INTRODUCTION

Background

The Caribbean Information System for Economic and Social Planning (CARISPLAN) was instituted in 1979 by ECLAC’s Caribbean Documentation Centre in response to a mandate by member governments of the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee (CDCC). It is the first sectoral network to be established within the Caribbean Information System.

The First Meeting of Caribbean Planning Officials held in Havana in January 1979 resolved to strengthen the Caribbean Documentation Centre in its efforts to establish CARISPLAN and to link the System with INFOPLAN, the Information System for Planning in Latin America, developed by ECLAC’s Latin American Centre for Economic and Social Documentation (CLADES).

The objective of CARISPLAN is to facilitate Caribbean development and co-operation activities and to provide a relevant and up-to-date information service to policy-makers, planners of socio-economic development projects and programmes, managers of such projects and programmes, researchers and teachers of development planning, financiers who provide resources and technical assistance, communicators of information about these programmes, and library and information personnel.

CARISPLAN is a co-operative effort of Caribbean countries. The information units of the national planning agencies (or units designated by them) serve as the focal points. It is the responsibility of the national focal point to identify and collect the national literature relevant to the scope of the network, prepare bibliographic and analytic summaries according to an established standard, assign indexing descriptors and organize the documents for easy retrieval. The Caribbean Documentation Centre is responsible for preparing bibliographic records of documents produced by ECLAC and documents relating to studies on the Caribbean in general. Caribbean integration agencies and sub-regional bodies such as CARICOM, CDB, OECS, research institutes specializing in Caribbean problems and international agencies operating in CDCC countries, are expected to participate in the System and to input bibliographic records relating to information which they themselves produce.

The bibliographic records of all participating centres are sent to the Caribbean Documentation Centre. The Computer output is produced by CLADES and from this CARISPLAN Abstracts is printed.

The Caribbean Documentation Centre received financial assistance from the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) to enable it to provide training and advisory services which would

INTRODUCCIÓN

Antecedentes

El Sistema de Información del Caribe para la Planificación Económica y Social (CARISPLAN) fue formado en 1979 por el Centro de Documentación del Caribe de la Comisión Económica para América Latina y el Caribe (CEPAL), respondiendo a un mandato proveniente de los gobiernos miembros del Comité de Desarrollo y Cooperación del Caribe (CDCC). CARISPLAN es la primera red sectorial que se establece en el contexto del Sistema de Información del Caribe.

La Primera Reunión de Funcionarios de Planificación del Caribe organizada en La Habana en enero de 1979, resolvió fortalecer el Centro de Documentación del Caribe en lo que respecta el establecimiento de CARISPLAN, y vincular el sistema con INFOPLAN, el Sistema de Información para la Planificación en América Latina, desarrollado por el Centro Latinoamericano de Documentación Económica y Social (CLADES) que pertenece a CEPAL.

El objetivo de CARISPLAN es el de apoyar las actividades de desarrollo y cooperación del Caribe, y de proporcionar un servicio de información relevante y actualizada a los ejecutivos de gobierno, planificadores de proyectos y programas de desarrollo económico, administradores de tales proyectos y programas, investigadores y profesores de planificación del desarrollo, financistas que proporcionan recursos y asistencia técnica, difusores de información acerca de estos programas, y personal de bibliotecas y centros de información.

CARISPLAN es un esfuerzo de cooperación de los países del Caribe. Las unidades de información de las agencias nacionales de planificación (o aquellas unidades designadas por estas últimas) constituyen los puntos focales. El punto focal nacional es responsable por la identificación y recolección de la literatura nacional relevante al alcance de la red de información, la preparación de bibliografías y resúmenes analíticos de acuerdo a estándares previamente establecidos, asignación de descritores de índices, y la organización de documentos para su búsqueda más expedita. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe es responsable por la preparación de archivos bibliográficos de documentos producidos por CEPAL, y otros documentos relacionados con estudios sobre el Caribe en general. Se espera que participen en el Sistema las agencias de integración del Caribe y algunos otros organismos subregionales, tales como: CARICOM, CDB, ECCM, los institutos de investigación especializados en problemas del Caribe y las agencias internacionales que operan en los países del CDCC. También se espera que estas instituciones contribuyan con insumos de registros bibliográficos relacionados con la información producida por ellos mismos.
ensure the active participation of national centres and to produce CARISPLAN Abstracts.

CARISPLAN Abstracts is a quarterly abstracting journal designed to disseminate bibliographic information on Caribbean planning and development literature as provided by participating centres. The journal helps the user to identify existing documentation and to appraise the value of available literature and its relevance to his/her area of interest. It further helps the user to understand the present status and trends in Caribbean socio-economic development and the implication of these trends for the future. It makes a much wider range of resources available to anyone of the information components in the System. The Caribbean Documentation Centre provides a free document delivery service to Caribbean government institutions and regional organizations.

Scope

The scope of the journal is flexible, since planning is mission-oriented and draws on all sectors of economic and social activity. Publications are included if they provide information relevant to the priority areas outlined by the CDCC for development and co-operation activities. National participating centres enter the national literature which they consider relevant to the furtherance of their country's economic and social development.

Included in the System are serial publications, books and non-conventional, less widely distributed, documents such as reports, conference papers, feasibility studies, etc., which relate to the planning activity in the Caribbean. Special emphasis is placed on the latter since these unpublished documents are not commercially available and are often of value to other users of the System.

The period of coverage is 1970 onwards with priority being given to the most current material. Earlier literature of special importance may be included.

At present, the System restricts itself to documents written in English, Spanish, French and Dutch - the four official languages of the CDCC member states. Participating centres prepare input sheets for their national literature with abstracts of the documents written in the language of their country. Participating centres in Suriname do not prepare abstracts for entries until the OECD Macrothesaurus is translated into Dutch. Original language titles are retained.

CARISPLAN Abstracts is structured to capture the documents generated by its target audience and the Caribbean documents which they are likely to use in the course of their planning and development activities. Such supporting information is primarily produced by or for the national statistical offices, central banks, ministries which feed the planners with the necessary sectoral data, departmental planning offices, universities and research institutes and some private organizations. Since the system works towards control of the literature at the institutional level, it is expected that CARISPLAN Abstracts will represent a fairly complete coverage of the type of literature which it aspires to capture.

Los registros bibliográficos de todos los centros participantes son enviados al Centro de Documentación del Caribe. CLADES produce un resultado computarizado que se usa para publicar los CARISPLAN Abstracts.

El Centro de Documentación del Caribe recibió ayuda financiera del Centro Internacional de Investigación del Desarrollo (IDRC) que le permitió proporcionar entrenamiento y servicios de asesoría que permitirían asegurar la participación activa de los centros nacionales, así como también, la publicación del CARISPLAN Abstracts.

El CARISPLAN Abstracts es una publicación de resúmenes bibliográficos cuatrimestral diseñada para diseminar información bibliográfica acerca de la planificación en el Caribe y literatura sobre el desarrollo que son proporcionadas por los centros participantes. La publicación ayuda al usuario a identificar los documentos existentes y a evaluar la literatura disponible y su relevancia con respecto a su área de interés. Aún más, ayuda al usuario a entender el estado actual y las tendencias del desarrollo socioeconómico del Caribe y las implicaciones de dichas tendencias para el futuro. Hace disponible a cualquiera un rango mucho más amplio de recursos de los componentes de información del Sistema. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe proporciona un servicio de entrega de documentos sin cargo alguno a instituciones de gobierno del Caribe y a organizaciones regionales.

Alcance

El alcance del CARISPLAN Abstracts es flexible, puesto que la planificación está orientada a tareas específicas y cubre todos los sectores de actividad económica y social. Se incluyen las publicaciones que proporcionan información relevante a las áreas prioritarias que han sido identificadas por el CDCC para las actividades de cooperación y desarrollo. Los centros nacionales que participan, incorporan la literatura que ellos consideran relevante al proceso de desarrollo económico y social de sus respectivos países.

Se incluyen en el Sistema otras publicaciones que están relacionadas con la actividad de planificación en el Caribe, tales como: publicaciones periódicas, libros y material no-convencional, material de distribución menos amplia, informes, documentos de conferencias, estudios de factibilidad, etc. Se ha puesto un énfasis especial en estos últimos, puesto que son documentos que no se publican y que no se encuentran disponibles en el mercado pero que a menudo son de utilidad para otros usuarios del Sistema.

El período de cobertura es desde 1970 hacia adelante, dándoselo prioridad al material más reciente. También puede ser incluida literatura anterior de importancia especial.

Por el momento, el Sistema está restringido a documentos escritos en inglés, español, francés y holandés, que son los cuatro idiomas oficiales de los estados miembros del CDCC. Los centros que participan preparan las hojas de insumos para su literatura nacional con resúmenes de los documentos escritos en el idioma de su respectivo país. Los centros que
Arrangement of CARISPLAN Abstracts

There are approaches to finding material in CARISPLAN Abstracts - the Abstracts, Subject Index (in English, Spanish and French), Geographic Index (in English, Spanish and French), Author Index (personal and corporate), Conference Index and the Symbol Index.

The main entries which appear in the Abstracts are prepared in accordance with rules outlined in the:

- CARISPLAN Manual of Indexing Procedures,
- CARISPLAN Abstracting Manual and
- CARISPLAN Manual for the Use of the Bibliographic Record Card.¹

The sample entry indicates the elements in the record format. The records are organized according to the DEVSIS categories² which represent the purpose for which the document was written. Many of CARISPLAN’s users will need to better understand the present status and trends in the economies and societies for which they take decisions and draw up plans. The bibliographic file is therefore arranged to facilitate the identification and extraction of basic information on current situations and their extrapolations into the future.

Again, many users will be seeking access to information on programmes and projects closely related to those on which they are working, in order to be able to benefit from the experience of others and to effect co-ordination of efforts. CARISPLAN Abstracts is therefore arranged to ensure rapid identification of material on plans, programmes and projects.

Those who wish digested background information on major trends in development theory and experience can easily locate this information and the alternative sources from which it can be obtained.

participan de Suriname no preparan resúmenes para los documentos presentados, sino que presentan descriptores temáticos en inglés para tales documentos hasta que se traduzca en holandés el Macroteauro de la OECD. Los títulos de los documentos se dejan en su idioma original.

El CARISPLAN Abstracts se estructura de manera tal que puedan capturarse los documentos que se originan en la comunidad a la cual se dirigen, así como también, los documentos del Caribe que con mayor probabilidad serán usados en el curso de las actividades de planificación y desarrollo. Dicha información de apoyo es producida, fundamentalmente, por o para oficinas nacionales de estadísticas, bancos centrales, y ministerios que proporcionan la información sectorial necesaria a los planificadores, oficinas departamentales de planificación, universidades, institutos de investigación y algunas organizaciones privadas. Puesto que el Sistema está orientado hacia el control de la literatura al nivel institucional, se espera que el CARISPLAN Abstracts representa una cobertura más o menos completa del tipo de literatura que aspira capturar.

Organización del CARISPLAN Abstracts

Existen varios enfoques para la búsqueda de material en el CARISPLAN Abstracts, estos son: los Resúmenes, el Indice Temático (en inglés, español y francés), el Indice Geográfico (en inglés, español y francés), el Indice de Autores (Personales e Instituciones), el Indice de Conferencias y el Indice de Símbolos.

Los ingresos principales que aparecen en los Resúmenes son preparados de acuerdo con las reglas que se presentan en los siguientes documentos:

- Manual de Procedimientos de Indización de CARISPLAN,
- Manual de Resúmenes de CARISPLAN, y
- Manual para el Uso de la Tarjeta de Registro Bibliográfico de CARISPLAN.¹

La muestra de ingreso indica los diferentes elementos en el formato del archivo. Los registros están organizados de acuerdo a las categorías DEVSI² que representan el propósito para el cual el documento fue escrito. La mayoría de los usuarios de CARISPLAN necesitarán de una mejor comprensión del estado actual y las tendencias de las economías y sociedades para las cuales ellos toman decisiones y formulan programas y planes. El archivo bibliográfico se organiza de manera de facilitar la identificación y extracción de información básica sobre las situaciones actuales y sus extrapolaciones en el futuro.

¹Traducción modificada del Manual Nº 2 de DOCPAL, Procedimiento para la utilización de la tarjeta de registro bibliográfico. CEPAL/CELADE, Santiago, Chile, 1980.
Del mismo modo, muchos otros usuarios buscarán información acerca de programas y proyectos que se relacionan estrechamente con aquellos en los cuales están trabajando, con el objeto de obtener beneficios provenientes de la experiencia de otros, como asimismo hacer efectiva una mayor cooperación de esfuerzos. El CARISPLAN Abstracts está organizado de manera tal que se puede obtener de forma rápida la identificación de material acerca de planes, programas y proyectos de desarrollo.

Aquellas personas que deseen información general, previamente analizada, acerca de los aspectos principales de la teoría y práctica del desarrollo pueden localizar fácilmente esta información y las fuentes alternativas donde puede encontrarse.
CARISPLAN Abstracts appears in two sections:
— the first section includes abstracts of the documents analysed (see entry formats in the inside front cover);
— the second section contains the indexes needed to carry out manual searches for the information contained in each issue.

The entries are arranged by DEVSIS categories, and within these categories, by the code of the main country dealt with in the document.

The DEVSIS categories are part of a system for classifying information on the basis of the various phases in the economic and social development planning process (see the information on the back cover).

In addition to the system of codes mentioned above, provision is also made for the code assigned to the language of the text and the name of the institution from which the documents may be obtained.

The indexes included in CARISPLAN Abstracts are as follows:

Subject index

The subject index is presented in English, Spanish and French.

Arranged in alphabetical order of the English, Spanish or French descriptors, depending of the index; followed by the geographical code or region corresponding to the document and the title of the document. It includes the abstract’s number and the year of publication in parentheses.

Geographic index

The Geographic Index is presented in English, Spanish and French.

Arranged in alphabetical order of the English, Spanish of French names of countries, depending of the index, followed by the title of the document. It includes also the abstract’s number, year of publication in parentheses and mention to other countries dealt in the publication.

CARISPLAN Abstracts consta de dos partes:
— la primera presenta los resúmenes de los documentos analizados (véase formato de los registros en la contratapa anterior);
— la segunda contiene los índices correspondientes para hacer búsquedas manuales de la información presentada en cada número.

Los registros están ordenados según las Categorías DEVSIS, y dentro de éstas, por el código del país principal tratado en el documento.

Las Categorías DEVSIS corresponden a un esquema de clasificación según las diversas etapas del proceso de planificación del desarrollo económico y social (véase esquema en la tapa posterior de la revista).

En los formatos, aparte del código antes mencionado, también se incluye codificado el idioma del texto y el nombre de la institución donde pueden solicitarse los documentos.

El desarrollo del nombre de los códigos de países, de idiomas y las abreviaturas usadas en la revista, se encuentran en la contratapa posterior.

Cada uno de los índices se estructuró de modo de facilitar y guiar al usuario en la recuperación manual de la información. Para ello, se incluyeron, tanto en el Índice Temático en el Índice Geográfico y en el Índice de Autores, los titulares de los documentos, el año de publicación y los descriptores asignados —sean éstos de materias o geográficos.

Los índices que se incluyen en CARISPLAN Abstracts son los siguientes:

Índice temático

El Índice temático se presenta en inglés, español y francés.

