trade on the economy of the region. Divided into several sections: Part II identifies policies adopted by the Government of Puerto Rico since 1985 towards improving and modifying its links with the Caribbean. The policies were developed with the view of restructuring the Caribbean economies and readjusting the economic dependency in Puerto Rico. Part III examines the structure of trade between Puerto Rico and its Caribbean trading partners. Provides background information on the changes in Puerto Rico's economy from the monoculture to industrialization and later to manufactured products, which by extension leads to change in trade patterns. This background information is necessary for the analysis in Part IV, which presents the results of the input-output analysis. It shows the economic impacts and multiplier effects on employment and production on exports to the Caribbean. 1986 is used as a base year in the study. Concludes that participation of Caribbean countries in Puerto Rico's trade is low and its economic impact relatively small. Some industries have benefited more than others, particularly those which have been losing their competitiveness in the United States market. Contains graphs and tables that show: exports to the Caribbean by Puerto Rico; the contribution by dollar of exports; production and employment generated in the economy; and the multiplier impact, contribution of exports to macroeconomic variables to the Caribbean countries exports to the Caribbean.

* Examines how far the University of the West Indies, Cave Hill Campus is providing for the needs of the Eastern Caribbean in the field of management. Views management development as "a process which systematically develops desired attitudes, skills and knowledge among the participants so that they can function effectively in their role as managers and contribute toward organisational goal accomplishments" (Baba, 1987). Assesses the approach of the University's programmes as it perceives the needs of industry and government in the Caribbean, an assessment not based on collaboration between the business sector and the University. The programmes used lacked relevant Caribbean material such as case studies and teaching technology. The need to focus on research in the area of management development has also been identified. The challenge which currently faces the Cave Hill Campus in two fold: it needs to enrich the undergraduate curriculum if it is to respond creatively to the demand for relevance; and its programmes should be designed to meet both current and anticipated developmental needs for both the private and public sector. Notes that the Campus, through the centre for Management Development and the relationship that is gradually being forged between the centre and the Department of Management studies, plus the important requirements of the business community. The campus is well placed to play a strategic role in the development of an important human resource.

* Examines firstly the economic conditions of the Caribbean and Central America. In the Caribbean the rising level of unemployment, 25-40 percent region-wide, is one of the most visible signs of economic degradation. Central America for almost ten years has been plagued by military conflict and economic decline. Since 1978 it has gone backwards in almost every socio-economic measure of well-being, including income, education, health and life expectancy. The external debt of Costa Rica grew to 102 percent of GDP in 1985, Nicaragua increased six-fold between 1975 and 1986, Honduras and Costa Rica increased five fold and El Salvador four fold. The severity of the crisis has led to a massive call for immediate international action. Touches also on the role of women in this crisis situation. Discusses the role of the Non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in this crisis. The role of the NGOs in development issues and their future role in the Caribbean and Central America is presented. Non-governmental aid has become an increasingly important factor in Third World development efforts, in both quantitative and qualitative terms. The NGOs and international agencies are concerned with alternative strategies of development. These strategies are: dependence on making local exports competitive on world markets and taking an approach which stresses intra-regional trade and interdependence, increases regional food self-sufficiency, and insulates regional markets from the world market. In supporting these patterns and modes of development, NGOs are providing the economic resources necessary for the promotion of an alternative political paradigm. These two aspects of NGOs role and function are examined and also the problems they face in Central America and the Caribbean is focussed on.

* Cited as a contribution to the pursuit of weighing options and priorities in the general area of education and training, the report states that the rationale for the forum was based on the perceived need to reflect on issues critical to developing new and reorienting existing areas of specialization at the professional level with a view to enhancing human capital formation for the benefit of the Caribbean region as a whole. An underlying assumption is that social and economic development in the region will require a significant upgrading of higher-level skills, acquisition of pools or teams of specialists in new areas and reorganization of established institutions or creation of new mechanisms to assist in the delivery of the required skills. The specific objectives of the forum to achieve greater clarity in understanding the rationale and urgency for special attention to human capital formation at the professional level; heightened awareness of the role and functions, strengths and limitations of current institutions or programmes concerned with education and training; establishment of an agenda and terms of reference by which identified needs for training and retraining in new areas of specialization and reorientation of existing ones can be met. * Defines sustainable development. Analyses the development of scientific and technological policy and discusses the future role of science and technology for sustainable development in small island states. Identifies areas for critical shifts in policy if the imperatives of sustainable development are to progress beyond the stage of wishful thinking. Concludes that the view that resources in terms of energy and minerals are limited is myopic. It is technology that makes resources and technology is always changing, and a vision of future society based on the limitations of the present could lead to assumptions that are invalid. Analyzing the past when making projections for the future should not be done on the basis of existing technological possibilities. The impact of external influences, and in particular, technology has been a crucial element in the socio-economic evolution of the Caribbean. * Attempts to provide a complete picture on the social and economic developments in the Caribbean and the international economy during the 1980s. The contracting economies of developed nations at this period led to a reduction in the demand for the products of developing nations therefore cutting their export earnings. Also the climbing interest rates in developed nations increased the cost of developing nations to service their debts. These two reasons led to the debt crisis: an economic situation that directed the course of the international economy for the decade of the 1980s. A study is made of the performance of export products from the Caribbean during the 1980s since it would cast light on the country's performance and the prospects of the 1990s. The products examined were sugar, bananas, manufactures, minerals and tourism, these are the principle sources of the regions prosperity. Examines also the social impact of economic contraction on the people of the Caribbean. Concludes that the people of six countries - the Dominican Republic, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago have become poorer in the past five years. Based on the assessment of these facts, the article seeks to derive a framework for the second part of the document which aims to provide a set of proposals to assist in reflections on the requirements for sustained development of the Caribbean in the decade of the 1990s. Recommends that emphasis be placed on enhanced economic efficiency with the accent on vastly improved human skills; the building of social cohesion; and adherence to a development path that is environmentally sustainable.

