

All that meant that it was necessary to maintain ever closer co-ordination and vigilance with regard to priorities, having in mind particularly the goals of the United Nations Development Decade. If those priorities were followed, delays in the preparation of work could be avoided. Finally, the Committee agreed that the secretariat should give the highest priority in the next few months to the projects connected with the coming United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, although it should not neglect its urgent work on the economic and social advancement of Latin America.