Se organiza en orden alfabético de descriptores en inglés, español o francés, según sea el índice; en seguida por el código geográfico correspondiente al país o región principal tratado en el documento y por último por el título del documento. Incluye el número del resumen, el año de publicación entre paréntesis y el resto de los descriptores asignados a la publicación.

Índice geográfico

El Índice geográfico se presenta en inglés, español y francés.

Se organiza en orden alfabético de países en inglés, español o francés, según sea el índice, seguido de los títulos de los documentos. Incluye también el número del resumen, año de publicación entre paréntesis y los otros países tratados en la publicación.
Author index

Arranged in alphabetical order by authors, either personal or corporate bodies, and followed by the titles of the documents in alphabetical order. It also includes the abstract’s number and the year of publication in parentheses.

Conference index

Arranges in alphabetical order the name of conferences, seminars, courses, etc., followed by the place where and data on which each event took place with the number of the corresponding abstract.

Symbol index

Alphabetical arrangement of the letters and numbers identifying the document followed by the numbers of the corresponding abstracts.

Stratified sampling methods were used 68,046 residences being considered in the first analysis followed by a re-interview of 3,016 units. Socio-economic and geographic variables were analysed and the level of education proved to be the most significant-women with a higher level of education residing in western urban zones were found to be more closely associated with the lower levels of fertility. The century begins with low levels in the 1920's increasing in the early 1960's - after the revolution, is necessary to consider the lower levels of fertility in the early 1960's - after the revolution.

- Se tiene en cuenta que para entender la evolucion de la poblacion cubana despues del triunfo de la Revolucion, es necesario disponer de informaciones estadisticas acerca de la situacion demografica existente en los anos precedentes a 1959 y, dada la carencia de datos al respecto, se considera un buen punto de apoyo los censos - realizados en el periodo de la republica mediatizada; por ello este trabajo se basa en los resultados de los censos correspondientes a 1943 y 1953. Se presentan las estimaciones para ese periodo y se calculan las tablas de mortalidad para el mismo y para los anos 1952-1954.

Presents a comprehensive report on the pig industry. Points out that the data contained is more detailed than the last surveys and encompasses the total population of pig farmers in Jamaica. Shows that there was considerably more farmers than the previous surveys in that there were fewer pigs. The survey also shows that the increased consumption of meat is due mainly to increased consumption of imported and locally produced pork. The local meat production index shows that livestock production has been increasing at a steady rate for the years 1974 and 1980. Posits that the fall in production in 1974 was due mainly to a fall in pork population while 53% of farmers in 1980 it was due to a decrease of 1.5% in the number of pigs.

Reports the findings of the first island-wide survey conducted on nutrition anaemia in pre-school children and pregnant and lactating women. Details the mechanics of the survey - selecting a sample of 3,000 children and 697 women, the measurements used. Finds that anaemia is a serious problem here. 61.6% pregnant women had haemoglobin levels below 11.8/g/dl, 58.7% lactating women had levels below 12.0 g/dl, 69.1% pre-school children had levels below 11.0 g/dl. St. James had the lowest levels, St. Elizabeth the highest. Says that no detailed dietary investigations were carried out, but St. Elizabeth's diet seemed more balanced than St. James', which could account for the difference in haemoglobin levels. Concludes that the government and CFNI are reviewing programmes initiated to improve the nutrition of these vulnerable groups.

■ This article illustrates the consequences of international migration on population growth, fertility, age and sex composition of the Surinamese population by statistical analysis of demographic data. As a consequence of the mass emigration in the last decade, the population size in 1980 is down to its 1967 level. Fertility also declined as a result of this emigration although the increasing use of birth control measures played an important role. Analysis of the numerical development of the working age population indicates that emigration has not helped much to mitigate the unemployment problem as the working age population is larger than ever before resulting from the babyboom of the mid-fifties. However, its increase has not been matched by an equal growth in employment opportunities. Of course the employment problem would have been greater if international outmigration did not decrease the size of the working age population. De gevolgen van internationale migratie op de bevolkingsgroei, vruchtbaarheid, werkloosheid en het werkgelegenheidsprobleem zou groter zijn geweest als de internationale migratie de omvang van de werkloosleanorpest niet had verminderd.

■ On the basis of a case study of the countries of Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago, this paper assesses the growth trends and possible scope of tax revenues, in the Caribbean in the future. The study shows that despite the growing significance of external borrowing by the Caribbean countries, the role of tax revenues is still of major importance in the development process and an important fiscal tool. The conclusion reached is that while no definite answer can be given to the question of what is the optimum taxation level that could be carried by Caribbean economies, the elastic nature of the total direct taxes in all of the countries, make them prime candidates for increased tax rates. These increased rates must be considered within the context of increased revenue, encouragement to non-inflationary impact, and administrative flexibility. Includes tables presenting data on tax revenues for the countries of Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago.

■ The study is divided into four chapters. Chapter 1 presents investment requirements for energy development in 1980-1980 based upon an analysis of energy reserves and the outlook for the major sources of energy, demand and supply prospects for each country in the region and their investment programs in the energy field. Investment requirements are assessed alternatively on the basis of assumptions of low and higher rates of economic growth and due consideration is given to oil price trends. Investment requirements for non-fuel minerals are presented in Chapter 2, and take into account the prospective demand for various minerals in Latin America and externally and the outlook for supply. To establish orders of investment magnitude two approaches were taken and compared: a survey was made of the principal mining projects in the region scheduled for implementation and global projections were made of investment requirements based on expected world demand for major minerals and the probable supply share of Latin America. Chapter 3 presents financing prospects for energy development, assessing the outlook for external financing as well as the sizeable financial gap that is in prospect. Chapter 4 discusses the sources and availability of financing for mining projects and emphasises the special characteristics of such projects and the need for financial magnitudes and arrangements suited to mineral development.

■ La base general de los precios en la economia socialista es el valor, cuya magnitud viene determinada por el volumen de los gastos de trabajo socialmente necesarios para la produccion de las diferentes mercancias, reguladas planificadamente. Los precios tambien cumplen varias funciones principales: la funcion de registro, la de estimulo economico, la de redistribucion del producto social y el ingreso nacional, y dentro de ciertos limites, la de agente niveladas de la oferta y la demanda. En la cumplimentacion de algunas de estas funciones es preciso que los precios se desvien del valor. ■ Reviews the development process of pre- and post-revolutionary Cuba from 1920's - 70's examining in particular aspects of economic and social policies, with the aim of understanding the specific context within which Cuba implanted a system of Socialist development guided by Marxist-Leninist theory. The 1920's - 50's are shown as fraught with social problems - inequalities, poverty and unemployment (20% out of sugar harvest). The post revolutionary period is characterized by planning, rural development and diversification of agriculture. The establishment of SDPE^system of managing and planning the economy and JUCEPLAN in 1970 contributed to development of planning during this period. The economy grew at a rate of 9.4% on a continuous basis from 1971-75. The post revolution reached practically all 6-12 year olds and 4/5 of the 3-17 age group. Health and social security services are seen as undertaken, both are universal and supported by strong infrastructures.

■ Utilizing preliminary figures for 1980 and data for earlier years, the report examines current economic trends and developments in Barbados and seeks to identify their determinants. In 1980 the growth rate of the Barbadian economy decreased to about 4% in real terms, as the volume of output did not keep pace with price increases. A 16% increase in sugar production and a 22% increase in revenue from tourism did not prevent an increase in the merchandise trade deficit which worsened by almost 28% from the 1979 level. An estimated increase of nearly 30% in the value of imports brought the import bill to some US$620 million and contributed to a negative balance on current account of some US$49 million. Capital account transactions, however secured an overall balance of payments surplus of US$19 million with an increase in international reserves of the same amount. In recognition of the increasing cost of conventionally derived energy and its adverse effects on the balance of payments, steps were taken to develop institutional capabilities in the energy sector and much activity in the areas of petroleum exploration and research on alternative energy resources were taken and wage and salary increases, were major determinants of the 19.2% increase in the total money supply by the end of 1980. The Central Bank sought to neutralize the adverse effect of wage increase on the general level of prices by encouraging savings and at the same time discouraging commercial banks from seeking temporary advances from the Central Bank.

The "urban explosion in Third World countries is increasing becoming a matter of serious concern. In examining Cuba's experience in implementing urbanization policies the author first considers mortality and fertility trends in Cuba from the beginning of the century to the present. Cuban efforts to eliminate the rural-urban contradiction and redefine the role of Havana are analysed in terms of available data on urbanization patterns since January 1959, taking into account prorervolutionary urbanization trends. The author concludes with a provisional assessment of the consequences of these trends for the equity of distribution and the efficiency of production.

- Trends in course-specific mortality are examined in the light of Cuba's social, economic, medical, and public health history to provide an insight into what factors contributed to declines in the mortality rates of developing countries before the Second World War. The Cuban experience suggests that in this country public health and sanitary reforms and nutritional improvements were largely responsible for declines in mortality throughout the first half of the twentieth century. One important finding is that the impact of these reforms and improved nutrition were greatly influenced by prevailing economic conditions. Periods of economic prosperity facilitated declines in mortality but in times of adversity, the reverse occurred. With the appearance of sulphonamides in the late 1930's, and residual insecticides and other specific measures at the end of the Second World War, the relevance of economic conditions as a determinant of mortality decline diminished. Although the analysis points to the aforementioned trends, the Cuban experience also suggests that other factors enter into the process of declining mortality that this phenomenon can only be explained as the result of the complex interplay of many forces.

- This paper examines the post-independence experience of Cuba, Jamaica and Guyana, using Kalecki's framework of the 'intermediate regime'. Jamaica most clearly fits that category and Cuba least. This categorization should allow a differentiation among countries in terms of the policies needed to stabilize such a regime. Examining first domestic and international structural transformation, it is found significant differences among the three countries, and for the most part, little evidence of a substantial change in the period since the countries became independent. In the area of basic human needs, however, the differences are more pronounced. The implication is that the choice of economic system will have substantial importance for the well-being of the different segments of society; but, at least in the three cases of small Caribbean countries presented here, this importance derives from differences in the provision of specific services and the distribution of goods rather than from differences in success in transforming production from its colonial pattern. The model thus provides a different perspective on economic policy, linking it with political pressures, and predictions from the model are partially verified in the data examined.

Reviews the concept of God held by the villagers and examines the way in which this concept affects the people’s perceptions of themselves, their environment and their social reality. The thesis of the paper is that this concept of God and his relationship to the environment and their perception of the nature of man determines their modes and levels of interaction amongst themselves and in dealing with the environment. Analyses both marine and terrestrial environments and relationships and suggests that it is the conception of God as a benevolent and generous deity and man as his antithesis that retard collective attempts at resource conservation and utilisation even where such attempts are sponsored by government, competition not cooperation being the operating ethic.

Utilizing preliminary figures for 1980 and data for earlier years, the report examines current economic trends in Grenada and seeks to identify their determinants. The statistics indicate that real GDP suffered a drastic contraction, for it is estimated to have increased by only about 10% in current terms, while prices rose almost 21% on an annual average basis. All of the main sectors registered decline. In this context, it is assumed that the current account deteriorated substantially, although complete data are not available. In any event, the current value of merchandise exports declined by more than one-fifth, and this reduction, together with the 15% rise in merchandise imports, resulted in a 50% jump in the deficit on visible trade. However, partial data suggest that the deficit was largely offset by grants and concessional loans from abroad. The rate of inflation accelerated from about 12% in the previous year to almost 21%. A rise in money wages on the other hand averaged 16% - an increase substantially below the rate of price inflation but appreciably above the nominal rate of growth of the economy. The supply of external finance in the 1980 exceeded the deficit on total government spending with the result that the internal public debt was reduced for the second consecutive year. Finally, the external public debt outstanding was equivalent to only 18% of GDP, while the servicing of the debt claimed a mere 1.7% of the value of exports in 1979.

The Women’s Revolutionary Socialist Movement was motivated to convene the Workshop after deliberations with UNICEF officials who advised on the results of the exhibition of energy-saving appliances for cooking, held in March 1979. The workshop was timely since Guyana - non-oil producing country had then been experiencing the effects of rising price in oil, and through urgency, if not necessity, had to seek alternative energy sources. Thus, the main aim was to investigate ways of finding simple appropriate technology devices which could be used to support and make more efficient, the various tasks performed by women at home or in the field, and stimulate them to initiate income - generating projects based on small-scale production.

An investigation is made into the historically

La particularité de la classe sociale dans l’époque de l’esclavage, les conflits de classes et leurs solutions successives pendant l’ère XVe-XVIIme siècle. Le mécanisme de la marche sociale qui a été formulée comme résultat de ces processus est examiné en même temps que sa compatibilité avec les intuitions sociales, les définitions de la classe sociale, la notion de social instruments of perception and action, il est argumenté que l’esclave créé pendant la période XVIIe siècle a travaillé dans une manière qui permet à l’auto-expression contre les obstacles formulés dans le creole culture par les groupes locaux dominants. Une théorie et la définition des classes sociales sont proposées et c’est aussi que l’examen des pourcentages de la population en Haïti, similaires à la croissance culturel de la totalité de Latin America. ■ The outstanding feature of this case study of rural women’s employment, health and education in Haiti is the extent to which women contribute to the rural economy through their highly efficient marketing of the country’s subsistence foodstuffs. In Haiti where women have for a long time been in charge of the trade in subsistence goods, it is they who have increasingly concentrated their productive efforts on a highly specialized system of marketing, leaving the better part of cultivation also highly specialized, and a fair share of childcare and household work in the hands of men and boys. A number of activities for rural women have been proposed within the framework of UNDP supported projects under way in Haiti. These activities give special attention to the economic roles and needs of rural women, with particular stress on the training of women and girls, the extension of credit and loan facilities to women, and their participation in grass-roots and community level organizations, such as co-operatives.

Explains his ever present preoccupation with flight as a psychological response to and a product of his socio-cultural environment. Placed in an environment which by the nature of its institutions denies him his humanity, he creates a new social space which Africa and the spirits of his ancestors form the reference point. Analyses the development of Haitian creole as a product of the search for 'being', the whole social context of language provides a link with the cosmic aids in the development of subjective consciousness. ■ Reviews the decline of the economy 1973-1980, its recovery in 1981, the prospects for 1982; discusses the major structural features affecting economic performance and analyses export development and private investment issues. Per capita GDP declined by over 25% vis-à-vis economic performance of the previous decade. The increase in oil prices and consequent effects internationally, the expansion of public sector interests and government's policies contributed to this decline. The present government's strategy is to have the private sector develop export oriented, job-creating industries. With public capital assistance this brought a 2% economic growth in 1981. Better is expected in 1982. Government plans to promote domestic savings, rationalize public investments, encourage private investments, improve the balance of payments position, reform agricultural industrial policies for better allocation of resources - thus to restructure the economy. Energy conservation, development of the tourism and bauxite/alumina industries and tax reform are expected.

Discusses the feasibility of alternate energy sources found in Jamaica and this forms the bulk of this paper. The furniture industry is seen as having the greatest potential for export development but there are a number of problems which need to be solved before any significant export growth and efficiencies can be achieved. These are: the problems of generating working capital and obtaining long-term financing; inadequate raw material supplies; insufficient facilities; absenteeism and low labour productivity; low levels of managerial, supervisory and technical skills; absence of export trading companies; lack of co-operation within the industry and absence of standards.