* There are four central themes in tourism research: the structure of the tourism system, the mutual perceptions and interactions between tourists and locals and both the socio-economic and socio-cultural impacts of tourism. Concentrates on the socio-cultural impacts of tourism particularly the work of Mathieson and Wall (1982) and Cohen (1984). Examines research firstly on a general and international level, then concentrates on the theoretical and methodological issues in tourism research and finally it focuses on tourism research in the Caribbean. Section I deals with the socio-cultural themes treated in international literature. Each theme is explained and supported by examples quoted from the available literature. The themes deal generally with tourism and its effects on culture, moral deviation, language, morality, social stratification, politics, employment, the division of labour, the disruption of the rhythm of everyday life, family and human relationships. Section II looks at the theoretical and methodological issues in relation to the socio-cultural impacts of tourism. They are dealt with under five basic themes: philosophical issues, the question of spuriousness, the use of theory, hypotheses and hunches, and methodological procedures. Notes that there is a constant inter-facing between theory and method in tourism research. Section III examines tourism research on the Caribbean. It inter-relates the themes explored in section I, emphasising the negative nature of the academic treatment of tourism in the Caribbean. Tourism and colonialism, self identity and stereotyping are explored. Also examines the treatment of the bastardization of culture in the Caribbean, the rise of multinational hotels and the saturation and irritation that tourism perpetrates. Concludes with some additional quotations from tourism research which suggest a possible research agenda for the future in the Caribbean.

Analyses future regional imperatives and policy options with respect to current trends in global population growth and natural resource use. Concludes that governments of the region will need to respond to the issues that impact directly on water resources and their role in sustainable development. Legislation should be reviewed; the interaction between water resources and socio-economic activities should be closely coordinated; mechanisms for rational water allocation to competing users will be necessary; national and regional water resource institutions will have to be reorganised, rationalized and strengthened and a water resource management information system should be developed to provide a management tool with an inventory database to assist in implementing an early warning system, investment planning and management.

Refers to the increasing apprehension about other regional and global issues with potential implications for the region. Examines the progress made in developing national and regional instruments for the protection of the environment and the rational management of natural resources. States that the destruction of the resource base is an economic, social and political problem and calls on governments to express full political will in support of re-orientation of development and natural resource management strategies. Points out that a better understanding of the resources of the region is important as well as the design of alternative development strategies that make use of these resources productively and sustainably. An overall plan is required to strengthen regional cooperation on environmental matters. Concludes that the challenge in the future is to avoid the destruction of the resource base and the adoption of development strategies that are sustainable and in harmony with the social and ecological potential of the region. * Se plantea una vision general sobre el problema de la deuda en America Latina tocando cuatro aspectos fundamentales: caracterizacion del fenomeno del endeudamiento externo, la situacion reciente de la deuda, las perspectivas de la misma incluyendo la repercusion del crac de las bolsas y las consecuencias del endeudamiento externo para los paises deudores. Se enuncia la relacion de la deuda externa de America Latina con la crisis economica de los anos 80 que continua gravando sobre la economia de nuestra region y sobre su desarrollo, asi como la afectacion de la politica economica en todos sus aspectos pues absorbe una proporcion sustancial del ahorro interno, reduciendo la capacidad para invertir e importar, afectando los salarios y elevando la inflacion y el desempleo. Se enuncia la incidencia de esta situacion en el consumo, los topes al gasto estatal y el acrecentamiento de las tensiones politicas y sociales. Se hace una reafirmacion de la impagabilidad de la deuda, aun con la vision unilateral ante este problema ante acreedores que tratan al menos de cobrar una parte de ella y se concluye afirmando que el futuro de nuestros paises con respecto a la deuda continua comprometido pues cada dia surgen nuevos elementos en el mundo capitalista que lo agravan.

Growing presence of women in development.

* One of the most far-reaching social changes in Latin America and the Caribbean region in the last 30 years has been the ever increasing presence of women in public life, particularly in education and the work force. Working women in the world today total 815 million. In the decade 1975-1985, 15 million women were incorporated annually into the labour market. The female work force in Latin America tripled between 1950 and 1980, increasing from 10 to 32 million. Reviews the impact of major changes in the situation of women in the region over the last decades both in the region over the last decades both in the public and private domains. Major changes in women's issues stem from demographic aspects, advances in birth control methods, supported at times by demographic policies; the movement of women into the work place; expansion of education which gave a greater equality of opportunities to women; legislation now being reviewed in many Latin American and Caribbean countries, have a positive shift in the direction of equality of rights, responsibility and opportunities for women; the international community has also been promoting full participation of women in all spheres of social life. Participation by women in social movements seem to indicate a broader cultural transformation tied to new forms of political activity; and the family structure which has also undergone changes due, partially to the factors explained and to the breakdown in some marriages. All these changes effect groups of women in different ways but however while major changes are taking place in urban sectors, the status of rural women remain relatively unfavourable.

* Examines the stages in the process of the integration of women in development. The first stage was improving their status as beneficiaries of the developmental process. The second emphasised the design of policies to incorporate women as participants or agents of development. The third stage, which is the main focus of this paper, is the process of women's actual integration in development and the magnitude of the problem. Suggests that, it is not that women are not integrated since they participate in nearly all activities of the developmental process. The problem lies in the imbalance between their contribution and the benefits they receive. The general situation of women in Latin America and the Caribbean greatly exceeded the levels expected. In the last 30 years the number of economically active women has grown by 120.2 percent (ILO 1980). It is estimated that by the end of the decade the region will have 55 million women in the labour market of which some 22 million will have been incorporated between 1980 and the year 2000. This massive incorporation of women in the labour force has mainly to do with more and better education for women and the deterioration of real household income levels. Various studies clearly support the conclusion that women have not been taken efficiently and realistically into account either in development strategies or in development policies. Projects already introduced contain a number of flaws; (1) they start with the premise that there is a need to integrate women in development; (2) they are designed to focus more on welfare objectives; and (3) these types of action usually operate at a macroeconomic level and are carried out in an isolated uncoordinated fashion. Suggests that proposals regarding the integration of women in development policies should identify and eliminate barriers to that integration, point out services offered by the state so that the volume, nature and specifics of women's work can be taken into account. The recognition of the region's Governments that the relief of poverty cannot be postpone and in designing strategies women are indispensable; and the growing awareness of the problem by UN agencies are two factors which support the definite insertion of women in developmental policies. Gives a series of methodological steps to be considered when taking women into account in the planning process. Looks at the limitations and problems which may arise when considering these planning efforts.