■ Comments on Jamaica's economic development since November 1980. Glances at conditions of the 1960's. Economic growth was 9% per year, real per capita income 6.3%: social services and the economic infrastructure were extended. Notes the contrast of the 1970's with government expenditure declining from a surplus to a deficit of 15% in 1978; rising unemployment; the failure of external attempts to shore-up the economy; inflation; devaluation; massive shortages. Discusses sugar, banana, bauxite, tourism, the mainstay of the economy; their decline since the 70's and current plans to resuscitate them. Observes tourism's outstanding improvement since 1981 and government's counter-trading in bauxite. Other efforts to revive the economy are the emphasis on export-oriented industries; the development of indigenous craft and foods for export; attracting overseas investors with favourable incentive; the collaboration of Jamaican and American business interests and the contribution of JNIP and JNEC in these areas. Israeli, and Japanese activities in vegetable and coffee farming are discussed. Describes the HEART Trust, a tool to expedite training and employment of youths. Mention the search for oil and experiments with alternative sources of energy; sea and transport problems; the immediate effects of the world-wide recession and the impact of the parallel market. ■ Examines government's plans for economic recovery to see if the country qualifies for further external assistance. Discusses the performance of each sector 1970-1981, giving reasons for the decline in all areas. Stated reasons include recession and the bauxite levy; devaluation and the removal of subsidies; foreign exchange shortage and inefficient allocation; poor export performance, flight of private capital; lack of exploited domestic energy sources. Finds some improvement by the end of the period but more than 50% of GDP and unemployment showed a slight decrease, but the current account deficit almost doubled because exports fell below projections. Says recovery will depend on (a) restoring the socio-economic infrastructure to promote economic growth; (b) reducing unemployment through increased industrial and agricultural activity; (c) concentrating on exports to earn foreign exchange. Expected a growth rate of 4% to 5% in three years. Foreign exchange needs will be met by IMF support of SDR 536 million. Development strategies include efforts concentrating on exports to earn foreign exchange. Seeks to provide information to assist in solving the many-faceted problems of women in development. Elicits from statistical data between 1970 and 1978 that although there are more women than men in the population, there are far more males in the labour force; a higher percentage of the male labour force than of the female is employed; generally women tend to be employed below their potential. Uses the criteria of family, education and religion to show how the social system impacts on women. Discusses briefly: legislation of the Women's Bureau - established to improve the status of women. Decides that Jamaican women are of theoretical equality, women are treated as second class citizens and must find ways to change this situation.

■ Analyses the causes of Jamaica's economic instability, the role of the IMF and the government's attempts to manage the country's affairs since 1972. Discusses the performance of the economy and structural changes affecting the demand for non-oil imports, the supply of exports and net inflow of foreign exchange. Rising import prices, magnified by domestic wage increases beyond the rate of inflation, consumer prices caused inflation, and Government's indecisiveness towards stabilization, its social welfare programmes which led to domestic and foreign borrowing, and monetary polices of increased taxes, price controls and a fixed exchange rate, which narrowed profit margins and reduced production and investment incentives, further deflated the economy. The impact of the increasing price of oil, the bauxite production levy which financed government's social and economic programmes and the introduction of Democratic Socialism are seen as crucial to the developments after 1976. Details the different IMF arrangements 1977-80 and explains their effects on the economy. The terms of the 1977 arrangement are seen as unrealistic, given the magnitude of Jamaica's debts; the funds also were insufficient to operate export-oriented production or foreign loans. Suggests that the 1979 agreement was advantageous but government's recklessness precluded any benefits to the economy. Offers a comparison between the previous arrangements and those of 1981, and concludes that IMF stabilization programmes show a pro-market bias and emphasise the efficiency of market forces rather than regulations and controls. Such measures were made ineffective because of government's ambivalence towards stabilization.

Discusses briefly: legislation of the 1970's which sought to improve women's condition; political and administrative appointments of women; women's organizations; some programmes to improve women's competence. Looks at areas of employment, home economics syllabuses in educational institutions and government ministries; the achievements of the Women's Bureau - established to improve the status of women. Decides that Jamaican women are leaders in their community and should no longer be kept on the periphery of socio-political-economic development. Rural women are strongly motivated by the desire to achieve social mobility for their children. Despite theoretical equality, women are treated as second class citizens and must find ways to change this situation. Lists several causes of suffering: inflation, taxes; they could participate more meaningfully in national development. Concludes that appropriate data are urgently needed to facilitate a precise assessment of the status of women.

Proposes to identify the main factors in the question of the role and staffing of the Parish Councils and the Municipal Services Commission. Pinpoints in discussion on the principles of employers’ rights that it is the right of all employers to have the authority to appoint, promote and discipline employees in the Local Authorities. Identifies three major reasons to support this contention. Examines the powers that Services Commissions must have and the relationships that are to exist between them and the employing authority in order to ensure against arbitrariness. Posits that what is needed is the establishment of a system which will allow the Local Authority to exercise authority for the making of appointments, promotions, whilst at the same time assigning the Commissions a role in the monitoring of this function so as to ensure that the power given to the Local Authorities is not misused in any way. Looks at the Services Commission in the light of the problem that its decisions especially those of the Parish Councils Services Commission remain generally unpopular and are restricted by the Local Authorities. (b) inadequate long term investments. Illustrates (a) by examining the tax structure which finances the current budget. Mentions the danger of depending on non-tax revenue like the bauxite levy which is subject to external market conditions. Discusses (b) which affects the nominal budget. Capital expenditure increased from $242.2m to $942.8 million in 21 years but debt servicing eroded its benefits. Much positive development came 1974-78 when the government projected public sector participation in the economy. Seas lack of long term planning a further handicap. Refers to the Public Investment Programme (PIP) and forward planning which is hamstrung by IMF regulations and other constraints. Finds that government has been unable to prioritize their budgetary allocations outside of debt services because revenues have not been assured. Hence they have faced contracting revenues coupled with increasing demand for social services which ultimately led to balancing the budget with loans. Concludes that much sound physical and social infrastructure has been provided but others remain poor. Suggests improvements to be effected with public sector participation - better exports using indigenous raw materials, adequate resources.

- The increasing incorporation of Nickerian small-holder rice farming into the capitalist world market relationships dominated by modern monopolist capital, and small-holder rice agriculture's relegation to a marginal role are noted. Through the mechanism of unequal exchange and the dichotomy between production and consumption spheres, industrial development is being thwarted thus strengthening the structural-dependency characteristics of the Surinamese market economy. Although the "small-farming business strategy" suggested by Surinamese agriculturists does have the effect of reducing the dependence of small farmers on capitalist models of production this offers no prospects for arresting the marginalisation process. In the recent historico process of to enfeeble the incorporatie of the Nickeriaanse padi-kleinlandbouw in the kapitalistische wereldmarktvrevinghouden onder dominanie van het moderne monopoliementkapitaal, wordt de padi-kleinlandbouw gereglementeerd tot marginaal pool. Door mechanisatie van de ongelijke ruil, de scheidings in produktie en consumptiefigurer wordt een industriële ontwikkeling geblokkeerd en wordt het structureel-afhankelijke karakter van de Surinaamse export-economie geregereerd en versterkt. De landbezitverhouding daarmee vergoorderde "kleinbedrijvenstrategie" heeft de voedel dat de kleinlandbouwers politiek minder afhankelijk worden van de grootalandbouw en de daarmee samenhangende opkoopen handelsmonopolies. Deze strategie zal er evenwel niet toe leiden dat de exportafhankelijkheid wordt doorbroken. Bovendien blijft de kleinlandbouw onderworpen aan de kapitalistische produktievoorwaarden, waaronder uiteindelijk toch geen uitweg uit de marginaliseringsproblematiek wordt geboden.

- In the last century the Roman Catholic church developed its own social doctrine, against the upcoming streams of rationalism, socialism, Marxism, Darwinism etc. The church underlined her divine veracity and her meaning was to have submission to the clerical social doctrine. Atheism was being fought, private-ownership was being defended, the destruction of families by Marxism was brought up, class-struggle was seen as the cause of anarchism. Changes in the church brought other conceptions about herself, her social function and way of organisation. The second Vatican Council and the improving theology of liberation of Latin America brought a breakthrough: the church was learning now, together with other groups, how to analyse problems like revolution, the church-government relations, and the position of other religions. De katholieke kerk heeft in de tweede helft van de vorige eeuw eigen sociale leer ontwikkeld tegen de nieuwe sterk opkomende geestelijke en filosofische stromingen. De kerk poneerde zich als de bezitter van de waarheid en wilde iedereen aan haar leer onderwerpen. Onder invloed van het tweede vatikaans koncilie, de bevrijdingstheologie en de theologische ontwikkelingen in ons eigen gebied, groeiden nieuwe modellen en structuren. De kerk ging de sociale leernatiek samen met andere groeperingen te bezien. Problemen als de verhouding kerk en staat of de verhouding orthodoxie, werden door de kerk aangepakt. Ook de kerk in Suriname staat in dit alomwaaier veranderingsproces.

Distribution of income in Trinidad and Tobago

1956-76. Review of Income and Wealth, 1981. pp.155-

206: tbls. 1981 General

Request from: CDC 1937

This article describes what happens to income distribution during intensive changes in gross domestic product due to external market conditions. It deals specifically with a open market petroleum-based economy, Trinidad and Tobago, and reviews changes in national product and income levels and the income distribution pattern over the twenty-year period 1957-76. The paper argues that during the period characterized by subperiods of steady growth and rapid growth in GDP (the latter associated with the petroleum price rise), income inequality increased between 1957 and 1972 and then decreased in the post petroleum-price-rise period of rapid growth 1973-1976. While the effect of intensive changes in national product did trickle down to the lower income groups, income inequality in 1975-76 was greater than that existing in 1957-58. An examination of the spatial, occupational and temporal aspect of the distribution pattern points towards the elimination of structural dualism in the economy as the surest path to greater income equality in Trinidad and Tobago. The article includes tables presenting data on movement of household incomes, incomes shares by deciles, total monthly real income for all households by deciles, per capita real income, and average income and income shares by occupational groupings and an index of commercial bank credit.

Documents the 17 year struggle (1963-1980) of a working class Trinidad woman against the company with which she was employed and against the trade Union which supported the company. Describes the author's experience of oppression as a wage worker and progressive trade unionist and expresses an understanding of the women's question in class terms distinguishing the struggle of women not only from a personal and the struggle of women as wage workers. Argues that only a strong militant and united working class organisation can effectively represent women in Trinidad and Tobago. Attacks the established Trade Union Movement for its undemocratic policies, penchant for compromise, neglect of working class education and Focuses on the problems of public finance relevant to the economies of the Caribbean, emphasizing the impact of size on revenues and expenditures. Discusses six facets of the problems. Deals first with an overview of the literature on the role of the public sector in promoting economic development in the region and sets out methods of evaluating fiscal performance. Other topics are (a) growth of the public sector, (b) fiscal incentives and harmonization, (c) taxes, (d) public policy and planning, (e) local finance and administration. Contributors use their experience in different countries, e.g. Guyana, Suriname, Colombia, Puerto Rico, Jamaica, to illustrate their topics.

Current population policies are then examined:- immigration, emigration, internal migration, and family planning, with respect to the adoption and implementation of population policies, human resources and education are discussed and finally the extent to which the population in the Caribbean is aware of the political processes by which population policy is formulated, or of the development and implementation of such policies.

elastic revenue source in the indirect tax structure and their buoyancy coefficients were nearly as great as that of income taxation. Revenue gains can be increased if the tax is extended closer to the retail level. A tax at the wholesale-retail level can also reduce intra-union trade distortions that prevail under a manufacturers sales tax. Generally the allocative impact of indirect taxes has been ignored; consequently serious allocative distortions can arise from the lack of coordination between taxes on domestic production and tariffs and the differentiated rate structure which exists. While structured to encourage higher investment levels, the suspension method used to exclude producer goods is administratively inefficient and does not guarantee common protection of imports in the region. In terms of equity, the incidence of indirect taxes was not progressive as is presumed but was essentially proportional. Reform in terms of implementation, a value-added tax, with small vendors excluded, through the wholesale-retail level can redress the major defects of the present system of commodity taxes.

- This article surveys recent political events in the Caribbean Basin - among these, the left-wing struggle against oligarchic rule in Central America, the left wing coup in Grenada, political tensions in Puerto Rico and Soviet troops in Cuba - and analyses the ongoing radicalization of the region and its implications for US Caribbean policy. As the author argues "in view of American government's increased relations with the Soviet Union, it would be deceptively easy to attribute the Caribbean problems to international communism. But the issues are more complex than that". The analysis concludes that whichever way the Carter administration moves - in support of a global, strategic-military approach or a regional, developmental approach - hostility and suspicion toward the emerging left-of-centre governments in the Caribbean run the risk of alienating the political forces with the most popular support, and the best chance of remodelling Caribbean society and politics.

- Outlines the case for regional cooperation in technology development and management. Considers some cooperative activities already in existence in the CARICOM region, eg. the Regional Food Plan, and the Regional Industrial Programme, which create simultaneously a demand for technology which is feasible. Illustrates by considering the livestock subsector in which all of the processes concerned are supported by a range of technological activities. Indicates a range of minimum prerequisites involved in this process and describes briefly, some of the activities of the major regional sectoral institutions in the field of technology. Finally, indicates some new possibilities for increased regional cooperation in technology development and management.

- Discusses the national food and nutrition surveys in Barbados and Guyana, Trinidad and Tobago. Relates demographic, socio-economic and multinational data to requirements, income and household size and nutrient usages for the two main racial groups. The methodology adopted in the individual countries comprise a systematic random sampling aimed at about 20% of the total household. Guyana was the exception, its sample consisted of random selection and a reasoned choice in the Interior Settlements. Explains the technique employed and the processing of the data. Points out that separate dietary standards for the three countries showing the nutritional requirements according to different ages and weights of the males and females were prepared according to the procedure laid down in FAO/WHO joint publications. This allowed a comparison of the requirements and intakes of energy nutrients. Findings indicate that Trinidad is the best fed country with balanced food consumption patterns and nutrient usages. Energy deficiency was the main nutrition problem in Barbados, although the country had adequate supplies of protein and vitamin A through imported commodities like meat and milk products. Guyana had deficiency of energy and protein although it was the most important regional rice exporting country as compared to 11%-32% households of Trinidad, 38%-86% and 28%-63% respectively of Barbados and Guyana could not meet the requirements of one or more of six other essential nutrients. Points out that high incomes were associated with improvements in food consumption and influence usages, the reverse was true for larger households. Mentions that of the two main ethnic groups, the African children had better growth in height and weight than the East Indian children.