Preparation of inventories and balance sheets of the natural and cultural heritage.

* Efforts to protect the natural and cultural heritage of the region have already been implemented by countries in Latin America and the Caribbean. For the natural heritage, systems of protected areas such as national parks and reserves have been created. For cultural heritage the countries have developed programmes through special institutions such as museums, archives, ministries, secretariats and heritage institutes. However, there are no global programmes for making or maintaining inventories of the natural and cultural heritage. Nor has there been any significant initiatives to incorporate a country's heritage in its national accounts. The subject is becoming more compelling in light of the exhaustion of resources and the lack of knowledge of a country's heritage endowment and the development process. Section A discusses the definitions and objectives of a natural and cultural heritage programme. Suggests that the natural heritage should include those natural goods that have not undergone modifications or whose artificialisation has been so negligible that their natural behaviour has not been significantly ordered. The cultural heritage consists of inherited goods, places of historical and prehistorical importance, places where the indigenous and foreign cultures met. Section B proposes the classification of the natural and cultural heritage given an example of how the scheme should be done and what it should contain. Section C describes heritage balance in natural accounts systems. It looks at the evaluation of natural resources and how they could be incorporated into national accounting systems. Section D examines the criteria for designing accounts. Section E looks at the integration of natural heritage accounting in systems of national accounts and Section F makes recommendations for a natural and cultural heritage programme. Details of how programmes should be carried out and what balance sheets should eventually contain is also given.

Unequal participation by women in the working world.

* According to census records in Latin American societies the greater part of the adult male population appears as working population while the majority of women appears as non-working population, i.e., they are registered as homemakers. In exploring the reason for this, it was discovered that the definition of the term "working population" used in censuses and surveys posed a number of difficulties for the proper measurement of female work. However, despite the limitations and defects in population censuses, they are the only statistical instrument available for measuring the main trends in the economic participation of the population overtime. Through an analysis of these census figures, attempts are made to outline the work undertaken by Latin American women in the labour markets and in the domestic area. The economic crisis within Latin America countries and its repercussions on women's work and on family life and the home are also discussed. Trends in women's participation in the labour market between 1960 and 1980/1985 have the following characteristics: female workers by age increased in the period 1960-1985 in all groups between 15 and 64; there was greater participation by young age groups (20-24 and 25-29) in all countries with advanced modernization such as Argentina, Uruguay, Chile and Costa Rica. The trend in countries such as Paraguay and Guatemala, the participation structure by age is the same as prevailed in 1960. A study done by the International Labour Organisation in 1984, shows that among women in Latin America, time dedicated to housework was often equal to or greater than that dedicated to paid work in the market, so that a high proportion of housewives were "overemployed." From 1980, onward Latin America experienced a drastic decline in economic growth and this was reflected in the labour market and the home. Conclusions drawn from the statistical and qualitative data provided show that the repercussions of the crisis had different effects on workers of the both sexes. The situation of inequality has been heightened by the crisis, to the point where average female income in some cases is half of the average male income.

* An analysis of people's attitude's toward environmental deterioration. An opinion survey covering 16 countries, both developing and developed, revealed widespread concern about environmental deterioration. Between February 1988 and June 1989 Louis Harris and Associates conducted an opinion survey for UNEP of 8325 adults, both leaders and members of the general public from Argentina, Brazil, China, The Federal Republic of Germany, Hungary, India, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Mexico, Nigeria, Norway, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, the USA and Zimbabwe. The results of the survey reflected that many people felt more should be done to reverse present trends, even if it meant foregoing some material gains. The majorities felt that their countries should be doing more to protect the environment, they varied over 95 percent in India and 72 percent in Saudi Arabia. The argument that the public will pay only lip service to the idea of a cleaner environment but unwilling to pay the necessary economic price was refuted by the survey. Majorities in every country, ranging from 90 percent in Mexico to 62 percent in Zimbabwe, said they would prefer to have lower standards of living with lesser health risk, rather than higher living standards with higher health risk. In most countries political survival now demands sensitivity to public opinion on environmental matters. The environment has become a global political issue which governments cannot afford to neglect. Contains a number of tables on different aspects of the survey, and public attitudes on: current levels of spending on the environment; favouring stronger action to protect the environment; whether countries should do more or less to protect the environment; standard of living versus health risks; willingness to pay higher taxes of extra revenue were spent to protect the environment.

* Examines the consequences of sexual abuse in children. Questions whether the impressions gained from clinical case studies can be supported by studies which review the total population of sexually abused children. States that little research has been done on families in which abuse has occurred; few studies of perpetrators; and what is even more important little attention paid to the characteristics of those who have been less disturbed following sexual abuse - "the survivors". Reviews a selection of recent outcome studies which looked at relatively short-term effects of child sexual abuse. Summarises a number of studies which looked at adults to see what were the possible long-term effects. States that these studies were of non-clinical populations and seem to indicate that there are long-term effects in a significant proportion of the victims. None of the studies give any information about the long-term effects of sexual abuse in boys. Summarises the effects of child sexual abuse and identifies the methodological problems which occur in follow-up studies. Describes a follow-up study done at the children's Hospital Camperdown, the methodology and findings and concludes that child sexual abuse does have adverse effects on children particularly on their behaviour, friendships, school performance and self esteem. In the long-term there may be manifestations of violent behaviour in some of these children. Concludes that a lot more research needs to be done and suggests areas for further development.

* Discusses the international events that will shape and impact upon the international system of the early years of the 21st century. The events analysed are: (1) the US/USSR relations; (2) the democratization of Eastern Europe; (3) the formation of trading blocs on a regional basis and; (4) the rise of the economic powers of the Pacific Rim countries. This evolving international system is already bringing new issues such as the environment, drug trafficking and international migration to the top of the international agenda. Analyses how these issues which are determined by the industrialized nations impact upon the developing world and the Caribbean in particular. The new international emphasis on the environment is perceived as having a detrimental effect on the development efforts of the Third World. The reason being that industrialized nations are beginning to insist that environmental safeguards be put in place on development projects that are using their funding. These safeguards are sometimes costly and render the projects infeasible. The lack of resources to fight illicit drugs in developing countries and the fear of being swamped by the US with their need to fight drugs, is bringing the drug issue closer to becoming a critical foreign policy issue in the Caribbean's international relations. The issue of international migration is still being treated at the national level. However should it take on a global perspective the focus will not be on the problems of the developing world but those of the developed nations. Other issues such as the shift in North/South relations to a S. A. summary of these issues from a Caribbean perspective is given.