The sample: a mixed group of professionals, low level, skilled and unskilled workers - was taken from emigrants from Barbados, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago living in Brooklyn, New York. Discusses background and demographic characteristics of sample, such as: population, social structure, political economy. Finds that their education level of fore migration was low and their chief goal was economic and social mobility through education. Friends and relatives assisted in the adjustment process. Links are maintained with homeland; the effects of formal organizations have been negligible; there is little participation in churches and formal organizations. - Traces the socio-cultural development of the Caribbean noting the lack of cultural identity and emphasising the need for appreciation of the environment in order to generate some sense of belonging to mediate the development process. Analyses the effects of the environment in determining the culture of a particular region. Suggests that man's quest for permanence in the face of his mortality leads him to seek to identify with the past and impose his will on the future. In the Caribbean, it is this quest in its mutual confrontation with a fragmented geographic makeup together with a history of forced migration and labour that generate the West Indian personality. The landscape of the respective islands by shaping the conditions of life influence the model personality: different topographies producing different types. The physical location of the islands, at the crossroads of the Americas, may have them highly susceptible to foreign influences and this also affects their cultural forms. Concludes that before the goals of development can be achieved, the environment and its impact on the nature of people and society must be understood and appreciated.

- Judges tourism to have the greatest potential for foreign exchange earning in the Caribbean. Sees a positive correlation between the importance given to tourism and the state of a country's economy. Cites examples of this in the Caribbean. Looks at other benefits of tourism: linkages with agriculture and the furniture industry as well as producing quality goods. Contemplates the many industrial options available to the Caribbean and the deterrents to success in them: agriculture, garment manufacture, heavy industry. Says that the region will always have a high import bill, especially for food. Shows that despite negative forces tourism earned for the region US$17,000m in 1978 and is the largest employer of labour. Forecasts continued rise in tourism in spite of projected recession. Sees new areas of investment, e.g. attractions, transport. Gives reasons for optimism in the trade - a good product, competitive, non-traditional technology.

Low food productivity, unavailability of adequate quality and insufficient quantity of food and socio-cultural factors are also discussed. Eleven figures indicate relationships such as, that factors other than monetary wealth strongly influence the nutritional status of infants and young children. A decline in infant mortality is noted and it is hoped that during the eighties protein-energy malnutrition among children would be eliminated. Diet related diseases are discussed, especially for food. Shows that despite negative forces tourism earned for the region US$17,000m in 1978 and is the largest employer of labour. - Avers that Latin American culture exists, despite the composite nature of its elements. Fusion has been going on since discovery, strongly influenced by the native component. The term 'Latin American' is most meaningful in culture, hence the need for effective cultural policies. Latin America has benefited from cooperation with independent Caribbean nations, with Spain and Portugal since 1974 and with the immigrant minority in the United States. It had some socio-economic progress 1960-1970 with few problems, but the influence of western culture is noted. The threat of cultural alienation through the communications media and other technology worries some Latin American nations. Sees difficulty in maintaining their identity but the influence of Latin American heritage will help the nations to collaborate in this. The social problems of western industrialized countries increase dissatisfaction with the modernising currently taking place in their own countries. This discontent could be the catalyst to develop policies to revive their culture, especially for the benefit of the young to whom the past is mere history.

- Examines the findings of the 1981 nutrition survey vis-a-vis that of 1969, which sought to promote breast feeding in Barbados. A random stratified sample of 2,490 was used, 126 having children less than 1 year old. Finds among living factors, that 91% in 1969, 17% in 1981 were breast feeding. Believes the promotion of breast milk substitute by advertisements and "milk nurses" negated the effects of the education programme of 1969. Observes that professionals regard these substitutes as very dangerous. Feels that social pressures of work, attitude to breast feeding, etc. which have increased since 1969 now make mothers less available to their babies. Says the International Code of Marketing of Breast-Milk Substitutes calls for government and society to support mothers in breast feeding. Finds government support in Barbados insufficient to change the present situation. Suggests more paid postnatal maternity leave, home help, day care centres near the work place with paid breast feeding breaks, as well as change in the attitude of mothers to make them accept breast feeding away from home.

- Defines collectivization as a definite part of the process of social change on the one hand and as a vehicle used by government to establish the social relations of production on the other. Traces the gradual steps taken before the agricultural cooperative becomes a reality, 1959-78 being the period under review. The first stage is that of legislation and establishment of the state organ Instituto Nacional de Reforma Agraria (INRA) to ensure agricultural development in the interest of the entire population and the second stage is characterized by the introduction of technology-mechanization, agrochemistry and irrigation techniques as the major processes highlighted - and this is accompanied by problems of lack of operating skills. The significance of this period lies in the weakening of the relation between the state and the private sector and the central planning ability of the state. During 1975-78, the third phase identified, the importance of cooperative agriculture is recognized and INRA outlines two strategies: the first allows the producer his individuality but controls his productivity by the presence of an administrative group with a production plan supported by technology, to which he refers; the second involves state enterprises serving as nuclei to rural producers and which define objectives and technology to be used. The state has the responsibility for production in both cases. The lack of a qualified labour force, the shortage of middle management, low productivity are identified as problems currently faced by the rural sector. The author proposes that high level political organization is necessary for the development of the collectivization process through which problems of participation at community level are solved.

- Proposes specific areas of assistance which could be provided to the Government of Grenada by the United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporation (UNCTC) within the overall context of UNDP-funded project GRN/80/002 "Formulation and Implementation of National Energy Policy". The current state of affairs as regards petroleum exploration is such that: existing and available geological/geographical knowledge is extremely limited; the seabed boundary of Grenadian waters has not been agreed or defined; the legal framework for petroleum exploration and production has not been effected; and the government's own organization for dealing with petroleum issues is quite limited. UNCTC recommends that the Government: declare an Exclusive Economic Zone and prepare appropriate maps; formalize the authority of the inter-ministerial committee on energy and establish a timetable for future action; consider the draft Petroleum Act; after receipt of comments from UNCTC, identify areas for exploration and foreign partners and formulate a basic negotiating position. UNCTC will assist in obtaining data on the 1971 seismic survey, provide comments on the Draft Petroleum Act, organize a workshop for government officials concerned with petroleum matters, draft the regulations under the Petroleum Act and provide support for the government negotiating team.

Discusses the collective response of the people to the environment, the pond again being the focal point of the matrix. Reviews recent modifications in lifestyle, production processes, land tenure systems, social attitudes and government activity which have impacted upon the traditional system of responses of water resource management. The sample consisted of 257 anemic and nearly anemic subjects (individuals with haemoglobin levels just above the WHO standards for anemia) of all age groups and of both sexes, drawn from households in both urban and rural areas. Anthropometric and hematological (measurements, and social investigations for intestinal parasites were conducted on the subjects. Socio-economic data, data on the frequency of consumption of foods rich in the erythropoietic nutrients, as well as information on iron and vitamin A vitamin A supplementation was also obtained. A limited amount of obstetrical information was obtained from women of childbirth age. Iron and folic acid deficiencies were found to be the major nutrient deficiencies contributing to nutritional anemia in Guyana. Intestinal parasitic infestation was not found to play a major role in the etiology of this anemia. An applied intervention program was recommended involving a combination of nutrition education, distribution of iron and folic supplements to pregnant and lactating women, and fortification of a suitable, vehicle with iron and folic acid.

- Examines the limitations of variations in terminology and the concept of current formal education in meeting the requirements of the acceptance of the need to provide continuing - "life-long" education. A review of the trend of continuing education in the developing world is made so as to identify problems of training needs and reasons for high job turnover. The recommendations include the need for professional retraining and the necessity for raising the level of scientific literacy of the masses during the process of technology transfer and industrialisation.

- Field report of a report series prepared during the course of UNDP/FAO project. The study presents an overview of activities in forestry and forest industries. Discusses shortcomings in fields of science and technology, management and control and financing. Reviews planning priorities formulated by Guyana Forestry Commission which emphasises forest management and utilisation, forest product marketing and forest industry development in its 1981-1985 Forestry Development Programme. Financial assistance is given by Guyana Co-operative Agricultural and Industrial Development Bank. Suggests increase of log exports with expected benefits such as foreign exchange earnings, better returns to forest industry sector, increase in species exported, broadening of product and market base and increasing customer awareness of Guyana woods.

- Provides a brief geographical description of Guyana, defining the boundaries and a historical explanation of the density and distribution of the population between 1834-1970, the latter being supplemented by tables. It discusses the agricultural base, on which the economy was dependent, and hints on the paradox of the high imports of foodstuff. Brief focus is on the state of the high cost of living, and proposed remedial strategies as self-reliance and self-sufficiency, the political objective of socialist development nd transformation, all aiming at development, of the country's human resources. Other proposals include expansion of development of the economic base, indigenous control of natural resources, methods of reducing unemployment rate, increasing food production, improving the standard of living.

Shows how the development of tourism facilities may contribute to the overall governmental strategy to accelerate economic development, generate employment, strengthen the balance of payments and also to induce Guyanese to spend their vacations in Guyana. Identifies tourism resources, develops and evaluates potential tourism areas in Guyana. Gives information on a market survey, dealing with both international and domestic tourism to assess demand. Formulates guidelines for tourism development based on government policy and drafts programmes of requirement for the various categories of tourism and recreation together with the country's planning model. Selects priority areas in which projects are identified for short term development, giving details including cost estimates and required measures.

■ Report on mission to Guyana from September 1981 to March 1982 to assist the Government in the development of a vocational rehabilitation service for the disabled. To assess the extent of the disability problem, a survey was carried out in cooperation with PAHO, and existing services for the handicapped in the areas of schooling, training and placement were reviewed. An overview is given of activities of the Ministries of Health, Education and Public Welfare, the National Insurance Scheme, the Red Cross Society and the Society for the Blind, which all cooperate in a National Committee to promote opportunities for the handicapped. A list of future projects, identifying training programmes in carpentry, agriculture and printing as priorities is complemented by recommendations to implement the selective placement service, to establish a rehabilitation centre for assessment and reconditioning of handicapped unemployed persons, to improve the employment exchange services and to initiate an early identification system for disabled students. The annex includes information on curricula and additional data on training programmes.

■ The objectives of the report are to identify and analyse issues that appear to have prevented the development of the private sector, and limited the contribution to the country's economy; make proposals for increasing overall economic efficiency and lay the basis for a revision of the 1979 investment code so that the country's economic objectives could be realised. The issues considered were decline of the terms of trade during the second half of the 1970s; limited infrastructure, decrease in production capacity in some industries, foreign exchange constraints, under exploitation of physical and human resources, brain drain. It recommends changes in the Government's policy and procedures that would result in an increase in overall economic efficiency, allow for better mobilization of the private sector's resources and increase its contribution to the fulfilment of Government's economic objectives mentioned.

- 62 women, more than half of whom are between 45-64, and who are full time and part time farmers are randomly selected from the three counties Berbice, Demerara and Essequibo. The questionnaire approach is the major tool used to obtain information. The project areas are Black Bush Polder, Linden/Soesdyke Highway, Tapacuma Irrigation and Panka-Salem, which are chosen because they are the major agricultural projects, also because they straddle Guyana’s three counties and the population represents a socio-economic and cultural cross-section of the other three groups of the country. Farming is the major income activity for all the women interviewed, of whom 60% claim household headship. A profile featuring age, religion, education, family size of the women is given. Also an outline is given of some amenities in the area pertaining to health, transport, recreation, day nurseries etc. Areas under study are: economic role, perception of management capability, time use, work activities and problems, returns from farming, tools and equipment, training, access to credit, income ownership, and conjugal and maternal roles. Some findings are that women perform a multiplicity of roles in the course of living which decrease their efficiency as farmers, that agricultural training is absent, that land ownership is controlled by the male partner. Problems identified are: exploitation, lack of practical farmer's advice, procurement of supplies. Recommendations include that the University of Guyana should undertake a survey together with the Ministry of Agriculture to determine why farmers are moving away from the land, that negative attitudes to farming be offset by programmes aimed at improving the image of the farmer, that local technologists design devices to make some agricultural tasks easier, that communication strategies be planned to accomodate farmers and that women's groups assist with family related problems.

Points out that the submissions are to form the basis of recommendations from the Local Government Reform Implementations Committee to the Ministry of Local Government. The conclusions are: (1) that the Community and Divisional Councils be accepted as providing the links in the structure between the Local Government machinery and the community; (2) the District Committee be replaced by the Divisional Government structure; (3) Community Council be similar to the Divisional Council - it will be allowed freedom of operation within certain constraints laid down by the Minister. Further conclusions are that there be a stronger link between the Divisional Council and the Parish Council; and the Parish Council/K SAC, Parish Council/K SAC will ensure the establishment of Community Council; stricter and more encompassing penalties be provided for in regulations made under the Community Councils Law; provisions be made under the Community Council Law for a co-option from organizations in the community to allow for their widest participation in the work of Community and Divisional Councils. - Uses data from three studies to describe family planning practices among 15-49 year old women. Mentions declining fertility in Jamaica and feels contraception could be a contributor to this. The world fertility index, discovers that 224,000 women in 1980 were exposed to the risk of conception with sub-groups qualifying as high risk women, teenagers having highest risk. Among these teenagers a large percentage was in a union and exposed to childbearing. The pill was the most popular contraceptive, but women, especially teenagers often changed methods and eventually discontinued contraception. Tabulates problems with methods, bleeding from depoprovera being very common with teenagers. Finds general acceptance of contraception with some resistance possibly part of a belief that they could be harmful; an attitude which could affect the success of the programme. Males and females were strongly against sterilization. The former were aware of contraceptives; some used them. Some men as very influential as decision-makers even when on the periphery of the family. Therefore they should be brought actively into the programme. Recommends bearing family planning at teenagers, especially during first pregnancy. Concludes that programmes should be sex-role oriented, should upgrade women's self-image. Women should be free to choose contraception and the government plans should support women in this.

■ Looks at the effect of manpower on the realization of economic recovery and economic development. Defines manpower planning as being concerned with the development, conservation and utilization of human resources as well as balancing present and future supply and demand for manpower in the light of changing requirements. Sees the long term implication of manpower planning as affecting the educational system and the achievement of desirable social and cultural goals; and the short term implications as concerning the development of specific skills and their impact upon the economy. Gives briefly the development goals and objectives of the Government's economic recovery programme, showing their inter-relationships and related implications. Emphasizes making economic development impossible if a coherent and comprehensive manpower plan is not a clearly identifiable part of the overall development plan. Posits as the reasons for a skill gap: an inadequate educational system, youth explosion, a sharp increase in the labour force without skills and training and the brain drain of the 1970's. Recommends that a manpower retention strategy must be included in a manpower programme if the brain drain is to be stemmed. Directs that mechanism be put in place to balance long-term educational output to national social and economic needs; ensure optimum investment in human resources through cost benefit analyses: increase the number and variety of skills produced, assist and encourage industry to undertake large scale and systematic worker training, introduce on-going programmes of training, re-training and upgrading.

■ Reviews the wood processing industry in Jamaica and recommends new practices for the Forest Industries Development Company Ltd. (FIDCO), to upgrade its operations profitably. Says Jamaica can produce more softwood and hardwood lumber and reduce imports, if it upgrades its wood processing methods by further manufacturing. The change depends on pricing. Sets out a lumber pricing index which will move according to competition elsewhere and bring FIDCO into the market of higher value products. Suggests standard grading and quality marketing prices. Recommends installation of new machinery gives kiln planer mill a expanded wood treatment facilities, which will enable all-round upgrading of operations and greatly increased production. Sees 100% IRR by 1984. A factory retail outlet can bring additional revenue. An experienced manager/advisor for at least six months must be employed especially for the introduction of the new machinery. FIDCO's success with these new operations would motivate others to enter the wood processing industry to their advantage. ■ Evaluates proposals for dairy and beef development, recommends improvements and identifies projects for external funding. Finds that unsatisfactory pricing, bad marketing practices and facilities reduce the effectiveness of dairy and beef producers. Recommends from importing of more than 80% milk and 50% beef to meet local demand. Some problems of the dairy industry are low milk yield and herd expansion, high calf mortality, high costs. Beef production is satisfactory but slaughtering methods are below standard for quality beef. Believes targets of 50% and 90% of local demand for milk and beef by 1990 are unrealistic; they should be 25% and 50% respectively, given better techniques and more producers in the dairy industry. Main recommendations include new price policies, research to develop legume-grass pastures to eliminate imported feed; upgraded slaughtering facilities, provision for use of slaughtering by-products in animal feeds and for fertilizer, finding other crop by-products for animal feeds. Lists and describes in appendix five projects for external assistance estimated to cost US$13,030,000.00. These are: a milk project, a marketing centre, development of cattle feeding systems based on legume-grass pastures, control of cattle ticks and tick-borne diseases, upgrading Lydford abattoir, construction of regional slaughterhouse.

Recommends in support of the proposals that the Community Councils be accepted as providing the link in the structure between the Local Government machinery and the community, that the Divisional Council replace the District Committee and thus become a part of the Local Government System. Gives the requisite effective measures. Recommends further, that (1)the Community Councils be allowed freedom of operation; (2)that direct links with the KSAC representation on the Divisional Council be much stronger than is proposed, (3)that Parish Councils/KSAC settle disputes that may arise between Divisional Councils as a body established within each Parish Council/KSAC division to provide a forum for discussion; a channel for representation to the Parish Council/KSAC and all Agencies of the Government and be a means of formal contact with the citizens of the Division through the Community Councils. Enumerates three policies to cope with the strain that will be placed on human resources by the changing environment. The first policy is the recruitment, selection and placement which will entails the firm being equipped with adequate projections of manpower needs and a comprehensive inventory of skills of persons presently employed; the use of such selection tools as aptitude testing and psychological assessment supplemented by thorough, competent, interviewing skills used aggressively. The other policies are training and development and gearing the personnel department towards building a strong labour force. Perceives the manager of the job to be multi-disciplined playing a multi-faceted role who also must understand the rudiments of finance, production, marketing and human development.

Investigates the operations of the two mills and recommends strategies for a viable textile industry. Finds conditions unfavourable for cotton polyester. Among other things lack of textile expertise, lack of capacity to handle energy, fuel and labour and shortage of foreign exchange for raw materials and spare parts. Machinery and equipment are old and obsolete, personnel and labour under-utilized, accounting practices poor. Recommends sale of the Stork machine inside Jamaica so it can still be available to the country. It will either cost approximately $38 million for investment, working capital plus losses during running-in period or it can be possible to earn $2 million profit by producing 7,730,500 yard/year. Ariguana should be gradually upgraded by replacing machinery etc. so it can produce both cotton and polyester cotton goods. Suggests seeking grants not to solve immediate financial problems. XI CEPAL. CDCC Draft report of the Meeting of Experts on Facilitation Problems and the Strengthening of Transport Institutions.
Laid before the House of Representatives 11 September 1981:

The report summarises the discussions of the meeting in which problems related to the strengthening of transport institutions and trade facilitation in the Caribbean were identified. Some of the problems highlighted are: port congestion and cargo pilferage, new technologies which reduce the number of ports of call by deepsea transport services; the lack of agreement between Caribbean shipowners; unsatisfactory safety standards for intra-Caribbean maritime transport; urban transport problems; and direct and indirect costs of trade documentation. In response to these problems a strategy and methodology for Caribbean co-operation was proposed. The strategy hinges upon (1) the development by Caribbean countries of transport solutions for their unique transport environment while ensuring a harmonious interface between Caribbean and extra-regional transport; (2) the simplification, harmonization and reduction of commercial documents, procedures and practices; (3) transport planning on a national as well as subregional basis; and (4) the utilization of new transport technologies. Specific recommendations for a programme of co-operation are outlined.

Examines the nature and parameters of information as reflected in the information transfer cycle and the policy questions or issues existing in relation to these elements. The organization and control, secondary publications, information presentation, dissemination and assimilation of the information transfer cycle are briefly discussed. The document outlines the goals of an information policy - to ensure effective utilization of accumulated knowledge in science and technology, social sciences; to ensure the availability of adequate information for decisions for management and for policy to focus on the attention of governments and private organizations on the problems of information availability and use. Human and financial resources, the creators and users of information and their identification and definition of their needs, policies of information service and the flow of information and its assimilation are looked at in the light of the policy outlined.

Report of survey on six CDCC countries regarding the development of the timber industry at the sub-regional level., at Port of Spain, 1980. 58p: map, tbs.
1980 General
Request from: CDC UN

Based on data collected for Belize, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago, the following observations/conclusions were derived: Guyana, Suriname and to a lesser extent Belize, are the major timber producers while the other three countries are the major consumers of forest products, have limited timber resource base, require watershed management and re-afforestation programmes. For all the countries of the sub-region, there is a steadily increasing balance of trade deficit as far as forest products are concerned; there is a need to avoid waste, to treat wood used for building, and to use wood waste for the production of wood and energy; for joint ventures which could provide an adequate log supply for all the countries; to decontrol local prices; and for some measure of national and international cooperation. The technical considerations of the timber industry, including the establishment of a Regional Timber Association, the proposed structure and functions of which are outlined. Data collected for each country is presented as an appendix.

This article deals with information support services for Caribbean social research. It identifies recent trends in Social Science research and national and regional efforts to establish information systems. In describing the specific infrastructure requirements of information support systems for the social sciences, a distinction is made between basic and dynamic infrastructures. In the former, the information support system is mainly concerned with replicating bibliographical guides and identifying sources; in the latter the system is itself a function of the research establishment and an integral part of a process of refining, testing and analyzing material generated from research projects. Reference is made to international information systems to demonstrate the range of possibilities open to researchers and to social science researchers. The article concludes that the limitations of financial and physical resources make it expedient for information support systems to adopt the strategy of a "man-machine" interface. A decentralized system which would combine research and documentation with basic and dynamic infrastructure that are manageable in terms of personal capabilities, costs and users' needs is recommended.

Examines the weaknesses of agricultural policies in the small-island plantation economies of the Caribbean and analyses the structure and function of the agricultural sector to show why these policies have proved ineffective. It is argued that the measures adopted, fail to consider seriously the economic and cultural structures or the characteristics of the economies of the islands and seek to alleviate the social and economic consequences of the crisis rather than attack its root causes. Five possible levels of intervention for the rationalization of the agricultural sector are outlined: land policy; domestic sector development; increased flexibility of agriculture; external policy for commercialization; and related policies which are necessary to achieve the objectives of these.

Examines regional production, prices and markets for spices and essential oils in CARICOM countries and makes recommendations for the expansion in production of "traditional" and "new" spices having regard to world market demands and the capability of unit territories individually or co-operatively to satisfy these demands. The study covers the countries of Antigua, Belize, Dominica, Grenada, Guyana, Jamaica, Montserrat, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Trinidad, and consists of three self-contained volumes. Volume 1 analyses the agronomic and marketing aspects of spices in CARICOM countries; volume 2 identifies the salient features of the

The report is divided into 2 parts: general conclusions and recommendations are presented in part 1, while part 2 describes agronomy and marketing of spices in the individual countries under study (Antigua, Belize, Dominica, Grenada, Guyana, Jamaica, Montserrat, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Trinidad and Tobago). The main conclusion is that the cultivation of spices, either in the individual territories or in the CARICOM region as a whole, except in the already established cases of nutmeg and mace, should not be the cornerstone of a development policy of the agricultural sector, but should be seen as an important and integral component of a rural development programme for the benefit of small farmers. The suggested strategy is to encourage and develop extensive cultivation by small farmers supported by adequate and efficient extension services, to make available farm improvement credit, production and distribution of suitable plant material, backed by continuing research activities on high-yielding clonal varieties and labour-reducing methods of cultivation, collection and preparation for the market. Phased development programmes are recommended to meet domestic requirements in the first instance and then attempts should be made to meet regional demands. Thereafter, steps should be taken to meet the requirements of other markets.

Contains the findings of a survey on the present state of information infrastructure development in the Caribbean. The countries analysed are the Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Grenada, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, St. Vincent, Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago. Major problem areas cited are: information policy and planning, human resources, acquisitions, archival records, bibliographic tools, inventories and directories, retrieval systems, and information dissemination. Recommendations are suggested with the purpose of upgrading national infrastructures and promoting regional co-operation particularly in those problem areas which are common to different countries in the region.

■ The report makes recommendations for a programme of action in the fields of export credit insurance and export financing. Jamaica, Trinidad and Tobago and Barbados are the only countries in the region which have established national export credit insurance schemes. It is suggested that the organization of one-day seminars in these countries would lead to the greater use of the insurance facility by exporters and banks, and to the introduction of new lines of activities by the insurers. Also outlined are areas of harmonization and co-operation. In the field of export financing the following is recommended: the organization of a regional seminar to discuss export financing and export credit insurance problems and needs in the region; the introduction of a scheme of pre-shipment credit guarantee to banks in the ECCM sub-region. Other recommendations related to specific problems arising at the national level (Jamaica, Barbados, Trinidad and Tobago and Guyana) and to the establishment of representation in foreign financial centers are made.

■ Examines the possibility and problems of a basic needs strategy for the newly independent micro-states of the Caribbean. Defines a basic needs approach as spelling out "in considerable detail human needs in terms of health, food, education, water, shelter, transport, simple household goods as well as non-material needs like participation, cultural identity and a sense of purpose in life and work". Points out that such a strategy would help to eradicate much of the poverty and deprivation which exist in these states by laying the foundation on which these states could build their own development plans.

■ Comments on current efforts at development at the international and national levels. Refers to international efforts viz - the New International Economic Order; the pursuit of peace by the UN and the concept of interdependence as is attempted by the Economic Cooperation between Developing Countries (ECD). Development at the national level is seen to focus on ideological clarification structural change and reduction of economic dependence. Sees the establishment of a formal integration arrangement e.g. the Caribbean Community and Common Market, as a means of assisting the pursuit of national economic goals. Considers the emphasis on people as a new dimension in current approaches to economic development and the satisfaction of their economic needs, the real objective of economic activity. Comments on 2 accepted measures of the level of economic activity i.e. the Gross Domestic Product and the Gross National Product. Points out the disadvantages of using per capita income as a measure of development since GNP might increase rapidly from year to year yet little development might actually be taking place. Identifies other indicators which can show how well the economy is doing viz the levels of health and education in the society, the housing stock and size of the average household, and the humaneness of the society. Considers ways in which policy makers have attempted to deal with the distribution of income in the society. Sees the human resource as a development resource since people can be trained to plan, organize and efficiently operate a system of production, based on the importation of appropriate raw materials. Suggests therefore that development efforts be focused on the individual who is the key to all development.

■ Identifies some of the dangers which have threatened the integrity of the integration movement e.g. the extra regional imports of some manufacturers in the region, and the failure on the part of a member state to maintain an agreed stand on a foreign policy issue. Stresses the need for Caribbean institutions viz CDB, Caribbean Investment Bank, UWI and all other Associate Institutions named in the Treaty of Chaguaramas, to complement the activity of the integration movement. Failure of any one of these institutions can easily cause a weakening of the system. Identifies the free trade regime as the strongest feature of the integration structure. Sees the approach of the CARICOM States as being coordinated and unified in their response to external market opportunities under the ACP/EEC Lome arrangements and in the context of Canada/CARICOM relations and the US Generalised Scheme of Preferences. Suggests that aid programmes to CARICOM member states should assist the region's self help mechanisms and thus make the countries less dependent on the external source. Comments on the Caribbean Basin Initiative by way of example and further suggests that donor countries should provide direct assistance to CARICOM and the Caribbean Development Bank from which all of their members should benefit.

- Problem areas to which field work and research projects should be oriented are food availability, food demand and biological utilization. It is recommended that projects be community-oriented. Private and public sectors and associated institutions and the community must be made fully aware of the objectives of the programme. Programme and assessment of the food and nutrition status within a community are important. The inadequacy of food and nutrition surveillance information in the region is observed and the need to remedy the problem is expressed. Food processing development for domestic consumption and export is discussed in relation to the heavy food import bill and indicators of a ready export market for good quality processed tropical fruit and vegetables in North America and Europe. The foundations of the industry are seen as adequate and reliable sources of raw material at reasonable costs, proper processing, technology, proper packaging, promotion and marketing, and training of manpower. Proposals include the establishment of small-scale community processing units around regional infrastructural units in agronomy, technology and marketing/purchasing. The location, establishment and operation of plants are discussed. Disadvantages of the cottage type industry and large plant operation are expressed. Standardization of equipment, product development and marketing are seen as both regional and territorial considerations. The concept proposed is bias towards rural development and development of indigenous technology.

Highlights selected key conceptual and policy issues as well as programme issues that are critical to the shaping of the integration movement in the 1980's. Considers the historical patterns and developments experienced since the inception of the integration movement. Sees the international relations setting as manifesting itself on two dimension viz: the dynamics of intra-regional countries, blocks and entities. Identifies 2 critical issues viz. divergences among CARICOM member states in the pursuit of the extra-regional relations and a regional adaptive response to trends in the international economic situation. Recommends a properly conceived action programme which should move beyond trade expansion. Identified two priority areas viz: food and energy which should engage the attention of the integration movement.

Three broad categories are focussed on: the indicators of overall nutrition status in relation to health; indicators of acute nutritional status; indices of chronic nutritional status. Five tables and three figures compare statistics over the last fifty years. It is stated that food supply trends show an increased contribution from cereals and an increase in the supply of protein. The distribution of energy and protein consumption is uneven. A decline in the mortality rate has been noted as well as a decline in moderate and severe malnutrition. Observations for vitamin and mineral associated deficiencies for example, anemia, emphasise the limited knowledge of the mineral status in the region. An increase in the size of children in the six to twelve age group is noted between 1964-1976. Obesity, diabetes and hyper-tension statistics are inconclusive. Recommendations are made for less emphasis on large population surveys, more emphasis on identifying populations at risk and utilizing specific tools to increase understanding of disease and the factors affecting it.

The family farm and land tenure system are examined as they relate to the small-farmer subculture. The historical conflicts between plantation and small-farmer for land, labour and capital that have undermined small farming are discussed. Complicated land tenure systems, family land distribution and farming practices are also examined and relate to under-utilization of land for food farming. Suggestions for policymakers include focussing on simplifying and reducing tenure systems, the rationalization of the farm unit and designing mechanisms to control and regulate the rural land market. Attention is drawn to the need to shift focus away from the individual self-sufficient "whole farm" programmes aimed at expanding and efficiently distributing food supply. The labour problems of the small farmer need to be recognized as well as the economic factors affecting his interest in farming.

Lists and discusses aspects which made for success: inter-ministerial co-operation and co-ordination; efficient organizational and co-ordinating structure; use of all available forms of communication; limited subject matter; relevance of messages; consistency and co-ordination in information dissemination; popular involvement. Emphasizes that built-in evaluation mechanisms must be included in all Food and Nutrition Week plans. Success can be judged by the continuation of such exercises and in other countries, interest in launching similar projects.