* Outlines the importance of examining the life choices of young women in the context of their productive and reproductive roles in society. Discusses the interrelationship and implications of these roles for women, population control and development activities in developing countries. Illustrates the commitment of the UN Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA) in its efforts to enhance the role, status and quality of life for women. This commitment has been translated into operational population and development activities. Focuses on the situation of young women in developing countries, particularly their reproductive years. Examines briefly the trends and patterns in adolescent fertility, early marriages, teenage pregnancies, abortions, mortality, traditional practices and low educational opportunities and employment. The UNFPA supports projects specifically directed at girls and young women dealing with population, family life and sex education and to some extent family planning. Their programmes are channelled through the formal school system, and non-formal educational programmes serve out-of-school youth. They are also involved in reaching young girls through women's organizations, training young girls in skills for non-traditional women's jobs and in supporting reproductive health services for teenagers, such as those in the Philippines, Chile, Guatemala, Indonesia, Mauritius, Nigeria and Peru. In the area of research the UNFPA has provided WHO with support to carry out an inter-regional study on health, demographic and social problems related to adolescent fertility. The project has produced an Annotated Bibliography, and volume I, a Report on adolescent reproductive behaviour in developing countries. Volume II on developing countries is almost completed. At the country level the UNFPA provided support to IPPF for a survey in Trinidad and Tobago on knowledge, attitudes and cultural patterns of adolescents 10-19 years of age, toward pregnancy, parenthood, contraception and contraceptives. It was expected to help and provide information for the National Family Planning Association with its education programme. In Jamaica a unique and innovative approach was tried to educate young men and women on population and family matters. It was started by the Jamaican Women's Bureau in 1978, to permit continuity of education for pregnant schoolgirls (12-16yrs) who had withdrawn from school.

* Proposes that obesity and non-communicable diseases are intimately associated with personal life styles, and some of these conditions are reversible with the adoption of healthier lifestyles. Many of the chronic diseases such as high blood-pressure, high levels of blood cholesterol and hardening of the arteries start early in childhood. It is imperative therefore that children are taught good habits from very early in order to reverse this process. The WHO's Integrated Programme for the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases (INTER HEALTH) focuses on the prevention of chronic diseases among children. Several developing countries have joined the programme. The Antiguan component of the project is to develop a process through which training in healthy lifestyles could be adopted gradually in schools. Measurements of body weight, blood pressure and serum profiles will form the basis for evaluating the programme. The concept of the project is centered around the questions: Am I the right weight?; Am I doing my daily physical exercise?; Am I eating right?; Do I have a positive self concept? The programme utilizes several approaches to achieve its goals: Intersectoral approach; Multidisciplinary approach; Educational approach; Personal approach; sequential learning; Community-based approach; Positive approach; Infusion approach; and cost-effective approach. No real project evaluation has been carried out but a pre- and post-project questionnaire assessing increased lifestyle awareness of lifestyle changes will be administered in all new schools incorporated in the programme. This programme should help students enhance their academic performance and save the country's meager resources from being wasted on the management of these diseases. Report on policies for women in the rural sector (Republic of Trinidad and Tobago). St. Augustine: UWI. Women and Development Studies Group (St. Augustine, TT), 1990. 75 p. : tbls. ill. General

* Provides a diagnosis of the role of women in the development of rural sectors in Trinidad and Tobago from 1980. Section I deals with a socio-demographic analysis of the population and provides a social and economic assessment of women in rural development with an indepth look at the composition of the rural population. Section II looks at the policies, programmes and projects at governmental and non-governmental levels (Caribbean Association for Feminist Research and Action, CAFRA, and Caribbean Network for Integrated Rural Development, CNIRD) and the institutional measures for policy implementation. Section III provides a critical analysis of the major conceptual and operational difficulties regarding policies, programmes and projects, and the experiences of other Caribbean countries. Section IV identifies alternatives for action. The proposals suggested are directed towards addressing the deficiencies in policies i.e. national training workshops targeted at policy makers; support for CAFRA's research/action project on women in Caribbean agriculture and establishment of a mechanism for documenting and disseminating information which will assist in the empowerment of rural women.

---->TTP

* Examines the role of culture in society and notes that long neglect has caused accelerating decay in architectural and historical heritage. Presents guidelines for the establishment of a National Cultural Policy including recognition of the plurality of the society and of the cultural forms of the diverse ethnic groups. Also points to the need to establish a balance between government support for culture and the necessary autonomy to free culture from over bureaucratization, of centralism of decision making and prescriptive policies. Two options are recommended: (1) the establishment of a Trinidad and Tobago Commission on Culture as a statutory body; and (2) the establishment of a Trinidad and Tobago Commission on Culture as an advisory body.

* A critical look at the Caribbean indicates that technological advances are changing the contours of the region; responses to this will be critical to any kind of orderly future. Money is likely to be tight and economic assistance from the north is not as concentrated as before. Perhaps what the region needs is to focus its attention on its very careful examination of what it may in large part offer a foreign investor, how it may innovate in financial participation options to attract capital to the region. One possible avenue may be in the quality of our human resources, taking advantage of the increasing emphasis on knowledge-intensive products.

* Defines neglect and considers some of the reasons for parental abuse and neglect or rejection of the parental role. Discusses with supporting statistics, a programme formulated to combat child abuse and neglect in Barbados through legislative reform, educational outreach and counselling services. States that Barbados is now at the crossroads - the community has been motivated and sensitized and various professionals (doctors, nurses, teachers and police) have been mobilized to take action. Discusses the need for more in-depth approach on legal reform including the establishment of a family court; prevention and multi-disciplinary linkages; treatment and research issues. Emphasises the need for sound and informed policy decisions and suggests that the issue should be placed on the political agenda of the country. Urges the establishment of national committees for the study of child abuse and neglect on an island-to-island basis and refers to the issue of mandatory reporting and effective utilization of human resources. Concludes with a summary of recommendations for child abuse programmes in the Caribbean.