Issues the challenge for the Third World to deal with world technology from its own definition of reality. Sees the basic goal as being able to achieve "technological capacity" within themselves so that problems of technology transfer and appropriate technology would be taken care of. Identifies a vital concept that "technology capacity" manifests itself viz self-sustainability, independent and steady flow of socially relevant and commercially applicable innovations and the self-confidence with which it selects and draws on the technologies of other countries. Considers the main fundamental issues in national and international technology policy that a country achieving technological capacity faces. Poses the problem of developing countries.
being caught up in patterns of technology transfer. Observes the pattern of Western technological growth in relation to the needs of developing countries. Suggests a paradigm for technological development in the Third World under which the need to develop technologies be scaled of production appropriate to the circumstances of the many small, mini and micro states or societies existing in that today. Attention should be focussed on resources in the Third World which have not yet been the subject of any technological attention. Mentions the technology of agriculture as an area of concern under the proposed paradigm. Suggests that emphasis be placed on technologies for the exploiting renewable resources and technologies that conserve the environment. Finally focusses on the need to develop techniques which would ensure the delivery of certain basic services viz health care, education and training. Suggests a process whereby developing countries can create their technological capacity with both the government and private sector agencies having critical notes to play.

The manual is intended to assist volunteer teachers of the Centre for Popular Education in providing basic literacy skills to adults. The first part introduces the volunteer to the process of teaching adults and provides a guide on how students and classes should be approached. The second part provides an explanation of the reader “Let us Learn Together”, and its use. In part 3 the themes of each lesson are expanded to provide volunteer with an understanding of some of the important issues of the Grenada Revolution and the development of the country. These themes are: Let us Learn from Each Other: We Build Communities; Grenada, Carriacou and Petit-Martinique; The Land Must Produce More; One Caribbean; Free Milk for Mothers and Babies; The Revolution Brings More Doctors for our People; Our International Support; NCB-the Bank of our People; Building a New Grenada; Vigilance in our Villages; Our History of Struggle; Education is a Must; and The Revolution has Room for All of Us.

- Economic and political conditions in Grenada, US policy towards that country and policy alternatives are outlined. Issues of concern are the lack of a free press in Grenada, the detention of political prisoners, the absence of free elections, the building of an international airport and Grenada's close links with Cuba. It is stressed that relationships between the US and Grenada are seriously strained and this has resulted from hostility on both sides. It is noted that the US has refused to accredit a US Ambassador to Grenada and has refused to accept the accreditation of a Grenadian Ambassador to the US. To counter leftist military charges about the building of the airport, its importance for the economic development of the territory e.g. with regard to tourism, is expressed. It is also noted that the airport is of comparable size with existing ones in neighboring territories. An economic and developmental overview observes improvements in the island. The Caribbean Basin Initiative, in so far as it assumed that Grenada will be excluded from benefits is also a matter of contention. Grenada's relationship with her Caribbean neighbors is also discussed, the US concern being a spread of leftist ideological influence. Recommendations are: (1) that diplomatic relationships between the two countries should be restored; (2) that discussions of issues, misunderstandings, misperceptions should be undertaken by the US and the US authorities; (3) that attempts by the US to isolate Grenada should be discontinued since: relationship can only be worsened by such action; and (4) the US Government should refrain from provocative military measures in the Caribbean since respect for the sovereignty of the Caribbean nations is an easier method of achieving US goal.

- An examination of the local government system from the perspective of the implications of the new constitution on aspects as the ideology, objectives and principles. The system evolved from the 1954 Robertson Commission, a critic of the Marshall Report mandated to enquire and report on all aspects of local government both in rural and urban areas of the colony and make feasible recommendations. The ideological base of this system is centered around democracy and objectives include the transfer of power for socialist development, the dynamic pervasive role of the local government with the right and duty to plan and develop export resources and market produce, improve the standard of living and mobilize people for production by acting as a channel to harness power and collective wisdom of the people. The principles to focus on the extent of the scope and range of the system which is designed to be potentially economically viable. The electoral process for the various councils and organs was briefly reviewed.

- Explains the reasons for the poor financial position of the National Water Commission, to justify the increased rates requested. Reasons include escalating fuel costs, development and arbitration awards. Points out that current rates do not allow the Commission to meet mandatory standards set by their creditors, the international lending agencies. Indicates that even with these increases there will be a deficit this year. Says all water operations will now be controlled by the Commission to ensure better and more economical administration. The schedules of new rates for the three sectors are appended.

- Outlines government's plans for socio-economic development and growth. Immediate and long term goals are: increasing foreign exchange earnings, deregulation, prioritizing industries with high foreign exchange potential. Government will supply infrastructure while the private sector will implement expansion and growth.
$2,760 million will be spent 1981-1984 to be provided by external assistance and government funds. Benefits will include: increased employment, foreign exchange; development of indigenous sources of energy; increased production and services. The National Planning Agency and other government bodies will effectively monitor the programmes. Agriculture places first and social infrastructure last in a hierarchy of six beneficiaries of the programme. Major projects will be agricultural skills training, soil conservation technology, a second integrated rural development project, building factories and primary schools, increasing the power generation capacity of Jamaica Public Service Company.

- Reports the achievements of the government in its second year. Reviews the first year's work which resulted in a 2% economic growth against - 5.4% in 1980. Discusses the main sectors in some detail, listing components with greatest potential for fast profits, e.g. garment and footwear. Traditional and non-traditional crops, tourism, new developments in energy, are doing well. Bauxite/alumina, public utilities, urban transport, construction, are critical areas being tackled now; some with more success than others.

Social programmes, such as HEART, and compulsory education initiatives have been introduced and others upgraded. Care of the poor, unemployment, new aspects of culture, are receiving particular attention. The Caribbean Basin Initiative, the strengthening of CARICOM through the heads of government meeting here and the singing of the Law of the Sea Convention have been satisfactory foreign policy achievements. All this took place against the background of world recession. Concludes that despite much success, problems remain but none insurmountable.

- Describes the role of the various agencies active in planning in Jamaica, and presents an integrated planning scheme. Lists the activities of the Town Planning Department - forward planning for government ministries, subdivision, advising Parish Councils. Refers to development plans produced with help from United Nations and United States. Regional planning was devised to ward off rural migration, but has been largely ineffective. Points to the gap between development plans and development projects and believes pragmatism is needed to ensure balanced development. Locates responsibility for planning principally with the Ministry of Finance and Planning through the Town Planning Department, National Planning Agency and Urban Development Corporation (UDC). Details the history and function of each; mentions other agencies set up to deal with special projects. Discusses legalised independence given to the Minister of Housing and UDC, to acquire and dispose of land. - Comments on the performance of the government which has enabled it to satisfy IMF criteria for the first half of their programme, amid a global recession. The Prime Minister details the achievements made possible through help from IMF and the World Bank - a reversal of eight years negative growth; 100 new foreign investments in one year; a surplus after six years balance of payments deficit; reduced unemployment; inflation rate down from 28% to 4.7%. Expects for 1982 similar improvement in real economic growth, manufacturing; negative international reserves and inflation reduced; construction, capital formation increased. Economic strategies to achieve this, concern reviving and expanding major industries such as bauxite/alumina, sugar, bananas and tourism. The last will be tackled first, the others on a long term basis. Key personnel such as Ministers of Foreign Trade and Tourism, Heads of the National Planning Agency and Jamaica National Investment Promotions and the Financial Secretary, all comment on the role of their departments in meeting national goals. Other government agencies with supporting roles are mentioned.

- Outlines the needs and problems of the industry and recommends organizational changes for its efficient development. Analyses the several components - beef, dairy, pork, sheep and goat, poultry, showing that each has performed reasonably well. Insanitary slaughtering practices; low milk production because of competition from imported milk solids; poor marketing practices, high calf mortality; low price and little capital, are some of the problems identified. Recommends restructuring the importation of milk solids; a two-tiered pork industry offering quality and low priced pork; annual increase of sheep and goats to those sections of the Ministry of Agriculture which form the support services of the livestock industry. Research, a breeding and multiplication programme, infrastructure, incentives, regulation and pricing must be seriously attacked to ensure all-round improvement of the industry. Includes annexes.

- Outlines AID's programmes designed to help GOJ promote economic development. In the short term the main areas of assistance will be: solving foreign exchange problems; expansion of private sector investments, productivity and exports; institutional development in the public sector units; productive employment generation. The strategy to achieve these goals will be to identify constraints and remove them. AID and other donors will condition their assistance on AID's improving its economic policy and institutional framework. Is doubtful of GOJ's ability to do this and regrets the dependency syndrome it seems to be developing. Priority will be given by AID to creating a vibrant private sector which is the key factor in development. In the long term the focus will be on more employment generation and on the attack on foreign exchange problems and institutional development. Sets out the costs of the various programmes. Will carry out studies on the agricultural sector, housing and development, private sector, training and employment and an environmental profile, the better to plan for the 1985 strategy statement. Concludes that the downturn of the economic system is widespread but many problems remain. Nevertheless GOJ merits US assistance. Includes appendix.

Presents the development, scope, role and function of the co-operative movement in Jamaica. Focuses on the impact and importance of co-operatives in the rural areas, and provides an analysis of the participation of peasants (all categories) women and youth. Examines the relationship between agrarian reform and agricultural co-operatives. Lists the difficulties experienced in establishing and developing co-operatives: the lack of adequate financing, poor co-operative integration, and the lack of training facilities. Indicates the means by which the Ministry of Agriculture has attempted to get around these difficulties. The means include training for all pre-co-operative membership and for specialized areas as management and technical personnel, amalgamation of small societies. Points out that in 1980 there were 281 societies with a membership of 300,000, savings of J$90 million and assets of J$198.3 million. The societies have provided loans totalling $100.4 million, recorded sales of J$56.3 million and surpluses of J$17.7 million.

Presents the rationale behind the needed establishment of a services commission in the local government - an independent and impartial body in charge of appointing those personnel and discipline of local Government servants. Outlines for comparative reasons the aims, objectives and intention behind the erection of the Public Service Commission. The Commission, not being responsible to the political directorate can act impartially and provide the necessary insulation which the public servant requires against the political directorate which in a two party political system will change from time to time and thus bring changes in ideologies and policies. Gives reasons for the need for its existence as (1)the operation of the local government system brings the operation of the local government officer into much closer day-to-day contact with the political directorate; (2)in the less sophisticated political operations politicians hold a greater danger for influence than even in the Central Government. (3)job opportunities in the local government service are much less than in the central government and so the employees of the local authorities would be more sensitive to job security and would thereby be more susceptible to political influence. Other advantages as helping to sustain the rights of the public servant in a systematic way; ensuring greater employment opportunities and mobility in the service, which in turn helps to maintain the development of 'parochial' attitudes amongst employees.

- Statement of intent by the political leader of the PNM. The party is durable and will find a challenge in the many problems. Inflation has eroded the living standards of large sections of the population and the international recession has affected exports. While oil and gas will be resource for local industry, over the long run only vigorous agricultural and manufacturing sectors will guarantee adequate employment and income levels. Ministerial portfolios will be redistributed and the civil service reorganized in order to enhance management. There is a need for review and reappraisal of national priorities, two projects having attracted much criticism; these two projects are to be halted pending a comprehensive review. In Caribbean affairs Trinidad and Tobago remains committed to regional integration and, in international affairs, remains non-aligned.

- The 1982 presentation of the estimates represents the first stage in a programme of economic reform recommended by the International Monetary Fund. Changes result from a reclassification of estimates to provide policy makers at parliamentary and executive levels, and the general public, with the necessary data in an aggregated and disaggregated form. Further, the Treasury will, in 1982, delegate authority in some areas to Accounting Officers while continuing to exercise a supervisory function. Estimates of revenue have been similarly reclassified to facilitate economic analysis and tax planning.

- Outlines proposals for a subregional Trade Facilitation Programme to be carried out by the Special Programme on Trade Facilitation (FALPRO) to act on formalities, procedures and documents in international trade. Studies have shown that in various countries the cost for trade procedures and documentation amounts to 10% of the value of the goods in trade. The main task of the Programme will be to advise governments on the simplification and harmonization of trade formalities since complicated procedures constitute a serious handicap to the growth of trade. The Trade Programme will coordinate regional and national trade efforts with a common facilitation programme integrating the needs of the individual countries into the decision-making process of the committee level.

- The newly formed Caribbean/Central American Action Group is seen as representing a coming together of two concerns: first, a concern for the vital importance of the Wider Caribbean region and secondly, a recognition of the importance of friendship on a people-to-people basis as a foundation for the mutual progress of the United States and the Wider Caribbean. Elaborating on these concerns, the economic vulnerability and political instability of the Caribbean is noted and the challenge to the US, in view of Cuba's threatening role in the region, is defined as reframing from unwarranted intervention but helping, in a "proper and open way", those countries who want to improve their lifestyle, freedom and economic well-being. The creation of an action group at the Federal level is seen to be an expansion of the government's program for the Caribbean as well as an effort to coordinate the activities of other partnership groups.

- Examines the momentous period of social security development in Jamaica. Says greater longevity, the steady growth of the labour force and the need to restructure the Sugar Workers' Pensions Scheme influenced government to make the national scheme a priority in 1962. States that Ministry of Labour personnel with ILO and U.K. undertook to review current practice and draft proposals for a social security scheme. Reports that the actual findings showed that having contributory and non-contributory components in the sugar workers scheme, as well as other factors, accounted for its bad financial position. Recommended integration with a national scheme. Traces the development of the national scheme from presenting the outline to Cabinet, through the first draft, to its implementation in 1986 after the act was passed in 1985. Points out the two main areas of activity, drafting the legislation and setting up the necessary administrative machinery. Concludes that the National Insurance Scheme took over the assets and liabilities of the Sugar Workers Pension Scheme and no sugar worker lost his contributions to the old scheme.

1981 General Request from: TTParl

- Based on two talks given by the author in 1980 and 1981. The 1981 budget has no value as an economic document, except as providing insights into the government's incompetent planning. It did not consider answers to the major problems facing the economy: declining agricultural production; inflation; housing; sport and recreation facilities; an inefficient public service. No rational policies have been devised for agricultural marketing, production or industry. The budget copes with inflation by proposing tax relief and the promotion of saving, rather than by discouraging production in all sectors. Housing is in short supply and sporting needs are satisfied at the expense of other sectors. The budget shows no understanding that national ownership and national control are not synonymous; that the role of the State is to act on behalf of all the people, not one section of it; that the need is for a participatory system giving the wider society a sense of a new relationship in a vast technical enterprise.