* Focuses on the problems of coastal erosion and conservation, an issue with far reaching economic implications for most Caribbean countries. Reviews the significance of coasts to national development and the natural and man-induced causes of coastal erosion. States that prior to the late 1970s, the concept of coastal-zone management was largely unknown. Identifies the management initiatives now being implemented by various governments. Concludes that although certain developments are taking place it is still uncertain that there is full commitment to sound coastal management practices in all countries, without which even the best strategies will not be effective. Provides suggestions which may assist policy makers in designing more comprehensive coastal management strategies.

* Examines the inter-relationship between health in general and tourism and points out how health and health services are important considerations for tourists. Some of the basic illnesses of the tourist usually relate to food-borne diseases and disorders related to risky behaviour. However, the health of the tourist is not only important in terms of his or her welfare but is also based on the concern that the returning tourist may introduce diseases into their country of origin. The implications for the destination country are based on, the environmental impact and local health services which are called to treat not only minor ailments but now with the increase age of the tourist, sometimes more severe illnesses. The Health Tourism aspect of tourism is almost always neglected in the whole tourism product, even though tourism itself is based on rest and relaxation in a healthy environment. Recommends that the points of interaction between health and tourism be explored further with emphasis being placed on the impact of tourism on local physical and environmental health. The extent to which Health Tourism can be a part of the tourism product also needs research.

Discusses policy issues and recommends that governments focus on issues of particular concern to Caribbean people that they should support the interest and initiative of NGOs and community-based groups especially those which take account of women's specific perspectives, poor women being recognized as key actors. They should align themselves firmly with the interest of the majority of their electorate instead of with the financial interests of the few. -----> CDC 10488

* Discusses influencing international institutions in the context of building a framework for discussion about public policy relating to sustainable development. Explores the features of the relationship between the international organizations and the Caribbean countries, the difficulties which emerge and the need to change the parameters of such a relationship. States that present approaches to international developmental assistance appear to be inimical to the long-term interest of developing countries. Some positive results have been seen from the activities of and interaction with particular organizations, but overall existing approaches and arrangements should be re-examined where the present reality diverges from the goals of developing societies. This is seen to be even more urgent given the advent of environmental considerations on the global agenda. Discusses the implications of environmental protection and preservation issues for developing countries and suggests a set of measures which are important, not because of their potential to influence international institutions and international relations generally but because they constitute an inescapable set of imperatives for the progress and long-term viability and social stability of Caribbean societies. Discusses the formulation of public policy for sustainable development and a framework for discussion. Stresses the need for regional unity both in purpose and action if it is hoped to exercise any influence in the international community.

* Discusses the major shifts that have taken place in the characters of the labour force over the past decade and analyses the implications for sustainable development as it relates to the current situation largely brought on by IMF conditionality and structural adjustment programs. To cope with these realities trade unions and the labour movement must significantly restructure and re-orient themselves. Offers as possible solutions new approaches - enhanced worker awareness which includes worker education, employee - involvement programmes, contract bargaining, incentive schemes, a strengthened labour lobby at the governmental level for appropriate policy and changes needed in IMF conditionality. Argues for a social unionism to complement the economic and social unionism that has historically characterized Caribbean labour.

* Discusses age variations found in legislation throughout the region and suggests that one approach to rationalisation of age and definition is to classify all juveniles as children and all offences committed against them as serious offences. Considers the existing law with regard to emotional, economic, physical and sexual abuse. Notes that a review of the law is a useful starting point to break the cycle of an abused child eventually becoming an abusing adult. Concludes that throughout the Commonwealth Caribbean legislation has been enacted to punish illtreatment, neglect and abuse of children however the legislation is not easy to find. Suggests a project aimed at collecting and collating all the laws in the region relating to children which could then be reviewed, revised and updated. Calls for careful consideration to rationalising and harmonising child law in the region and suggests that interesting advances in legislation already in place could be canvassed as models. States that several countries have already reformed the law intended to alleviate economic abuse, the existing provisions in relation to physical and sexual abuse could be brought together in an Indecency with Children Act, and further considerations should be given to the codification of all law relating to children. Suggests multi-dimensional action needed to effectively resolve the problem of child abuse and the introduction of laws to force notification of suspected cases. Refers to the appointment of a children's ombudsman or youth advocate and puts forward the ideal as a family court with and criminal divisions and provision of the necessary ancilliary social services.

* Suggests that presently a number of factors exist which demand that the leaders of the Caribbean seize this opportunity to move toward regional cooperation. The working group on regional integration defined some basic goals for integration: regional food security; deepening of the industrialization process; and expanding the competitiveness of the Caribbean economies.

However the age old factors of differences in language, culture, ideology, lack of knowledge and transport still inhibit the move toward cooperation. A number of global issues including the global economic crisis make the independent survival of small economies virtually impossible. They also make regional cooperation imperative. These issues are: the movement toward trading blocs, US-Canada Free Trade arrangements, the EEC of 1992; development within UNCTAD and the Group of 77 toward greater South-South cooperation; the sponsorship of the Crockett Bill in the US which directs funds for the use of Caribbean nations toward regional integration. The study focuses on CARICOM, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, the French islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe, (Departments Francaise D'Amerique) (DFAs), Haiti, and Puerto Rico. Divided into four sections. Section One looks at the global environment, major developments that may impact on the region's economies. These are the Uruguay Round, the Single European Market of 1992, the Lome IV Convention and the US - Canada Free Trade agreement. Section Two discusses the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) its history and its experiences. Focuses on intra-regional trade with CARICOM and cooperation within non-economic fields. Section Three examines regional cooperation in the wider Caribbean both institutional and non-institutional. Looks at the experiences of CDCC and the Caribbean Environmental Programme. Focuses on individual nations, such as Puerto Rico, and the Dominican Republic, and explains the problem with trade within the region. Section Four looks at the future of regional cooperation in the Caribbean. Recommends cooperation in trade, finance, agriculture, industry and external bargaining as a means of achieving competitiveness of the Caribbean economies and eventually regional cooperation.

* Discusses the possible deepening of relationships between the "Departments Francias d'Amerique" (DFAs) of Martinique, Guadeloupe and French Guiana with CARICOM. There are certain factors however that prevent this. They are linguistic barriers, the Common External Tariff and the already established relationships with the Convention of Lome and the trade agreements CBI and CARIBCAN, which do not apply to DFAs. Details of the factors that hamper relations are listed under the broad subjects of economic related, policy related and already established regional and international ties. The economic related factors are: weak and unbalanced trade which exist between the islands; the almost non-existence of joint production - the idea of promoting partnership with CARICOM enterprises as a means of industrial development is now being successfully accepted in the DFA's business sector; and in the relatively insignificant flow of interisland tourists. In terms of policy related issues, these areas are: strategy of product development; trade barriers; monetary and fiscal policies; and the obstacle of free movement of people. The impact of external factors on regional cooperation are: the DFAs relationship with France which gives them a clear advantage; preferential schemes such as Lome, CBI and CARIBCAN actually define the concept of the Caribbean; the lack of a co-ordinated aid programme which can play a significant role in facilitating regional cooperation. Concludes that the possibility does exist for regional cooperation. By careful planning and genuine exploitation of different North/South programmes, such as the Convention of Lome, Caribbean countries can make a positive step to South/South cooperation. The proposal of the "Kangooroo Operation" a new industrial strategy for investment between "CARICOM and DFA countries is explained. Proposes greater involvement of DFA countries in Caribbean affairs and in sectors such as Tourism and Fishing.

* States that the growth of Caribbean tourism since the 1970s has been mainly due to deliberate policies initiated by regional government but that the success of these policies has been at heavy cost to the environment. Points out that management of coastal and marine resources on which tourism is sustained is yet to be integrated into developmental strategies. Briefly summarises performance and trends and describes some of the major issues and impacts that result from tourism's use of marine and coastal resources. Presents recommendations and suggestions which look at tourism in the context of a wider public policy framework for sustainable development including a call for improvement of the database to facilitate sound policy decisions on the industry. Concludes that the region can accommodate twice as many tourists with significantly less resource degradation provided conservation and developmental policies are integrated and there is willingness to invest in the human and institutional capacity to improve management of coastal and marine environments.

* Provides the rationale for the plan in a brief background statement. The conceptual framework is followed by an appraisal of the principal environmental problems that need to be overcome - resource management problems (deforestation, soil loss and degradation, the determination of marine and coastal resources, determination of water resources); environmental quality problems (the urban environmental predicament, environmental consequences of energy issues, illegal drug-crop cultivation); global environmental problems (global climatic changes, ozone layer depletion, transboundary hazardous waste movements, loss of biodiversity); the regional response to these problems - the establishment of environmental institutions, enactment of legislation, expansion of international participation and adoption of sub-regional, regional and world environmental cooperative initiatives; and the factors that reduce the effectiveness of environmental management. Defines the general objectives of the plan as the strengthening and streamlining of the regional cooperative system on the environment and identifies specific objectives at national, regional and global levels. Outlines the proposed programme elements and spin-offs, and identifies the institutional instruments which will be responsible for promoting the plan, carrying out follow-up on intergovernmental decisions, monitoring programme development and administering co-ordination mechanisms. Proposes the sub-division of financial requirements according to the three levels of implementation of the plan - policy formulation, co-ordination mechanisms and project implementation. * Malnutrition is one of the most significant problems of the day. Examines the nature of the problem and proposes the development of a new strategy. Identifies the nutrition goals for the 1990's as the control of protein-energy malnutrition and micronutrient deficiency disorders, and suggests a methodology for identification of appropriate action in a particular context through 'pre-packaged' technical interventions. The Conceptual framework emphasises the potential multisectoral nature of the problem, facilitates dialogue and co-operation among people of different professions, helps to identify what should be assessed and how causative relationships should be identified and analyzed. Also helps to clarify the objectives of the actions selected for implementation. Describes an approach by which households, communities and officials at the district and national levels can improve their capacity to use information for assessing, analysing and designing actions. Stresses the early development and establishment of nutrition information systems at all levels. * Small islands provide a special case in development, largely due to special characteristics of their resources, economics and in many cases their culture. Discusses the development options for small islands and lists the research areas which the scientific community could address to answer questions basic to island development. Examines development goals and identifies six specific ways in which sustainable development options might be increased: (1) resource preservation; (2) resource restoration; (3) resource enhancement; (4) sustainable resource development; (5) provision for human services; (6) non-resource-dependent development options. Stresses the need for careful planning, information management and institution building.

* The economic crisis that started in 1980 forced Latin American countries to implement drastic stabilization policies and structural adjustment programme. The consequent appreciation of the real exchange rate transformed agriculture into the most dynamic sector of the economy. This creates the possibility of defining a forward-looking rural development strategy that is consistent with this new role for agriculture and that has the potential of significantly lessening rural poverty. Starting from a social poverty map for the rural areas, the study identifies a five-pronged approach that includes: (1) farm-oriented rural development projects for the upper subfamily and family farms; (2) household-oriented rural development projects for the lower subfamily farms; (3) access to additional assets for the landless and subfamily farmers through land reform and colonization; (4) employment creation and labour market rationalization; and (5) the promotion of backward, forward, and final-demand linkages with agriculture located in the rural areas.

* Proposed investment by the public sector in 1990 seeks to advance, as far as possible, the goals and strategies outlined in Draft Public Sector Investment Programmes. During 1990, substantial investment resources will be diverted toward the implementation of a number of major productive projects in the energy and petrochemical sectors which offer the best prospects in the near term for increasing foreign exchange earnings. Emphasis also continues on the development of economic infrastructure needed to support expansion of output in agriculture, tourism and non-oil manufacturing. Overall figure estimated at $1,001.7 million of which Central Government and public Utilities will be responsible for $431.6 million and investment activity by state owned enterprises will amount to $570.1 million or 57 percent.