- A profile is given on the Caribbean area with respect to population economic and agricultural features as they RELATE TO NUTRITION. IT IS STATED THAT FOOD POLICY AND PROGRAMME PLANNING, MUST BE SEEN AS COMPATIBLE WITH EFFORTS TO RAISE THE LEVEL AND INCOME, IMPROVE ITS DISTRIBUTION AND DAMPEN ITS FLUCTUATION. DISTRIBUTION OF FOOD SUPPLIES, AN ADEQUATE SUPPLY TO LOW INCOME-GROUPS, A MINIMIZING OF WASTAGE AND LOSSES, THE SUPPLY AND DISTRIBUTION OF HIGH-ENERGY DENSITY FOOD; A REDUCTION OF THE DEPENDANCY ON IMPORTED FOOD, AND THE ENSURING THAT THESE FACTORS DO NOT LEAD TO THE DETERIORATION OF THE NUTRITIONAL STATUS OF THE POPULATION, ARE SEEN AS MAJOR CONSIDERATIONS IN PROGRAMMES. THREE AREAS FOR EMPHASIS IN REGIONAL PROJECTS HAVE BEEN NOTED AS INCREASED PRODUCTION OF NUTRITIONALLY IMPORTANT FOODS, REDUCTION IN POST-HARVESTING LOSSES AND IMPROVED PROCESSING AND MARKETING OF FOODS. PROBLEMS OF IMPLEMENTATION HAVE BEEN OBSERVED.

Summarizes the projects for the 3rd country programme and reviews the on-going programme, whereby UNDP will help the government realize its goals for economic recovery. The new programme, prepared by the National Planning Agency with inputs from UN Specialized Agencies, will run from 1982-1986 and cost US$75 million. This will reduce the real value to US$6 million. Second programme projects have contributed mostly to human resource development and training; though agriculture, industrial capability, energy planning and development, have also benefited. Short term goals for economic recovery are: foreign exchange solvency, increased production, exports and better productivity. These are to be achieved through IMF loans and other policies. - Discusses the principal features and aims of the plan - a new economic programme for the Caribbean and Central America, which combines trade, aid and investment. Answers a wide range of questions including the intent of the plan, the major elements; the impact of oil prices on the economy of the Caribbean Basin; the effect of the programme on U.S. trade; the role of the U.S. private sector. Clarifies points of concern such as the special provisions for sugar and textiles. Says previous arrangements exist for textiles and U.S. domestic sugar must be protected. Considers the programme a powerful economic investment, politically satisfying for both sides. Expects the multilateral development banks to continue their support of the region. Sees the plan no threat to U.S. jobs as investments in the region will be those which would have gone to other parts of the world. The programme will not be disastrous, disputes any other developing region. Believe it will impact greatly on the trade and investment activities of the Caribbean and Central America.

- The integration and inter-disciplinary focus on the training programmes are endorsed. It was felt that the area of redistribution of food needed to be discussed. It was expected that provision for differences between peculiar English-African and Caribbean problems should be made. The training programmes and common philosophical approaches are recommended in general for the programme, and "The Food Chain" concept for the interdisciplinary problem-research approach was supported. The community-oriented nature of the field work was supported and it was felt that emphasis needed to be placed on developing sensitivity to human aspects of food and nutrition problems through training in the Social Sciences. - Comments on the state of nutrition in the region and components of a strategy designed to improve the situation through intersectoral co-operation. Points out that because no dialogue exists between agriculturists and nutritionalists there is no relationship between food production and the nutritional requirements and problems of the region. Cites CARICOM regional food plan to prove the point. From CFNI workshops has come a regional food and nutrition plan which seeks to address many of the health problems which can affect national development. It sets goals and a programme of objectives to be achieved by 1990. The major aim is to increase self-sufficiency and self-reliance and improve health for all in the region. Identifies primary objectives - the concern of the food and nutrition sector and ancillary objectives - to be realised only with the cooperation of other sectors. The former deals with: food production and availability at national and household levels; economic situation; nutritional status. The latter considers institutional management, improved environmental health conditions, public participation. Proposes an organizational structure to implement the plans. A Management Information System will supplement the work of the various committees. Awaits endorsement by national governments, funding personnel. Includes in annexe summary analyses of the strategy and the programmes, the organizational chart and resolutions from meetings of ministries.

   ■ Seeks to bring the Jamaica Omnibus Co., Jamaica
   Telephone Co., Jamaica Public Service Co., Jamaica Railway Corporation, under a single commission, with the Ministry having a more active role in their operations. Currently these utilities are regulated by different organizations; they do not meet the needs of the people; government often has to guarantee loans for them. Hence government should have prior knowledge of investment plans and other decisions likely to affect the society. Proposes that (i)The Public Utilities Commission
   (PUC) allocate the Ministry of Public Utilities, Communication and Transport to comment on rate changes before any decision is taken; (ii) all major investment plans be submitted to the PUC from their inception. PUC will advise the Minister on their merit and have his approval before the plans can be implemented; (iii)PUC monitors standards of the utilities and insists that they be maintained; (iv)PUC may hold an enquiry into a utility’s performance at the request of the Minister. Lists several advantages of having a single Commission. Among them: an impartial cadre of experts, available to government if and when it assumes ownership of a utility, better integration of the plans of the utilities, improved financial management and rate structure.

   independent Commonwealth Caribbean States - Barbados, Grenada, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago concerning the law of the sea, particularly the territorial sea, the Continental Shelf, the Economic Zone and the Fishery Zone. It shows that Caribbean States have perceived the law of the sea negotiations principally with a view towards maximizing their national interests usually by means of expanded national jurisdiction. The outstanding changes noted concern the breadth of the Outlines points to be considered in studying the feasibility of a resource recovery plant to produce steam from solid waste. Among the main factors to be considered are: choice of technology, risk contract document, marketing the final product, financing, planning and overviewing. Size of plant will depend on amount of waste regularly available and waste composition. Plant location must have community acceptance. Describes the type of incinerator to be used. Recovery process must be clearly stated via-a-vis kinds of fuel to be used and skilled personnel required. The purchase of the end product will impact on plant location, size, etc. Legal organizational and financial factors must be carefully discussed, examined and assured before embarking on the project.

1983 General Request from: JMNPA
Summarises the results of a survey presented in 7 volumes, of hydro power projects, undertaken to find those technically and economically viable, inexpensive, energy-saving, easily implemented. Of twelve rivers investigated, three were deemed suitable - VS, Great River and Rio Bueno. Reports on the hydrological, geological investigations carried at each site, as well as the possible effects of the projects on the ecology, water users, the watershed. Explains the project and system approach methods used in the economic analysis. Concludes that the three projects are technically feasible. At August 1978 prices, the VS project will cost approximately: J$26.02m, alternative to J$27.84m; Rio Bueno J$9.4m; Great River J$15.1m. vs 1983.

1982 General Request from: JMNPA
Describes 11 schemes recommended for efficient use of irrigation water in the mid Clarendon Plains. Estimated cost is J$69,372,000 or J$925,000 to J$1,035,00 per acre. Suggests a Project Implementation Unit located at the National Water Commission to monitor the entire programme. The schemes include horticulture, upgraded irrigation, drainage and land reclamation, small-scale agro-industry. Lists required personnel - a complement of 97 local and 8 expatriate experts. Costs analysis shows an interest rate of 8%, RR 15%, based on current returns on sugar cane. These percentages will increase if more valuable crops are introduced. Water at the "farm gate" should cost J$81 c per 1,000 imperial gallons unsubsided. Concludes, after evaluating the benefits accruing from each scheme, that since schemes for improving irrigation of sugar cane are less profitable than those which seek to introduce other crops, for improved irrigation there must be a change of crops in the area.

JM CIDA: Jamaica Government

Request from: JMNPA

- Reports the work of a CIDA Team and local experts who reviewed some feasibility studies to decide on a suitable development programme for the Clarendon Plains, which will increase employment through job creation, generate foreign exchange and reduce imports by increasing import substitutes. Sees great potential for development in the area because all the components are in place: water resources, good soils, manpower and sound infrastructure. New schemes should immediately attend rehabilitation and improvement of existing irrigation facilities, desalination of water: should introduce new crops and develop better managerial skills. Estimated cost of the suggested programme is J$30 million, i.e., the equivalent of 7.8$ in foreign exchange for machinery, spare parts, overseas expertise. Recommends a Development Authority to co-ordinate the programme and avoid duplication of efforts and areas of responsibility. Lists terms of reference in an appendix. In annexes, sets out guidelines for the preparation of schemes and ranks 17 proposed schemes, describing them, stating the responsible agency and cost of each.

Request from: CDC 1982

- Outlines the scope, size, loan terms and disbursement mechanism of the facility which has been structured to provide for the financing of the incremental cost of petroleum products, fertilizers and asphalt to member states of CARICOM which qualify for financial assistance from Trinidad and Tobago under the general guidelines of the Caribbean Aid Council. The facility is primarily geared to ameliorate the balance of payments difficulties in the immediate future by reducing the amount of foreign exchange to be disbursed by beneficiary countries. Included in the appendix is a list of the revised guidelines for the operations of the Caribbean Aid Council.

- The aims of the working document "Caricom regional food and nutrition strategy: a strategy for the 1980's" are outlined. The strategy aims at reducing the incidence of malnutrition among the regional population and also at reducing regional dependence on imported food.
Population identified for immediate attention is children under two years, expectant mothers and the poor.
Implementation is spread over a ten year period to 1990 and nine programmes are envisaged. Programmes aim at increased food supply, establishment of a food bank a reduction in under-nutrition, improved health of mothers and children reducing the incidences of nutrition-related diseases. Programmes six and seven are educational, aimed at (1) developing more relevant and effective education at school and adult levels, especially in the areas of agriculture, food and nutrition and health science; (2) producing trained technical personnel for the strategy. Programmes eight and nine are directed at communication and strategy management respectively.

Report on export promotion visit to Trinidad

Netherlands Antilles. Department of Economic Affairs,
1981 General
Request from: CDC 2014
- The main purpose of the mission was to explore the potential for exports from the Netherlands Antilles to Trinidad and Tobago. 1978 figures show that the United States is the largest single supplier (34%) of non-oil imports to that country. Few Antillean companies currently sell on the Trinidad market and prospects are very limited for others. All Antillean products except pharmaceuticals are affected by tariff duties which range up to 50% and a majority of these products are subject to import licences, which are rarely issued for such products as sausages, mattresses, and paints. Special regulations are in force for the importation of food and drugs and purchase taxes are applied to most products consumed in Trinidad. Market information is provided for household products, furniture, clothing and jewelry, food, drink and tobacco, building materials, cosmetics and pharmaceuticals, marine products, and engineering products. The mission received requests for quotations from Trinidad importers for: industrial cleaners, Curacao liqueur; beer, paints; automobile parts, and blank tape cassettes. Follow-up action is recommended. Appendices.

Request from: GYUNDP
- Report of a mission to Guyana by a UNIDO textile expert (Project GUY/80/001) to review the organization of the integrated mill Sanata Textiles, Guyana. The joint venture between the People’s Republic of China and the Republic of Guyana is assessed by means of a survey covering spinning, weaving finishing, quality control and organization. In addition, an examination of local management talent is carried out. Findings indicate a lack of essential staff skills and identify the language barrier between Chinese and Guyanese personnel as a major constraint on efficient plant operation. Suggestions are made for additional training of staff, particularly in textile technology. The provision of expert aid on levels of management and technical supervision is identified as a priority.

An assessment of GYSTAC’s information systems department (IDS) is carried out, examining IDS’s organizational structure, project management, computer hardware and software and programme design. In addition, investigations are made on how to develop a job control and costing system for Guyana National Engineering Corporation. Seminars are conducted on process communication “aesthetic” COBOL, structured programming, file organization and testing. Agricultural feeder roads project: labour intensive pilot project; final report. New York, N.Y., 1980. 184p
Agricultural Feeder Roads Project
1980 General
Request from: JMNPA
- Reports on a road construction and maintenance project carried out to test the economic feasibility of labour intensive technologies. Lists other objectives of the project. Some field activities were: clearing and grubbing, hillside excavation, culvert manufacture and placement. The work force ranged from 100 in January to 900 in September. Workers were paid minimum wages of $1.60/day. Cost analysis showed labour intensive technologies competitive with equipment intensive. On this basis construction costs would be $13,500/km, maintenance $800/km/year - 1979 prices. Recommends that community councils have inputs in labour recruitment and that areas of responsibility be clearly defined. Finds that payment in cash made a more positive impact on the communities. Says a training manual for supervisors was developed and used during the project. Recommends a continuation of the programme on a wide scale. Concludes that labor intensive technologies are technically, financially and socially feasible. Includes appendices.

Request from: JMNPA
- Describes the activities of a UNICEF project to introduce new methods into the primary school. Says the project was to develop curricula to integrate environmental studies and social studies with benefits to language arts; develop the necessary materials and equipment; train appropriate personnel to implement the curricula. Points out that late start and other problems led to modification of the original plans. Sets out revised objectives which ensured co-operation of Ministry personnel, principals and teachers. Outlines the reorganised project operations in a flow chart and cybernetic diagram. Stresses the importance of the child in the teaching/learning situation. Indicates that a working group was organised to make teachers aware of their areas of responsibility as to plan and elucidate the strategy for curriculum development. Explains that seminars, supervision, tutorials and workshops were used to train teachers in the integrated approach and to prepare teaching aids. Concludes that improved teacher attitude and teacher competence demonstrates success of the project so far. Considers it too early to assess pupil achievement. Believes a follow-up project will show new general use of the integrated approach. Then it will be time to measure pupil benefits.

Sets out and comments on the phases of the project and the planned operations. Looks at new rehabilitation works: the scope, allocation of funds, county selection on a priority basis and new viability indices. Reports successful and promising in acquiring and repairs of vehicles and equipment. Sees inefficiency through overstaffing and low productivity, not enough equipment and doubt from other ministries and agencies as the main problems of the Hire Fund Scheme. Records a deficit but feels it could have been offset by better accounting practices. Considers other aspects of administration of the fund, cash flow difficulties; vehicle and plant registers; expense control arrangements; legalisation of the Fund, resitting of the Kingston workshop. Expresses regret at the lack of suitable candidates for the classes arrangements for effective stock control and security of the stores building. • Records repair work on 41 roads in western Jamaica at a cost of J$6,542,481.00 and makes recommendations for the future. Gives a brief physical description of Jamaica, details the flood damage and the temporary repairs undertaken. Outlines the origin of the work, staff and staff time required and cash flow plan. Describes major work in each parish, states costs, method of execution, equipment, materials and labour needed. Supervisors were works overseers and parish superintendents. Summarises the work of the bauxite company, the U.S. Navy’s Cee Bees and the Ministry of Works. Recommends better equipment upgrading of contracting methods and materials. Comments on the lack of skilled workers, the need for a specially assigned supervisor for similar tasks and for immediate main drainage improvement. Concludes that the project was successful and that its target on time, kept within the budget, generated much employment and left some roads better than they had been.

• Designs a programme for women to fit into the activities and objectives of the II Integrated Rural Development Project (IIRD). Family Food Production Plan - vegetable gardening is a rotation of nutritious vegetables to complement starchy foods, thus providing a balanced diet with little animal protein. The plan arose from the needs of farm women who were not considered in the main (IDRP) programme. With inputs from the women, pre-planning included selecting suitable vegetables, organising the course, training home extension officers in the community. Nutrition and health and vegetable gardening were the main topics of the course. Concludes that the project has had reasonable success. In 9 months, 540 women and their families had vegetable gardens; there were 20 extension officers in the field. Considers other aspects for the future: a women’s centre; a viable craft shop; a child development centre to enhance and widen the women’s interests beyond nutrition towards responsible parenthood; the role of the father in child-rearing and the importance of family planning.