* The programme of public sector investment envisaged for 1991 is aimed at sustaining efforts begun in 1987 to strengthen the economy, promote economic expansion and improve essential social infrastructure. In so doing, the programme, which encompasses priority investments of central government agencies, public utilities and state enterprises, deliberately furthers the goals and objectives set out in the Draft Public Sector Investment Programme 1989-1991 as well as in the Medium Term Macro Planning Framework 1989-1995, which elaborates the perspectives and plans of the Government for the restructuring of the economy. Within this framework, the 1991 Public Sector Investment Programme (PSIP) may be characterized as representing a phase of consolidation. The Programme will concentrate on bringing to maturity several initiatives identified or mounted earlier, with emphasis on their timely and effective implementation.

* Describes the multidisciplinary team approach which was started in 1978 to address the problems of child abuse. States that the team is the basic structure underlying the entire intervention process from reporting, through investigation, to treatment. This approach prevents overlapping and duplication of effort, the waste of scarce resources and decreases inter-agency rivalry, misunderstanding and frustration. Explains the objectives and the role, function and responsibility of each team member - the state Council, the Medical team, school guidance officers, district health visitors, and the private sector. Notes that group therapy was found to be the most effective form of treatment with survivors of sexual abuse however, the choice of method of treatment was based on the specific needs of each patient. Identifies three goals to be achieved in using psychodrama. Concludes that the success of the team is only a dent on the surface of social problems in Tobago.

Economics of value added taxation with specific reference to Trinidad and Tobago.

In: Caribbean Affairs, vol. 4, no. 1. 1991. pp. 62-81 General

-----> CDC Serial

* Examines several aspects of a Value Added Tax (VAT) system, with special reference to Trinidad and Tobago. Gives a brief historical sketch of the system, before moving onto a discussion about the nature and characteristics of the system. The question of whether VAT is a 'good' tax structure and its economic effects are addressed. Problems and recommendations are also discussed. VAT was first implemented in France in 1954, it is a tax on the value of a good or service, by a supplier or a business firm. There are three types of VAT: the consumption type, the product type and the income type. Most countries here adopted the consumption type VAT, including Trinidad and Tobago. An explanation of how VAT is calculated is given. The question of whether VAT is a good tax structure is considered. In answering this question two essential ingredients are looked at, those of equity and efficiency in the system. Equity takes into consideration the fairness of the tax in proportion to income. Efficiency examines its potential as a simple system that is easy to administer and which is easily understood by the taxpayer. The economic effects of VAT in Trinidad and Tobago are examined within the context of the system it was to replace, the personal and corporate income tax as well as other indirect taxes. Concludes that a full assessment of the economic impact of VAT cannot be done in a few years. Some of the advantages and disadvantages of the system are also listed.

They included: 1) increase in revenue by introducing a number of tax reforms in both the individual and corporate income tax systems; a) reduction in number of tax brackets arrived as marginal rates; b) Introduction of a system of personal tax credits and elementary deductible allowances; c) Elimination of unemployment levy, National Recovery Import and Business levy; 2) Tighter control on and the curtailing of recurrent expenditure:- a) 10 percent salary cut for all government employees; b) Deferment of special tribunal award; c) reduction of subsidies in air travel; d) 5 percent reduction in allocation for Goods & Services in Ministries; e) reduction in allocation to Mt. Hope Medical Complex; f) Cuts in transfers to State Enterprises and Statutory Boards; g) Voluntary termination of employment; 3) Capital Expenditure - of the estimated $923 million budget 60 percent went to economic infrastructure and 40 percent on social infrastructure. The fiscal outlook for 1989 totalled $4977.5 million representing a shortfall of $135.4 million or 2.6 percent from original estimate. * Notes that fiscal policy in 1990 witnessed a continuation of the basic policy stance pursued in 1989. During the year, the second phase of the tax reform programme initiated in the previous year, was implemented. This phase of the programme included the introduction of the Value Added Tax (VAT) at a rate of 15 percent, and a concomitant elimination of a number of indirect taxes including purchase tax, some excise taxes and domestic stamp duties. Downward revisions were also made with respect to the marginal tax rates at the individual level as well as the corporate rate of tax. As a result of the simplification of the tax system and increased efficiency in the tax administration, PAYE tables, reflecting adjustments of the tax rates, were readily available to the public at the beginning of the year. This was a significant improvement over previous years when the necessary PAYE tables were not available for some considerable period of time after the fiscal year commenced.

* Notes the domestic economy performed modestly during the 1989-1990 period. GDP expected to show a positive growth for the first time in eight years. This improvement has been led by the performance of the petroleum sector because of the increases in output in the refinery sub-sector and stabilization of the level of domestic crude production. Other sectors of the economy have also recorded improved growth rates. Unemployment was reduced marginally while the rate of inflation moderated despite the introduction of Value Added Tax. The fiscal deficit was reduced further because of the rise in revenue from the petroleum sector and increases in indirect tax revenues. The recent, though temporary jump in international oil prices is expected to lead to an improvement in the balance of payments position and further increase in the level of foreign reserves.

* Reviews the Caribbean Basin Initiative (CBI) programme and its achievement in light of its objectives and expectations. Background information on the countries participating in the CBI are provided. This information pertains to the economic situation of Caribbean and Central American nations from the 1970s and 1980s. It is supported by statistical data from ECLAC sources on Micro-economic aggregates and economic indicators. The CBI is essentially a programme of legislative and administrative measures devised by the government of the USA to stimulate economic development in Central America and the Caribbean mainly through private sector initiatives. The Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act of 1983 which entered into force in 1984, provides for the duty free entry of certain articles and materials from specific Caribbean and Central American countries into the US from January 1984 for a period of 12 years, ending in December, 1995. A synopsis of the basic elements of the CBI gives an insight into the programmes objectives. Examines the eligible countries, products and the work of the US International Trade Centre in supervising the administration and other aspects of the programme, such as the Tax Information Exchange Agreement (TIEA). Signatures to the TIEA benefit for funding from the 936 and the TSUS 806 and 807. Benefits of the CBI have been negligible. The large trade surplus of the Basin countries with the US in 1983 had shrunk by 96 percent by 1987. Some individual countries fared better than average and even increased their total exports. Suggests that a major contribution of the Act is that it has helped the region to offset, if only minimally the broader decline in trade. Explains the expectations of the performance of the CBI and the limitations of the programme. New initiatives are to be put in place such as, new rules of origin on imports from CBI countries in January 1991, and the duty free allowances for US citizens returning from CBI countries will be increased from US$400 to US$600. Suggests that complementary activities be undertaken in order to promote savings, investments, research and development, training and to formulate supportive macroeconomic policies to facilitate the process to provide for the economic welfare of all citizens of the Basin countries.