- Highlights the performance of the Corporation during 1979. Industrial conflict led to the loss of $3 million; government had to reimburse Alcan Jamaica Co. $2 million for trucking bauxite. June floods caused much damage and suspension of service from Ipswich to Montego Bay. Added to these was the effect of inflation. All this resulted in a final deficit of over $6 million. A shortfall in mining, passenger and freight traffic, salary increases and the creation of a new senior post as well as 60 deralignments, further aggravated the situation. Some effort was made to improve the service. Details are presented in the annual report which is attached.

- Reports on the delivery of health services in the parish. Despite movement among personnel, numbers remained fairly stable though shortages still exist, notes the full quota of doctors. Mentions successful special projects, e.g. sight conservation, sponsored by the Lions Club; overall the health team did well. However more cases of TB were reported than in 1979, gastroenteritis and fever were still prevalent and gonorrhoea increased dramatically. Efforts are being made to encourage greater practice of family planning among teenagers, to raise the age of first pregnancy to 20 years. Markets need upgrading, especially that in Montego Bay. Wants more community involvement in health education. Manpower development was very good with seminars and workshops held for all categories of staff. Notes however the full complement of midwives and a Health Educator - the first in 3 years. The operations of Health Centres are unsatisfactory caused by shortages of all kinds. There were several special projects. Among reported diseases malignant neoplasms and hypertension were most fatal and there was a high incidence of fever and gastroenteritis. Regrets the limited reporting of information, especially of communicable diseases, which resulted in unreliable statistics. Maternal and child health with family planning showed much improvement - 95% pregnant women having attended clinics. Much effort was made to reduce malnutrition which still plagued the parish. Food hygiene and sanitation needed upgrading, water supplies were generally unsatisfactory.

- The promotion and facilitation of optimum utilization of Caribbean information resources by decision-makers in the economic and social planning field is the major objective of the project. In keeping with this objective, activities undertaken by ECLA are delineated. These included the promoting of the establishment and strengthening of information centres in national planning agencies, training and advisory services, two regional workshops and several follow-up missions to evaluate existing information resources for dissemination b) assist in preparation of work programmes of the national focal point c) discuss problems and make recommendations for improvement d) begin promotion of the use of information, were held. A summary of individual country situations and activities is included. ECLA has endeavoured to ensure compatibility among various national centres, to put into operation a mechanism for the flow of information among national centres and the CDC, to promote the use of information by the economic and social planning community. The lack of financial and human resources has delayed the development somewhat and a table illustrating the situation in the participating countries is included. A more dynamic service to the Caribbean planning community and the accomplishment of a capability in mechanized data processing are the major projections.

• Indicates current knowledge on health sector performance as measured by traditional indices supported by narrative comments. The objective is to stimulate acceptance of accountability, rational review of work programmes and the development of programming approach to short and long term planning and evaluation within specific areas. The narrative consists of a discourse on the re-organization of the health services, as well as outlines of health care services and their utilization; health resources; the health situation indicative of population, vital statistics, mortality and the environment. Includes programme reports, noting that some are concerned with specific objectives, others strategies and activities for the year under review. This is seen as a reflection of the growing concern of programme managers to review, restructure and develop their programmes in line with the Five Year Health Sector Plans.

• Focuses on the performance of the central bank in the period reviewed. Looks closely at the country's economic behaviour and finds that GDP increased by 1.2% over 1980; the consumer price index fell from 26.9% to 12.8%; unemployment down 1.7%, new arrangements with the IMF made other loans available. Government aimed to promote economic activity and reduce unemployment by (a) deregulation, (b) reducing the public sector's commercial activity, (c) increased job opportunities. Discusses the monetary policy which showed a 42% revenue increase because of restructured tax administration. Finds that high unemployment and inflation dominated world economy; gives profiles of the economies of the U.K., U.S. and Japan. Examines all the operations of the bank. The balance sheet shows a net operating loss for the year of over $26 million. This was paid from the Consolidated Fund.

Traces the development of social security from colonial times, defines social security. Finds some of its roots in West Africa. Dates it in Jamaica in the 19th Century as Friendly Societies, which were not government-aided, but government-recognised. Says legislation came in 1842. Poor relief, pensions and provident schemes were the first national efforts, but very few persons benefited. Differentiates between Friendly Societies, Voluntary and Community-Motivated and social security - compulsory and government-imposed. Indicates that the Workmen's Compensation Law followed the Employer's Liability Law of 1909 with better benefits for more persons. Considers that union activity and union example influenced government action in the 1950's e.g. Sugar Workers' Pensions Scheme 1960, administered by the Pension Authority to which workers, employers and government, contributed. Discusses initial problems of underestimating number of past sugar workers, late start in deductions from current workers, failure of some small farmers to make deductions or contribute to the fund. Suggests reasons for failure of Pension Authority to initiate similar schemes among other industries.

Evaluates the impact of public investment in developmental infrastructure. For political advantages, governments prefer to invest in infrastructure and not on consumer goods. Examines capital expenditure on transport infrastructure, public services, education. Finds that government tends to leave to the private sector those components which they use most e.g. ports and harbours and electricity. Points out the difficulties in assessing the appropriate level of investment in infrastructure and prioritizing its allocation. Many areas of the economy necessary for growth and development have been neglected, e.g. rural roads, technical education, water supplies. Cites expenditure on agriculture to warn against believing that large investments are the prerequisites for economic growth.

NIEO); both belong to the dynamics of national contribution to the world community - the Non-Aligned Movement and the New International Economic Order (NIEO) - both belong to the dynamics of national independence and the reality of global inter-dependence. The Non-Aligned Movement grew out of the desire for political freedom. The current international economic system is a consequence of colonialism and is inconsistent with freedom. Details the severity of its impact on the economy of Third World nations, new and old. In the 1970's the Third World sought economic growth and social justice, but had little success because of the intransigence of the industrialised democracies. Details the areas of NIEO concern: trade, finance, technology, information, transnational corporations and transfer of resources. In all these the Third World is disadvantaged. Hence the desire for structural changes in the world economic system. Restructuring must be carefully done remembering that inequity is incompatible with an inter-dependent world. Cites ways in which the Third World can co-operate for economic development. Concludes that the challenge is three-fold: to the Third World, collective self-reliance and internal social justice; to the industrialised countries, substantial transfer of resources; to the world, new structures to keep everyone alive.

- Presents the findings of a conference to evaluate A.I.D. rural road development work in 8 countries, in order to improve future projects through policy changes. Defines rural roads and classifies them functionally as local, collector and arterial. Says project effectiveness is judged by length of road constructed, cost and time required, the maintenance and construction carried out after AID completes its work. Project impact is measured by increase in agricultural income and production, improved quality of life resulting from the new roads. Finds effectiveness not entirely satisfactory; impact more than satisfactory. Many benefits were cited by rural dwellers. However women benefited more than men but in Africa better roads accelerated the migration of men thus increasing the hardships of women. Economic constraints in Jamaica during this period reduced both effectiveness and impact. Major recommendations are: better preparation of project teams to ensure improved project design, project appraisal, a more realistic cost analysis and time frame, priority to be given to roads where meaningful impact is likely; choosing roads with little negative environmental effect. Includes cost of rural roads completed or committed 1972-1982, glossary and appendices.

- Contains the findings of an A.ID. team which examined a politically designed road improvement programme to see if it were justified. The project, conceived in 1970 and executed 1972-6, consisted of upgrading 181 miles of rural roads to reduce rural/urban migration and urban crime and to increase tourism. Design changes from gravel to asphalt and feasibility studies emphasising new cultivation instead of measuring potential savings in operational costs of vehicles, had an effect on the plan. Very few benefits accrued from the project. There was little new employment and not much social impact. Notes that economic development correlates not with road improvement but with other inputs; nor are urban crime increase and low tourist returns the concomitants of rural/urban migration. Maintenance and supervision were poor. Concludes that the project was ill-conceived and unjustified, better project appraisal and interim evaluation could have saved the situation. The cost to Americans was US$0.05 per capita of which US$0.02 is to be repaid against US$4.50 to Jamaicans, with $5.00 more plus interest to be repaid.

Summarises Gardner's research on the role of motivation in the acquisition of and proficiency in a foreign language. Looks at the findings of other researchers. Explains field dependence/independence. Discusses theories on "dogmatism" and its assumptions. Examines the use of the skills acquired or for cultural exchange (integrative goals). Uses a sample of 170 students learning French in Jamaica secondary schools. Tests hypotheses regarding the performance of field dependent/independent students, high dogmatic/low dogmatic students vis-a-vis instrumental and integrative orientation. Finds that field dependent students scored higher on the instrumental orientation than field independent students. Observes significant interaction effects on two of the dependent variables. Concludes that teaching techniques could be modified for the personality types discussed. Invites further research into the problem.

- The report concludes that there is a need for effective management systems in agriculture, in addition research priorities should be established due to high financial costs. Secondly research should be informed by the needs and capabilities of the former and should be oriented towards the development of agriculture. Research and Development efforts should thus be considered along four conceptual dimensions; the socio-economic, infrastructural development and management; arable farming, forestry, livestock and fishing and finally industrialization of agriculture. Another major conclusion was the need for the development of a priority ranking for crop research together with institutional development and rationalisation of existing institutions, like the Caribbean Agricultural Research Development Institute to facilitate research into areas such as Agricultural Engineering, Post Harvest, Handling, Accounts, Economics and Extension Services. The Faculty of Agriculture U.W.I. St. Augustine was expected to continue as the centre and an associated idea was the introduction of contract research. CARDI is expected to evolve into the research centre for the Less Developed Countries and the need for support from and integration with other sociotechnical systems was also identified. The appendices include the seminar paper 'A survey of agricultural research in Trinidad and Tobago 1976-79' and the list of questions prepared to structure the discussion.

■ Study by UNESCO consultant to advise on the development of an agricultural information network in Guyana and the establishment of an agricultural documentation centre, which provides for the university community, policy makers and agricultural officers and practitioners. Data and information on a national information policy, agricultural research, production of agricultural documents and documentary resources are gathered by means of a survey and numerous interviews. Proposals are made for two consecutive stages of project implementation. In the initial phase at least eight libraries should be upgraded to serve as a network base. Further priorities are the establishment of a coordinating centre, promotional activities, training programmes for librarians and technical assistance to the cooperating libraries. At the end of the 24 month project the documentation and information unit is expected to be fully established. The annex lists information producers and libraries.

- Lists references on the Guianas-Brazil shrimp fishery which covers the fishing grounds off the coasts of eastern Venezuela, Guyana, Suriname, French Guiana and northern Brazil. Most references are from published fishery and scientific literature, but some unpublished reports are included. Many references with information on ecology, climate, hydrology, geological oceanography, and fauna other than shrimp were included in the list and will be of value to scientists and other interested parties concerned with the ecology of the shrimp fishing grounds of northeastern South America. Also covered by the bibliography are references dealing with small shrimp primarily found in the shallow coastal waters and in the brackish waters of estuaries. General references on the biology and taxonomy of penaeid shrimp are not included. The references are listed alphabetically in author order with a list of WECAF reports appearing at the end.

Classifies establishments according to the International Standard Industrial Classification (ISIC) scheme, defining establishment as "the economic unit which engages, under a single ownership or control that is under a single legal entity, in one or predominantly one kind of economic activity." The approach taken has been to include own-account workers also, mainly because no employment statistics are available and the borderline between the formal sector activities and the informal sector and own-account workers is not always clear. Thus 543 establishments are classified within the following major divisions: agriculture, hunting, forestry and fishing; mining and quarrying; manufacturing; electricity, gas, and water; construction; wholesale and retail trade and restaurants and hotels; transport, storage and communication; financing, insurance, real estate and business services; and community social and personal services.

Se actualizan y analizan algunas cuestiones relacionadas con la evaluación de las nuevas inversiones en las distintas etapas del proceso inversionista. Se plantea que la evaluación de los estudios de preinversion de los proyectos industriales por etapa se aplique en Cuba, de forma experimental, desde finales de la década de 1960 hasta 1977 en algunos ministerios y ramas de la industria basica del país. Además se dice que el método de análisis económico por etapas de cada futura inversión en la industria requiere de la integración de un grupo de técnicos de distintas especialidades, especialmente digerentes y economistas, con conocimiento de la rama, con el objetivo de que elaboren analices y orienten los estudios parciales (técnicos, económicos y financieros) que sean necesarios para cada nueva inversión o proyecto. Se estudian las cinco etapas básicas para la mayoría de los proyectos típicos de los países socialistas desarrollados, las cuales se deben considerar como mínimas para la mayoría de las nuevas inversiones básicas que se ejecutan en la industria.

Discusses the various ways of forecasting labour force requirements. Lists the decisions dependent on this information and shows the kinds of projection required. Details the methods for making projections of demand. Distinguishes between demands for the public and private sectors. Shows that considering the factors affecting demand and estimating how they may operate in the future, is the best method if the basic information and statistics are available. Points out that projections for supply are relevant to considerations of demand. Summarises the data needed for carrying out the exercise successfully. Emphasises that the project should be satisfactorily funded so that it can be on-going. Indicates that co-operation of several support agencies will be needed for effectiveness.

■ Evaluates the balance of payments problems and the IMF solution. Shows that these problems existed before the 1950's but worsened when they were aggravated by rising unemployment, falling GDP and budgetary problems. Sketches the IMF programme offered as a solution. Examines the balance of payments situation critically. Demonstrates that domestic and international factors must be considered in trying to solve the problems. Sees faulty diagnosis as causing the IMF programme to fail. Proposes a model, set in a neo-classical framework. Says it assumes an underdeveloped export-propelled dependent economy passively incorporated into international capitalism. Assumes too, that balance of payments help to determine money supply which determines aggregate demand. Believes that, if international prices are paid and the international monetary system operates under fixed exchange rates this model will lead to a stable equilibrium. Concludes that the IMF programme needs further study. Suggests that the question to be considered is how the balance of payments impinge on the economy, not vice versa.

models are extremely unrealistic. Gives as the reasons: (1) this research effort is an attempt to understand the effects of the economic structure on the various objectives which differ from other practical planning models which may mobilise the same technique, but will use several exogenous constraints together with bounds on specific variables to achieve plausible trajectories whose theoretical foundations become somewhat blurred in the process (2) economies like Jamaica derive their growth paths from many exogenously determined parameters which are not easy to incorporate coherently in these early attempts at modelling such economies.

- Gives information on the collection of manpower data in Suriname and outlines the methodology used by the Planbureau for long-term manpower planning. The view is advanced that as long as the State does not control both the demand and supply of labour, there will always be inequality between the demand and supply of labour. This is borne out by the experience of the Planbureau where the inability to determine future supply and demand for labour in detail, results from the inability to control the employment effect of investment.

Oriention in the context of a special library is seen as those activities aimed at ensuring that users and potential users remain orientated toward the library as a primary source of meeting information needs. This is a continuous process. The paper examines the factors to be considered when formulating orientation and continuing library awareness programmes, and identifies the knowledge of users, time factor and the users need for graphical stimulation as major in building orientation programmes. Specific techniques, -library tours, tape/slide programmes, guides, and signs, notice boards, handbooks and other printed aids- are reviewed in detail stressing that no one technique could comprise an effective orientation programme, it should comprise several developed and implemented in conjunction with each other and with other user education programmes.