The Action Plan is a response by the Governments of the region to overcome these problems. It was requested from the United Nations Environmental Programme (UNEP) by the Sixth Ministerial Meeting on the Environment in Latin America and the Caribbean (Brasilia, Brazil 30-31 March 1989). The main objectives of the plan are: to strengthen the capacity for political decision-making and action; to streamline the regional cooperation system on the environment; to promote the sustainable use of the vast natural wealth; to turn around trends that are impoverishing the resources base of the region; to establish the foundations for the initiation of sustainable development; to establish a common regional position on environmental issues; to stimulate horizontal regional cooperation on environmental matters; and to encourage the maintenance of a satisfactory level of environmental quality in all urban areas. In order to attain these general objectives the plan also seeks concrete objectives at the national, regional and global levels. Details of the strategic components of the plan are given and focuses on other programme components that address subregional, regional and global environmental problems. Explains the institutional arrangements needed to promote and monitor the success of the programme. These are the Ministerial Meetings, Inter-sessional Policy Body, National Focus Points, Secretariat of the Action Plan, Inter-Agency Consultative Support Group and Ad Hoc Scientific Advisory Groups. The financial arrangements is an essential prerequisite to attaining the objectives of the Action Plan. They are subdivided according to three levels: policy formulation; coordination mechanisms and project implementation. ----->CDC 10573

* Describes the Agricultural Development Banks (ADB's) involvement in financing production and marketing of horticultural products. Of a total

TT$16.m allocated in the 1990 loans programme, for horticulture projects, TT$8.2m was assigned to ornamentals. Funding is also available for investments aimed at alleviating the problems arising out of the alleged inadequacy of the internal marketing system; to primary producers for marketing their products; entrepreneurs to establish specialized marketing enterprises and cooperatives in production/marketing; the establishment of plant propagating enterprises or tissue culture laboratories and investment projects for the export of fresh horticultural commodities. Identifies the five major areas of the Iran appraisal process - borrower characteristics, technical feasibility, financial viability, markets and marketing and security; the applicants contribution of a minimum of 20 percent of the project cost and the repayment system.

Exchange rate and exchange rate policy in Trinidad and Tobago 1962-1981.

In: Central Bank of Trinidad and Tobago. Monetary and financial policy in Trinidad and Tobago: selected Central Bank essays. Port-of-Spain: Central Bank of Trinidad and Tobago, 1990. pp.218-253 General

----->TTP

* Analyses exchange rate policy in Trinidad and Tobago between 1962 and 1981. In the period of fixed parity with sterling, August 1962 to June 1972, the authorities tended to take the exchange rate as given and followed a largely passive exchange rate policy. A second sub-period June 1972 to May 1976 marked the era in which the Trinidad and Tobago dollar floated with sterling. Exchange rate policy in this period was characterised by indecisiveness. In the third period May 1976 to December 1981, exchange rate policy was largely passive as the government concentrated on more selective measures to protect and foster economic development. In an afterword the author describes exchange rate changes between 1981 and 1989.

* Examines the nature and function of the foreign exchange budget. with special reference to Trinidad and Tobago. Suggests that despite the accumulated foreign exchange reserves, it was possible to discern signs of disequilibrium in the economy. These signs pointed to the need to develop a foreign exchange policy for the country. The paper closes with some of the factors which need to be considered in the formulation of such a budget.

Partners in development: foreign technical assistance. Prescriptions and practice in a Public Transportation Development Programme in Trinidad and Tobago. The Hague: Institute of Social Studies, 1990. iii, 100 p. (Institute of Social Studies. Working Paper Series, no. 75). General

* Uses the public transportation development programme as a case study to explore how insights provided by the literature on conditions for success of technical assistance contribute towards making sense of the practical management issues. Provides a background to technical assistance provided to the transport sector and the contract between the Governments of Trinidad and Tobago and the Federal Republic of Germany. Reviews the literature on bilateral and multilateral technical assistance and develops a framework for analysing the programme using twelve hypotheses of failure, the corresponding conditions of success and the problem statement derived from them under three stages of the project cycle - feasibility and design stage, administration and implementation and evaluation and follow up. Concludes that in 1978 Trinidad and Tobago was the prototype held out by the literature where almost all the prescription for success were present - nothing ought to have gone wrong, yet everything did. Identifies and discusses five major reasons for the failure of the programme for which the Government of Trinidad and Tobago must take responsibility. Discusses the implications of the issues raised for future technical assistance policy and for the literature on technical assistance.

* Se define el concepto de industrializacion en un pais socialista sub desarrollado y en el caso de Cuba se hace referencia al hecho de que este proceso de industrializacion a partir del triunfo revolucionario ha transformado paulatinamente las deformaciones estructurales heredadas de una economia anterior, ha solucionado el problema del desempleo y ha formado una intelectualidad tecnica y ha contribuido al desarrollo de la clase obrera industrial; con la preparacion y formacion de una intelectualidad tecnica, de cuadros tecnicos y obreros calificados en aras de lograr empleo total y pleno de los trabajadores. Se demuestra la necesidad de incrementar el trabajo calificado, pues cuanto mayor es el nivel tecnico del obrero es mayor su productividad. Se citan los conceptos y expresiones de Che sobre esta tematica. Se ofrece informacion sobre la estructura de la fuerza de trabajo empleada segun el nivel de educacion en Cuba asi como es la distribucion de la estructura profesional de fuerza de trabajo empleada tomando el ano 1986 en la esfera productiva y no productiva. Se concluye afirmando la vigencia de las ideas del Che sobre este aspecto tan vital de la formacion de cuadros, tecnicos y obreros calificados en el proceso de industrializacion.

* Attempts to devise a simple macro-economic framework which will permit the analysis for how the money supply is determined in open petroleum economies. The framework recognizes that the money supply in such economies is determined endogenously by the actions of: (1) the central government; (2) the non-bank public and; (3) the commercial banks. It seeks to capture the essentials of the behaviour of these 3 economic agents in the system.
